General Election Called in Canada On War Conduct

Policy Is Defended By Mackenzie King In Commons; Vote Is Set for March

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, Jan. 25.—Under attack for alleged failure to push Canada's share of the empire war effort, the government of W. L. Mackenzie King decided today to call a quick general election and proclaimed the dissolution of Parliament at the end of a one day session.

Parliament was dissolved at 7:07 p. m. (Eastern standard time), a few hours after the election decision was announced in the traditional speech from the throne. The date for the election will be set shortly. Mackenzie King indicated it should be over before the end of March, one reason being the possibility of "heavy fighting" on the Western Front by spring.

The premier laid the greatest stress on efforts of his political opponents to "create distrust of our patriotic effort." In support of his decision to hold a wartime election he cited the example of Abraham Lincoln.

Trusts the People

"As I was prepared to trust the people to decide on the question of peace or war, so I am prepared to trust the people to decide what government is to carry on the war," he told the legislators.

No sooner had the prime minister spoken than Dr. R. J. Manion, the conservative leader, renewed the attack on the government's war activities.

"The government has handled the war effort in a most disgraceful manner," said Dr. Manion. "It should have been prepared years ago for a war which had appeared inevitable."

Bad Equipment Charged

He charged the government has called up one division without clothes, boots or equipment, and that one British Columbia unit had crossed the nation in winter wearing cotton uniforms and underwear. Many of the men wound up in the hospital, Manion added.

Dr. Manion also charged it was "unscrupulous politics" to call Parliament together only to announce an election and try for a "snap decision" from the people.

The dissolution, coming as it did four hours after the eighteenth Parliament had opened its sixth session only to hear there would be a general election, was without precedent in Canadian history. Lord Tweedsmuir, the governor general, signed the dissolution order.

Blames Opponents

Mackenzie King made no bones about blaming his position on "political opponents who are seeking to undermine every effort that is put forward by this administration."

He declared the voting should be over before the end of March, at least three months earlier than is usual.

"My purpose is to allow the people of this country to say whom they want to administer the country," he said.

The premier said his opponents, including Provincial Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario and Conservative opposition leaders, already had started the campaign and that the conservative slogan was "King must go."

"I am quite prepared to accept that challenge and go to the people," he said.

Sure People Approve

Citing the resolution which Hepburn propelled through the Ontario provincial legislature last week condemning "so little" war effort by the Dominion government, Mackenzie King declared:

"I believe the people approve both of the manner in which the government has undertaken its duties and the way in which it has discharged them."

Hepburn has conducted a series

Berlin, Jan. 25.—The German supreme command announced today that the pocket battleship Deutschland, sister ship of the ill-fated Admiral Graf Spee, had broken through the British blockade and had safely returned home after being out on the Atlantic raiding Allied merchant shipping since the outbreak of war.

Simultaneously came reports that Germany was speeding construction of her undersea fleet to cope with the increasing threat of the British blockade.

[The Associated Press reported it had learned from an excellently informed source that Germany's submarine construction program has reached the stage of one built every day. This source said the first group of submarines built under the Nazi high-pressure program now is completed. About four weeks' training, it was said, will be required for officers and crew before placing them on regular duty. Thereafter, the dispatch indicated, Germany's

Doctor Says Kiss Generates Heat And Kills Germs

Berkeley, Calif., Jan. 25 (AP).—University of California health officers decreed a 60-day ban on kissing after 18 students were stricken with mild cases of influenza. This, Dr. S. L. Katzoff said today, was a mistake.

"A good, healthy kiss never spread any germs," said Dr. Katzoff, medical director and psychiatrist of the San Francisco Institute of Human Relations. "A genuine kiss generates so much heat it destroys germs. If anything, the university ought to advocate more kissing."

2 Die, 2 Hurt As D. C. Area Gets Colder

Dip to 10 Forecast; Proofreader Killed By Exposure; Police Officer Collapses

Cold and storms were blamed for two fatalities and two injuries in the District area and a death in nearby Maryland last night. They also brought a threat of severe hardship to Virginia and Maryland tidewater communities.

The United States forecaster for Washington dug back through his records for 22 years before finding a January as cold as this and then announced the mercury would drop to 10 above by dawn today. The weather, he said, would be fair today and tomorrow.

Dead in the District as result of the cold were:

James F. Rooney, 63, proofreader, 35 Sherman circle northwest.

Brough Carter, 65, colored, 23 Virginia avenue southwest.

In the bitter cold of early morning, Rooney collapsed from a heart attack and died, police said, before he was discovered in the 800 block of Crittenden street northwest. He toppled over on his way home about midnight. He was rushed to Freedmen's Hospital and pronounced dead at 7:30 a. m.

Found in Unheated Room

Carter was found unconscious in an unheated room at the Virginia avenue address by a nephew, Herman Benson. The Casualty Hospital ambulance physician who pronounced him dead a few minutes later gave exposure as the probable cause.

The Maryland death was Charles S. Blumenhauer, 44, Frederick police lieutenant. He died of a heart attack while shovelling snow from his sidewalk.

James Denado, 37, of 6315 Ninth street northwest, slipped on the ice in the 800 block of Pennsylvania avenue. He was found to have suffered a fractured ankle when taken to Emergency Hospital.

Prudence Bonds, colored, 38, of 5 Naylors court, was found on Seven Locks road near Bradley boulevard in Montgomery County, Md., last night, unable to walk. Dr. E. G. Bauerfeld, at Bethesda, said both legs appeared to be frozen and the man was suffering from exposure. Bonds told police he had lost his way and had been in the snow 3½ hours.

Chincoteague Isolated

Chesapeake Bay and seashore communities in Maryland and Virginia, meanwhile, looked to the Coast Guard and operators of private landing fields on the mainland to keep them supplied with food and medicine.

Chincoteague Island in the Atlantic was isolated when heavy pounding ice floes carried away a 200-foot section of a long bridge, its only connection with the Accomac, Va., mainland. The islanders' small boats were locked in frozen harbors, but food supplies were believed enough to last several days.

The problem of feeding the island's half-million chickens, which constitute one of its major industries, however, was causing much concern.

A Coast Guard cutter, loaded with food supplies, battering its way to Smith Island in the Chesapeake after a radio appeal from residents, was forced back by heavy ice and motor trouble. A ship reached nearby Tangier Island with food for several days, but Fred Ennis, Salisbury aviator, arranged for skis to be flown from Baltimore so

It was the President's show last night at Fort Myer, Va.—his Birthday Horse Show—and he, as well as the 1,700 members of the audience, enjoyed every minute of it, from the thrilling fanfare of bugles at the beginning to the rumbling roar of the hair-raising artillery exhibition which climaxed the performance.

More of a military performance all the way through was last night's event, in contrast to the first show, Wednesday evening, which featured a cowboy exhibition. Last evening the only cowboy in the place was Bill Boyd, the Wild West movie star, and he and his wife (the former Grace Bradley of movie fame) sat in the President's box in full

All-Day Attack Fails to Break Finnish Trap

Russians Vainly Batter At Foe's Lines to Free Encircled Divisions

By Wade Werner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, Jan. 25.—Assaults by Russian armies, all day and all night across the blood-stained snows and frozen lakes on the flank of the Mannerheim Line, were reported by Finnish military authorities tonight to have failed to relieve large Russian forces trapped and harassed from every side near Kitela.

These forces are almost cut off from communication with their main armies, and the impression grew in Helsinki that Finnish strategists are on the verge of another coup such as the one which brought destruction to two Russian divisions on the Salla front.

Even the reported importation of fighters from the Asiatic Soviet snowlands—in the hope of achieving a great victory by February 23, twenty-second anniversary of the establishment of the Red army, failed to crack the Finnish defenses in the furiously contested sector north of Lake Ladoga, or to bring help to the marooned divisions.

Additional hundreds of Red army troops were left dead on the battlefields northeast of Lake Ladoga, official reports said.

After an all-day battle in the Aittojoki sector, the Russians spent all night sending wave after wave of troops against Finnish lines at

Senate Adds $251,822,644 For Defense

Cuts by Committee Upheld, Puerto Rican Arms Depot Vetoed

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday voted an additional $251,822,664 for emergency defense needs during the current year, providing for an expansion of the armed services and neutrality enforcement measures ordered because of the European war.

Reductions totaling $12,788,664 made by the Senate Appropriations Committee were approved without change on the floor and the measure was sent back to the House without a record vote. Earlier, by a tally of 45 to 9, the Senate indorsed its committee's disapproval of $200,000 for purchase of land for an ammunition depot in Puerto Rico.

In other defense developments:

Secretary Morgenthau said the Nation's airplane engine production must be increased to meet potential demands of the Army and Navy, domestic civil needs and foreign purchasers.

The House passed an urgent deficiency bill providing $29,000,000 for armor and ammunition for new warships.

Naval officials told the House Naval Committee that even if the proposed 25 per cent fleet expansion program is cut to a 10 per cent enlargement, 82 combatant ships can be laid down in the

Pacifists Urge Roosevelt To Call Peace Conference

Cause and Cure of War Session Asks President to Convoke Neutrals; Resolution Is Debated Six Hours

President Roosevelt should be asked to call "as quickly as possible" a conference of neutral nations to mediate between belligerents, the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War voted yesterday after six hours' spirited debate.

"We support the declared position of the President to keep the United States out of war," the conference went on record.

The session, composed of representatives of 11 leading feminist organizations with a total membership of upward of 5,000,000, also heard a proposal by Mrs. May Bell Harper, of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, of New Haven, Conn., to form an international police force by merging the air forces of Kellog Pact signatories.

Mrs. Ammu Swaninadhan, member of the Madras, India, city council and of the all-Indian women's conference, stressed the value of non-violent resistance to war as the only means for attaining and preserving peace.

"We have found that the western method of using war to stop war does not work," she told the 500 delegates. "It is time you listened to a message from the east and stop war by nonviolent resistance to conquest."

Ascertaining the "root causes of war" and providing machinery for removing the conditions leading to war is the opportunity of the present day, Dr. David Bryn-Jones, director of the Kellogg Foundation of Carleton College, asserted.

Peace and stability rest upon the economic prosperity and well-being of all peoples, he said.

"People want life, but they also want to live it in their own way," he continued.

"The only way to assure achievement of this goal is to attempt to bring about prosperity which is the basis of stability."

Dr. Bryn-Jones asserted the "signs of the times show we need an organization more ambitious than the League of Nations, which will strike at the root causes of conflict, not attempt to mediate disputes which have already gone far beyond control."

Although unwilling to "blueprint" the form of organization needed, he remarked the "direction we should go appears to be toward some form of economic confederation."

At the conclusion of the present European conflict, he continued, the world will have another opportunity

U-Boats Reported Stalking Caribbean Shipping Routes

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 25.—A German submarine thrust against British "lifelines" in the West Indies—within the Pan-American neutrality zone—was predicted tonight in reliable maritime quarters.

These sources said that three Nazi U-boats, tendered by a German passenger liner, had run the British blockade, crossed the Atlantic and were now prowling in the vicinity of Port of Spain, Trinidad, a tourist resort in the British West Indies.

The plan, according to these observers, called for a lightning blow against British and French ships carrying grain and other foods and fuel oil to England.

Trinidad is near the Island of Aruba, location of a huge Standard Oil refinery off the Venezuelan coast, and near other vital oil ports and tourist pleasure spots.

Effective U-boat warfare in this area would deal a harassing blow to England and France. It is also near the sea lanes leading to the Panama Canal.

British and American authorities were reported as being fully aware of at least some details of the Nazi project, and it was said that British warships have been making drastic efforts to locate the undersea raiders.

Under the described plan the U-boats would meet several German merchantmen which recently sailed from South American ports for secret rendezvous to feed and fuel the long-range fighting ships.

Authorities also said that three ships of a Latin-American nation, long suspected of having supplied the scuttled German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee with oil and food, had been out of port for several days.

Britain's refusal to recognize the 300-mile neutrality belt set up by the Americas was believed to have

Compromise In Bill Keeps Dr. Ruhland

Altered Seal Plan Installs Service Man When Present Health Chief Is Ready to Quit

The District Commissioners, it was learned yesterday, have worked out a compromise plan which they hope will still the controversy aroused by their efforts to give the city a new chief of the health department.

Under the compromise, which will be incoroporated in the Seal plan for reorganizing the city's government, Dr. George C. Ruhland would not be ousted.

Looking beyond Dr. Ruhland, however, and to the day when there will be a "vacancy" in the post of District health officer, the Commissioners provide that the President be authorized to appoint a medical officer from the Army, Navy or United States Public Health Service.

Under the original Seal plan, the President would be authorized to designate a man from the Public Health Service 30 days after Congress approved the reorganization bill. This was regarded as an effort to oust Dr. Ruhland.

Now, in their latest plan, the Commissioners say, in effect, that Dr. Ruhland can continue as District health officer as long as he chooses, but that thereafter the health officer will be a physician from the Army, Navy or Public Health Service.

Dr. Ruhland, who came here in 1935 after serving as health officer in Syracuse, N. Y., receives a salary of $8,500 a year.

Controversy Was Bitter

Under the compromise plan, the successor to Dr. Ruhland would occupy a status comparable to that of the Engineer Commissioner. He would be detailed to the District, just as the Engineer Commissioner is detailed by the War Department, and he would not lose his status in the service after his tour of duty had been completed. From the city he would receive only the difference between his Federal pay and the amount of the health officer's pay.

The proposal which would have ousted Dr. Ruhland stirred up a bitter controversy. Protests were voiced by civic groups, the District Medical Society and members of Congress.

At one time, it was suggested that President Roosevelt was author of the ouster plan. However, the President vigorously denied this. He said that he would like to see the Commissioners empowered with authority to get the best available health officer, whether they found him in private practice, in a State health agency or in the Army, Navy or Public Health Service.

It was pointed out the Commissioners now have the power to appoint "the best available man" for the job, but they could not appoint a medical officer from the Federal services unless that person resigned his post. The latest move is interpreted as a means of obtaining a service man in the future to be the District's health officer.

Seal to Draft Revision

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, who received his instructions from the Commissioners, said he would draft the revision and then take the matter up with the other members of the "Kitchen Cabinet." From here the new plan will be sent to the Budget Bureau, where the Seal plan is now receiving the "once over."

At present the District employs several former Army officers who gave up their status in order to receive permanent jobs with the municipal government.

Red Flag Unfurls Over Lewis Speaking at Mine Convention

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 25.—An uproar disrupted the United Mine Workers' convention today when someone—now sought by police—unfurled a huge red flag above John L. Lewis in the midst of a speech.

Scores of startled delegates in the crowd of 5,000 jumped to their feet, shouting:

"Tear it down."

A squad of men dashed into the loft above the stage from which the flag was lowered and removed the banner while delegates milled about the convention floor muttering protests.

The incident occurred in the midst of a Nation-wide broadcast commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the union's founding.

Lewis, president of the U. M. W., never saw the flag and calmly finished his speech despite a growing confusion. Then, learning the cause of the disturbance, he ordered delegates to their seats and said:

"It appears that someone has tried to perpetrate a most cowardly, reprehensible and dastardly trick. No one can regret this more than a delegate of the United Mine Workers.

"I was unable to see, but I was told it was a Communist flag."

"There are no Communists in the United Mine Workers of America," he almost shouted, and the delegates arose and cheered.

Lewis explained the U. M. W. constitution prohibited a Communist from belonging to the organization and asked that police investigate and enforce the law." A squad of police began an inquiry.

He then had a band play "America" as the audience sang.

Embargo Japan, Senators Urge as Treaty Expires

Tokyo Disquieted But Still Expects Way to Be Found To Continue Trade

By International News Service

Tokyo (Friday), Jan. 26.—Expiration today of the 28-year-old Japanese-American commercial treatry plunged Japan into one of the most critical diplomatic and economic periods of her modern history.

Embroiled in multiplying difficulties with both the United States and Great Britain, Japan admitted her relations with America had been rendered "unstable," with Washington now in a legal position to curtail or cut off the vital American imports Japan needs for successful prosecution of her war in China.

Despite this danger, the Japanese government made it plain it does not intend to abandon its program of creating a Japanese-dominated central government in China and erecting the "new order in East Asia." It was because pursuit of this policy was deemed in Washington to be abridging American interests in China that the 1911 Japanese-American pact was denounced last July 26.

Expect New Pact

The Japanese government signalized expiration of the treaty, in accordance with its six-month provision, by issuing a statement this morning, declaring Japan does not intend to abolish the "just and reasonable" interests of Occidental powers in China. Hope was expressed that a new treaty would soon supplant the one abrogated and it was pointed out Japanese-American trade intercourse continues for the time being without treaty regulation.

Simultaneously, tension between Japan and Great Britain mounted to new heights after a patriotic Japanese crowd smashed the windows of the British consulate-general in Tokyo while the Japanese foreign office and the British embassy traded fresh verbal outbursts over the Asama Maru incident.

U. S. 'Watchdog' for British

The influential newspaper Asahi Shimbun said that the attitude of the United States emboldened the British navy to act as it did when a British cruiser last Sunday stopped the liner Asama Maru and forcibly removed 21 German passengers as prisoners of war. Asahi charged that the United States was "taking on for itself the role of watchdog for British interests in the Far East."

Walter Johnson Now Is Pitching For House Seat

The good right arm of Walter Perry Johnson, the Big Train, yesterday heaved his farmer's hat into the ring for the Republican nomination for Congress from the Sixth Maryland District.

If successful in the primaries, he would oppose the incumbent, William Devereux Byron, Democrat. The district embraces Allegany, Frederick, Montgomery and Washington counties, with a population, in 1930, of 268,534.

He will open campaign headquarters at an early date in Rockville.

Pact Void Today; Schwellenbach Asks U. S. Now 'Get Out' of War Against China

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Immediate embargo on American war materials for Japan was called for on Capitol Hill last night as the 28-year-old commercial treaty between the two countries entered its last day of life, doomed by United States abrogation.

The abrogation, itself, involving six months' notice which this country gave last July 26, was prompted, it is generally conceded, by desire to eliminate its clause specifically forbidding the type of embargo widely proposed here.

As the increasing strain on relations between the two governments reached a climax in wiping out of the treaty, Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, declared:

"The lapse of the treaty now gives us an opportunity to comply with the wishes of 75 per cent of our people by getting out of the Chinese-Japanese war."

Schwellenbach is author of a resolution now before the Foreign Relations Committee providing a compulsory embargo on all American materials on which the Japanese army has relied in prosecution of its undeclared war on China.

To Be Weighed Wednesday

The question of an embargo will be the first matter considered when the committee meets next Wednesday, members said yesterday. It is planned for Secretary of State Hull to appear before the committee on the subject if his present illness permits.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, a committee member, expressed confidence that some action would be taken to curb the supplying of American materials needed for the invasion of China.

"I feel certain," he said, "that some legislation will be passed by this Congress dealing with the question." While in doubt as to how far the Congress might go, he expressed the opinion that at least a stoppage of strategic materials would be favored.

Senator Pittman, of Nevada, committee chairman, is in Idaho for the funeral of Senator Borah, but is represented as feeling that an embargo should be voted.

Doubts Reprisals' Effectiveness

In reply to fears that Japan would be goaded into retaliation of some sort against Americans, he recently expressed the view that Japan would not be in a position to retaliate. He said this country could start by embargoing war materials and if Tokyo took any reprisals the embargo could be extended to other materials critically needed in the Japanese economy.

Supporting this view, the Commerce Department last night made public a study showing the important part commerce with America plays in Japan's life. The report said that in 1938 and the first ten months of 1939, the United States supplied nearly 44 per cent of Japan's imports from foreign currency countries, and bought from 27.9 to 33.7 per cent of her exports to those areas.

"No other foreign currency country," it said, "contributes anything like the share of the United States in Japan's foreign trade."

The report said it was "obvious" that her exports to this country "constitute an important source of the foreign exchange which Japan requires to purchase the raw materials utilized in her industries."

Foreign exchange countries are

Housing Sought For Delegates

The American Youth Congress yesterday asked Washingtonians who can give lodging to the National Citizenship Institute delegates here February 9 to 12 to call the American Youth Congress office at National 6136. The office is at 1410 H street northwest.

On Monday, Mrs. Roosevelt requested cooperation be given the Washington Youth Council in its efforts to obtain free housing.

The young people will come here to learn about the Government and inform it of their needs, the announcement said, adding: "But these young Americans need your aid. Many of them do not have enough funds to finance both their transportation and their living expenses while here. They must depend in part upon the hospitality of the Washington friends of the American Youth Congress."

Cabinet Chiefs Urge 'Draft' For Roosevelt

Ickes Hopes Lewis Is Better Union Leader Than Prognosticator

The "draft Roosevelt" campaign moved into the open again yesterday, as a chorus of inner circle protests followed C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis' forecast of "ignominious" defeat in any third-term attempt.

At the Columbus, Ohio, convention of the United Mine Workers, 47 resolutions supporting a third-term for the President came in the wake of the Lewis sally.

In Washington, a round of political conferences developed at the White House, but out of these came no word of the President's intentions.

Miss Perkins Breaks Silence

Secretary of Interior Ickes reiterated assertions that the President should and could be reelected, injecting a "hope" that "Lewis is a better union leader than he is a political prognosticator."

At the Labor Department, Secretary Perkins touched on the issue for the first time, asserting:

"I am not a political prognosticator, but I have an idea that if the President runs again he would be reelected."

"Is that a woman's intuition?" asked a reporter.

"No, it's not that important," said Miss Perkins. "It's just a hunch."

Answering Lewis' assertion that this Administration has not kept faith with labor, Secertary Perkins said the whole program of relief, wages and hours and collective bargaining was designed "with the objective of doing a kind of simple justice to wage earners without any expectation of getting their vote or their support."

Donahey Sees President

Among White House callers was Guy T. Helvering, Internal Revenue Commission. Back from the Midwest, Helvering told the President that Kansas sentiment was "very strong" for a third term. He said Roosevelt could carry that section "with a larger vote than ever before." The President declined his invitation to attend a Washington Birthday dinner of Kansas Democrats at Topeka on February 22.

Also calling on the President by invitation was Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, who has been silent on his "favorite-son" plans since Ohio's Democratic State chairman said the Ohio delegation would be nominally for Donahey, but would vote for the President.

Donahey has not said whether he would run or how he stands on a third term. Garner and McNutt forces are awaiting his decision. Their names may be entered in the Ohio race if Donahey fails to run.

Donahey was reticent with reporters, saying:

"I talked to the President a few minutes on the Ohio situation and that is all."

High on the White House calling list was Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, reported to be favored by Lewis for the Presidency.

Wheeler Discusses Bills

Wheeler, who, on Wednesday, remarked it would be difficult for the Democrats to win again with Roosevelt, yesterday told reporters: "The President can have the Democratic nomination this year if he wants it." He recently said the President could "veto" if he chose any Democratic candidate put up not to his liking.

The Montanan said "no politics" were discussed with the President. He said he discussed only legislation.

Although the 47 third term resolutions offered at the United Mine Workers convention were reported prepared before Lewis struck out at a third term, they were introduced nonetheless, in the face of the C. I. O. chief's statement. Other resolutions were offered against use of mine worker funds in political campaigns. Lewis put up $500,000 for the 1936 Democratic campaign.

Tax on Receivers Argued in Court

The immunity of receivers of closed national banks from paying the business privilege tax imposed here from 1936 to 1938 was disputed before Justice F. Dickinson Letts in the District Court yesterday.

Justus S. Wardell, receiver of the District National Bank, which closed in 1933, claimed immunity, as a Federal officer, in a test suit brought by the District. Receivers of nine national banks here will be affected by the decision. They have been assessed about $5,000 in taxes.

Should the receivers be held liable for the privilege tax, they might also be compelled to pay income and personal property taxes on the assets under their control.

Justice Letts took the case under advisement.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Mrs. William E. Borah (with veil) was supported by Mrs. C. C. Anderson and another friend as she attended final rites for her husband yesterday in Boise

Twenty Congressmen Among 7,000 Mourners At Grave; Funeral Train Halted at Many Towns So Citizens Can Do Him Homage

Boise, Idaho, Jan. 25.—United States Senator William Edgar Borah tonight lay in a grave on Morris Hill, overlooking Boise Valley, after simple yet impressive funeral ceremonies viewed by 7,000 persons.

The Morris Hill services, conducted by Borah's old friend, Dean Frank Rhea, of the Boise Episcopal Church, were held after the statesman's body had lain in state at the State Capitol for five hours.

The illustrious "Lion of Idaho" came home to his beloved adopted State, for the last time after 33 years outstanding service at Washington, aboard a black-draped funeral train which arrived in the gray haze of a heavy snowstorm.

Despite the heavy snow, hats were removed by the large crowd at the depot and National Guardsmen stood at attention while the train slowly entered Boise and came to a stop, ending a sorrowful trip from Washington.

Chimes in the depot steeple tolled out a muffled requiem while the body was removed from a special car by six high military officials.

Senator D. Worth Clark and Representative Henry Dworshak, both of Idaho, stood as guards of honor over the casket, as the train stopped at Idaho towns before reaching Boise.

At each depot, between Montpelier and Boise, crowds assembled to meet the train, and at each station the car bearing Borah's body was opened and a number of formal offerings were presented by various city officials and others.

Borah's admirers passed silently in single file and with hats removed before the open door to view the casket and pay their last respects.

Upon arrival of the train at Boise, Mrs. Mary Borah, the Senator's wife, slipped through the crowd and was taken to the home of her close friends, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Anderson. She showed the strain of her grief and the long cross-country trip.

The 20 members of Congress who accompanied the body from Washington joined the funeral procession down Depot Hill to the Capitol, and later to Morris Hill. Hundreds of automobiles followed the funeral procession, their lights dimmed and motors muffled as the snow continued falling on Boise, a city of mourners.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt Popular With 6 Out of 10 Voters, but Many Oppose Third Term

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 25.—As the last year of his second term in office begins this week, Franklin D. Roosevelt continues to hold popular support as President among a large majority of his fellow countrymen in a national Institute survey. More than six voters in every ten polled say they think he has done a good job in office, and his popularity index is as great today as when he was elected in 1936.

DR. GALLUP

This fact does not mean, however, that the majority of voters indorse the idea of a third term, or that his popularity would continue at the same level in case he decided to run for a third term. The results of the poll, taken in conjunction with Institute studies on the third-term issue itself, serve to emphasize an apparent phenomenon of American politics —that it is possible for a President to be highly popular in office right up to the final year of his second term and still have no assurance that a majority would vote for him for a third term.

The President's popularity in office has been measured from month to month since 1934 by Nation-wide Institute surveys in which this question is asked:

"In general, do you approve or disapprove today of Roosevelt as President?"

	Approve	Disapprove
This Month	63.5%	36.5%
Last Month	63.5	36.5

In a second series of surveys the Institute keeps a continuous index of sentiment on a third term for Roosevelt. In making this index, the Institute puts the following issue to voters:

"If President Roosevelt runs for a third term will you vote for him?"

The results show that many persons who approve of the President at this point in his second term say they would not be willing to vote for him for a third term. The actual results in the last third-term survey, released January 12, were:

Would Vote for Roosevelt For Third Term	46%
Would Vote Against	54

These figures do not, however, indicate the effect which nomination of the G. O. P. candidate may have on third-term sentiment. If the Republicans picked an unpopular candidate and conducted a blundering campaign, the number of persons willing to break precedent and vote for a Roosevelt third term might be considerably higher than that shown today. If, on the other hand, a strong G.O.P. candidate entered the field against Roosevelt third-term sentiment might decline sharply.

30% of British Feel War Will Last 3 Years

Nearly one-third of voters polled in England by the British Institute of Public Opinion say they think the war with Germany will last for another three years or more.

An equal number say they think it will continue for only one year or less. The poll, conducted throughout England by a staff of specially trained interviewers, asked voters:

"How long do you think the war will continue from now?"

The guesses, in order of frequency, were as follows:

One year or less	30%
1 to 2 years	25
3 years or more	30
No opinion	15

Senate, House Uphold Cuts of $33,314,000

Committees Sustained On Treasury-Postoffice And 2 Deficiency Bills

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

Congressional Appropriations committees yesterday were sustained in cuts down the line in three appropriation bills as House and Senate rang up a $33,314,000 saving in a fruitful bipartisan economy drive.

Leaders predicted new taxes and a debt limit increase may be avoided if the budget-slashing pace is maintained.

Chief threat to the campaign to shear expenditures short of the $45,000,000,000 legal debt limit was the $677,000,000 Agriculture Department bill due for report to the House on Tuesday.

A House subcommittee has further pruned the farm bill, and refused to add $225,000,000 in unbudgeted parity payments, but the bill risks a farm bloc attempt on the floor to raise budget totals.

Upholding committees on all salient cuts:

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate a $1,032,154,000 Treasury-Postoffice bill, reduced $11,491,000 under the President's estimates.

The Senate passed and returned to the House a $251,822,588 national defense deficiency bill, holding $20,176,935 in budget reductions.

The House passed the $58,502,000 urgent deficiency bill, trimmed $1,322,400.

Net result of the economy campaign as of yesterday was an aggregate of $126,000,000 shorn from four appropriation bills, including the $95,000,000 previously scaled by the House from the independent offices measure.

But all of these still faced a rocky road to final passage. Administration agencies themselves took the lead in a fight to put back at least part of the independent office bill savings.

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday heard the first of three White House agencies completely deprived of funds—the National Resources Planning Board. Spokesmen for the other two, the Office of Government Reports and the Council of Personnel Administration, will appeal to the committee today. The Maritime Commission, hardest hit of the independent agencies, also will seek more liberal Senate treatment.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said the economy record gave him reason to hope neither new taxes nor an increase in the debt limit will be required. But he said a farm bloc drive for more funds conceivably might wipe out the savings.

Barkley said he was opposed to an increase in the debt limit to $50,000,000,000 "because it might have a bad psychological effect."

Farm Study Urged

The President's budget estimates were $81,000,000 below the existing debt limit provided $460,000,000 in new taxes be enacted. The economy goal is to slash outlays below the need of new taxes.

Chairman Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, of the House Agriculture Appropriations subcommittee, warned yesterday that Congress must seek a permanent legislative solution of the farm problem this session, or else revert to parity subsidies.

He urged Congressional study of all proposed farm plans, ranging from Secretary Wallace's certificate (processing) tax plan to cost of production and loan plans. A bipartisan House farm bloc meanwhile was surveying the field in a series of weekly meetings.

While economy axmen were hopeful of sidetracking any $225,000,000 farm parity amendment in the House, in the Senate Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, will fight to add that amount. The budget slashers feared such an increase would launch a general spending break, with flood control, reclamation and rivers and harbors blocs also clamoring for more funds.

Lone Effort Defeated

Representative Whittington (Democrat), of Mississippi, head of the House flood control bloc, said "at present" he is considering no request for more funds.

House and Senate yesterday recessed until Monday. Only one major effort was made in the Senate to restore $200,000 for purchase in Puerto Rico of land for an Army depot. Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, defended the purchase against charges of excessive land valuation, but the Senate overwhelmingly deleted the item.

Green Urges New NLRB, Same Basic Act

By John B. Oakes

Post Staff Writer

With a bitter accusation of "bias, prejudice and hostility," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday demanded that the National Labor Relations Board undergo "a complete change in personnel."

At the same time, Green told the Smith committee investigating the NLRB that he desired no "fundamental change" in the principles of the Wagner act. The reforms he suggested were directed "wholly to the administration of the act," he declared.

Green charged that the "general policy" of the board is to destroy A. F. of L. union through "outrageous delays" in holding hearings; and he alleged that through these delays the board had "caused strikes" in some cases.

In a wrathful denunciation of the board's decision lumping all Pacific Coast longshoremen's groups in one bargaining unit, Green said the board had "compelled" A. F. L. unions to be represented in collective bargaining by Harry Bridges, C. I. O. leader—"a man that almost all people in America understand and know to be a Communist."

Assails Landis' Ruling

Waxing sarcastic over the decision of Dean James M. Landis, of Harvard Law School, that Bridges was no Communist, Green said that "I think the evidence shows that about all the people in America accept Bridges as a Communist except Dean Landis and Secretary Perkins."

"We don't want to be represented by Communists in collective bargaining," stormed Green. "In this case," he said, "we will never accept the board's ruling as "valid and in accordance with the spirit and letter of the law."

The A. F. L. chieftain told the committee that each of the three members of the NLRB was "out the window so far as I am concerned;" and he added, in response to a query of Committee Counsel Edmund M. Toland, that he thought they had all "disqualified themselves to serve in any judicial position."

The board has endeavored to promote industrial as against craft unionism, Green declared. He added that, in its interpretation of what constitutes the appropriate bargaining unit, the NLRB has "committed all the crimes in the calendar."

Asks 5-Man Board

Green made it clear that a mere change of individual administrators would not satisfy him. Of equal importance, he declared, were the "administrative amendments" he proposed.

These amendments in the Wagner act include enlargement of the board's power to determine the appropriate bargaining unit; permission for Circuit Court review in representation cases; and elimination of delay in the hearings.

But, said Green, "we would endure the troubles and punishment we are now forced to undergo, and maintain the act and even its Administration," rather than see Congress repeal the entire law.

He declared he was "uncompromisingly opposed" to amendments proposed by Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, and the National Association of Manufacturers.

Green charged the board had connived with the C. I. O. in delaying decisions.

In the Consumers Power Co. case, Green alleged that a year's delay in holding an election was a "manipulation" of the board intended "to cause the C. I. O. to win."

In the America-France Line case, the NLRB resorted to "vicious trickery," snapped Green.

After yesterday's testimony, the committee adjourned until Monday when the NLRB is scheduled to begin a presentation of its side of the case. Board Chairman J. Warren Madden is expected to the first witness.

Churchmen Favor Board

Cleveland, Jan. 25 (AP).—The United Christian Council for Democracy heard the National Labor Relations Board criticized and defended today—then unanimously commended the board's personnel.

H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, asserted testimony before the House committee investigating the board showed board members and agents "have made a mockery of American justice."

Prentis' statement, read before the council's annual conference, was in reply to an address Tuesday by Chairman J. Warren Madden of the Labor Board.

The council represents "social action" groups of eight Protestant churches.

The adopted report asserted the Dies committee "violated democratic procedure" in its investigation of un-American activities. It charged the Smith committee, investigating the Labor Board, with the use of "some" similar undemocratic methods.

625,000 Cut Off WPA Still Without Jobs

12.7 Pct. Found Work, Harrington Reports; Many Back on Rolls

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Only 12.7 per cent, or less than 100,000, of the 775,000 Works Projects Administration workers dropped from the rolls in July and August had obtained private employment in November, Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, said yesterday.

These workers were dismissed under the provision of the 1939 relief act which requires separation from the rolls of persons having received work continuously for 18 months.

The tendency of employers to rehire workers whom they had recently dismissed was held responsible for the fact that, even in a time of rising industrial production and employment, so small a proportion of the 18-months WPA workers were absorbed by industry.

Face Hard Competition

Harrington pointed out that an additional 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 unemployed persons were seeking jobs. The dismissed WPA workers, thus, were a small addition to the Nation's labor surplus.

In November, 26.7 per cent of those dismissed had been reassigned to the WPA, or more than twice as many as those obtaining private jobs. An additional 28.4 per cent were on local relief rolls.

By November 24, moreover, 64 per cent of those dropped had been recertified as eligible for WPA employment. This was cited as evidence that "the great majority of the separated workers continued to be in need of assistance."

In order to keep within the $1,500,000,000 appropriation voted by Congress last year, it will be necessary to drop about 700,000 persons from 2,200,000 now on the rolls between now and July 1, he said. The reduction will begin in April.

Further Cut Ahead

The contemplated $1,000,000,000 WPA appropriation for the next fiscal year, he said, will necessitate a cut in the rolls of about one-third. The average number of WPA workers during the year will be about 1,360,000 instead of the 2,000,000 average during the present fiscal year.

The experience with the dismissal of 18-months employes in July and August "certainly" does not argue for a decrease in the WPA appropriation, Harrington remarked.

Figures relating to last summer's dismissals were based on a survey of 138,000 of the dismissed workers in 23 representative cities, including Washington.

Of the 3,188 dropped here, 335, or 10.5 per cent, had obtained private jobs, 26.1 per cent had been reassigned to WPA, 1.8 per cent were on local relief, and 61.6 per cent were still seeking work. Average weekly earnings of those who had obtained jobs was $16.10. Twenty-five per cent were earning less than $10 weekly.

Tells of Privations

The average weekly family income of the 2,356 who had not been reassigned to PWA was $3.32. A little more than 20 per cent reported no income at all. More than 13 per cent, however, were earning in excess of their WPA wage.

Many of those dismissed, he said, were found to be living on credit extended by grocers, begging for left-over or other unsalable food, selling furniture or other personal property to obtain funds, or doubling up with relatives. Children in many cases were kept out of school "for lack of warm clothing, books and pencils, or even adequate food."

Red Flag Lowers As Lewis Speaks

said the flag apparently was placed in the loft last night.

Local newspapers reported they received anonymous telephone calls several hours earlier announcing that "something big" would happen at the convention's afternoon session.

Prior to the commemoration ceremonies, participated in by five men who attended the founders' convention in 1890, the delegates adopted a resolution urging discontinuance of the Dies Congressional committee investigating un-American activities.

The resolution condemned the committee as part of the "forces seeking to bring about a government for the benefit of the few" and recommended that funds appropriated to it be transferred to the La Follette Senate civil liberties committee.

Other Resolutions

Other resolutions adopted:

Expressed sympathy for proposals to tax labor-saving machinery and authorized further study of the subject.

Described convictions in the Scottsboro, Ala., attack case as a "frame-up" perpetrated by "reactionary officialdom" and called the release of four of the accused colored boys as a "distinct victory for the Negro people."

Indorsed proposed Federal anti-lynching legislation.

Dedicated two minutes' silence to the memory of ten steel workers killed in the Chicago strike riot in 1937.

Urged liberalization of workmen's compensation benefits.

The convention shelved resolutions urging peace between the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor, but authorized a U. M. W. committee to continue negotiations on the controversy.

$50,000 Bond Set for Marine In Little Death

Quantico Private Pleads Not Guilty to Murdering Salesman

Alexander J. Stevenson, 28, Quantico Marine private, was held last night in $50,000 bond after pleading not guilty to FBI charges that he murdered Sidney M. Little, 28, Virginia tobacco salesman.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner John W. Monroe in Alexandria, he said he was unable to post the heavy bail, and was lodged in the Alexandria jail pending a hearing scheduled for 10 a. m. January 29.

Two other men—one a Marine private also stationed at Quantico—were held in bond of $5,000 each as Government witnesses. They were identified by Monroe as William Joseph Palmer, the Marine, and James Howlett, of Stafford County, Va.

G-Man Silent

Guy Hottel, FBI agent in charge of the investigation, declined to disclose what the two witnesses knew about Little's slaying January 7.

Little's body, the head battered, was found in a picnic ground on Federal property near Fort Hunt, Va. Beside him was a section of a grate from an outdoor cook stove, apparently the weapon used in hte killing.

Stevenson was arrested late Wednesday by FBI agents. He was held at Quantico until yesterday, when a warrant charging him with first degree murder was issued by Commissioner Monroe.

In custody of half a dozen FBI agents, Stevenson and the two witnesses arrived at Monroe's office shortly after dark last night. The curly-haired Marine smiled as he sat nervously twirling his uniform cap while awaiitng arraignment.

After pleading not guilty, Stevenson was asked if he would like to summon any witnesses in his own behalf.

"I haven't any witnesses," he whispered, lowering his head and swallowing hard.

Witnesses Held Reluctantly

"No, sir. I don't know where I'd ever get that much money."

In fixing bonds for Palmer and Howlett, Monroe said he was "sorry to have to hold them, but the law says I must."

The murdered man was a member of a prominent family in Washington, N. C., the FBI reported, and had been conducting his business out of Fredericksburg, Va.

Capt. Branson Will Leave Marine Band

Leader for 13 Years, He Will Retire on First of February

Capt. Taylor Branson, leader of the Marine Band for the past 13 years, will retire February 1, it was announced yesterday.

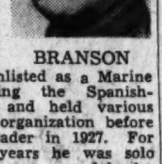
BRANSON

Ill since last spring, Capt. Branson is expected to pass on his baton to Second Leader William F. Santelmann, who has been in charge of the band in recent months.

Capt. Branson, a native of Washington, has been a member of the band for 41 years. He enlisted as a Marine bandsman during the Spanish-American War and held various posts with the organization before becoming its leader in 1927. For more than 25 years he was solo violinist and became second leader in 1921.

The author of a number of musical compositions, Capt. Branson is noted for his marches, "Tell It to the Marines," "Marines of Belleau Woods," "The President's Own" and "Eagle, Globe and Anchor."

His services have been in demand as guest conductor of various musical organizations and as judge of musical contests. He has been especially active in popularizing Latin-American music in the United States, and Colombia has made him an officer of the Order of Boyaca.



SANTELMANN

Born here on July 31, 1880, Capt. Bronson makes his home at 137 Twelfth street southeast. He is a member of the Gridiron Club and other organizations.

Santelmann is the son of Capt. Branson's predecessor as leader of the Marine Band. The elder Santelmann, leader for nearly 30 years, took charge shortly after John Philip Sousa had raised the band to an enviable position in world music circles.

The Marine Band is the oldest military band in the United States, being formed in 1798 in Philadelphia. The first of its open air concerts was held here in 1800.

Ickes Proposes Plan to Resettle 'Dust' Migrants

Reclamation Program Urged as 'Solution' for Thousands of Farmers

By the Associated Press

Secretary Ickes yesterday proposed to Congress a multimillion dollar irrigation and reclamation program as a "permanent solution" for the thousands of farm families forced out of the Great Plains and dust bowls by drought.

The Interior Secretary recommended expenditure of $24,100,000 in 14 Western States during the next five years for small water conservation projects and $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 annually for larger reclamation projects of the type of Grand Coulee Dam.

Ickes' program was placed in the Senate record by Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska. The proposals were made in an exchange of letters between Ickes and Senator Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona.

Hayden Asked Program

Hayden said migration of thousands of farm families to California, Oregon, Washington and Idaho was the chief cause of the "growing relief problem and of the social unrest throughout the Pacific Coast States."

The Senator said that during the fiscal year of 1940 the Federal Government spent $359,000,000 for emergency relief under WPA in 17 semiarid and Great Plains States.

Hayden asked Ickes for a program that would enable migrants to become "self-supporting, ultimately home owners and taxpayers."

Ickes replied that there were two problems: First, "anchoring" the remaining population in drought areas, and second, finding new homes for thousands who have migrated.

For the first, the Secretary suggested small water conservation projects in 14 States, which he listed.

Driest Weather in History

Ickes said these would be expensive projects and so could not return all funds expended to the Treasury, the usual aim of reclamation projects. He suggested about $5,000,000 in reimbursable projects and $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 in relief projects annually.

For families that have already migrated, Ickes said Grand Coulee Dam and similar projects of smaller size could offer new homes on irrigated lands.

Both Ickes and Hayden said that recent winter months had been the driest in Weather Bureau history.

Bride, 18, Weeps as Court Voids Marriage to Brother

Indianapolis, Jan. 25 (AP).—Virginia Williamson, 18, her hands clenched tightly and her eyes fixed upon Juvenile Court Judge Wilfred Bradshaw, today heard the court declare that her marriage to Leroy Williamson, 20, "never existed" because they are brother and sister.

The two were married January 6 after Leroy investigated records and concluded they were not related.

Judge Bradshaw held that a juvenile court investigation "conclusively shows they are brother and sister—they definitely had the same mother."

"There is no way of knowing whether they had the same father," he added, "but the evidence indicates that they did."

Leroy had lived most of the time with his mother in another city until her death a few years ago. Virginia had been placed in an orphanage here soon after her birth and later was adopted by the Wolfe family.

One of the few times Virginia displayed emotion was when Judge Bradshaw asked her:

"You understand the situation, don't you, Virginia—that you and Leroy are brother and sister?"

"I don't believe it," she replied with a sob, "but I'll have to accept it."

"Under the law," the court told the girl, "you never were married and, under the law, it is not necessary to annul the marriage but it might be wise to have annulment proceedings."

Judge Bradshaw condemned laws governing illegitimacy and asserted, "I don't think there is such a thing as an illegitimate child."

He told Virginia that the child she said she is expecting would be legitimate under Indiana law.

Relief Clients Not Barred From Politics, Hatch Says

Act Does Not and Should Not Forbid Their Activity; Its Author Explains; Law's Enforcement Up to Department Heads

By Alfred Friendly.

Contrary to general belief, the Hatch act does not and should not forbid political activity by persons receiving relief funds, according to the author of the legislation.

In an interview yesterday to correct widespread misconceptions about the act, Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, also said that enforcement of the law's prohibitions against political participation by Federal employes is not the general responsibility of the Justice Department, Civil Service Commission or General Accounting Office.

Instead, he said, enforcement depends entirely on the "honor and integrity" of the individual department heads.

The question of political participation by relief workers, it was learned, has been pending for many months before the Justice Department. Hitherto, Justice attorneys have withheld a decision, believing that the Hatch act did not bar such activity, but fearing that announcement of this point of view would subject the Administration to charges that it was attempting to "undermine" the legislation by weakening decisions.

Interpretation and Intent Coincide

The Justice Department has been recently informed, however, that its interpretation coincides with Hatch's intent in drafting the law, and now will advise complainants that politically active relief workers are well within their rights.

Discussing other phases of the act, Hatch disclosed his intention to oppose an amendment introduced by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, January 17. It would allow Government employes to participate actively and run for office themselves in "local" elections.

Hatch said he would support an amendment permitting such participation by Federal workers in "Government towns" near Washington, where the population is comprised mainly of Federal employes. He believes, however, that the general permission proposed in the Smith amendment is entirely too broad and would undo the purpose of the original measure.

He said that Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, had requested a limited exemption for "Government towns," that would have the effect of reestablishing similar exemptions of long standing in the civil service regulations. A Senate privileges and elections sub-committee is studying the matter and probably will offer the amendment requested, Hatch intimated.

No Limit to Their Activity

Reminded that complaints had been made of relief workers being politically active, Hatch said that in drafting the act he had no intention of barring them from running for office or from being just as politically active as they desired. The act was designed only to protect them from coercion and to make sure that their vote was their own, he said.

He noted that the general impression was incorrect that the Civil Service Commission had the general duty of enforcing the law, or that the General Accounting Office could stop the salary of a violator before the individual had been found guilty and discharged by the head of his agency.

Reminded of the fact that the law permits of no mitigation of the penalty of discharge for a Federal employe found guilty of violation, Hatch said that he believed a "rule of reason" would be followed.

He admitted that "hard cases" might develop if a discharge followed every minor infraction, as the law provides, but indicated his belief that administrators would deal with unintentional and unaggravated violations by warnings and "desist orders" which would be just as effective in promoting the intent of the act.

Hatch also conceded that the law, as now written, would allow an administrator to dismiss an employe who violated the act, and then reemploy him in another position. Such action would be considered an absolute evasion, however, he insisted.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

A few tid-bits about the Japanese are timely today as their treaty with us expires:

A book of fanatic exploits against foreigners was called "The Fragrance of the Cherry."

Harlan Miller

Japs are pleading for renewal of the American treaty with a fervor which makes a Briton with his pants off seem heroic and dignified.

* * * *

The Jap society which schemes political assassinations is as respectable and highly esteemed there by nice people as is our Liberty League at Newport.

There is a little white blood in the Japanese—and also a microscopic amount of African blood.

* * * *

A Jap likes to twang the lie that all Chinese are venereals, while the Chinese impolitely call the Japs "monkey thieves" or "dwarf thieves."

Japs are apt to misinterpret a smile as a sneer.

* * * *

In its dictatorial goosestep Japan is 100 years ahead of Germany.

Its national menuality (like Germany's) is feminine and tends to be hysterical.

Japan and China agree fundamentally on one point: "Asia for the Asiatics."

"—equal to winning a war"

To recoup family fortunes, a few Japanese girls go briefly into prostitution. At the end of their term they become pure again. (But they say that's true in Western lands too.)

Japs regard the public de-panting of knobby-kneed Britons as equivalent to a victorious war, and the officer who thought of it has been promoted and decorated.

* * * *

In revenge, the Britons will never be happy until they have made a Japanese General or Admiral walk pantless up the main street of every Chinese city.

The great Mitsui family fortune is founded on brewery profits.

"Mutiny on the Bounty" was shown at Jap movies only after the mutiny had been cut out.

* * * *

Japan's finest trait is love of beauty. Instead of ski excursions they run special trains to see the maples go golden.

Some Japanese regard the "China Incident" as a belated attempt to put down a civil revolt—like our War Between the States.

* * * *

Japanese department stores have staged exhibits in miniature showing how Japan will defeat us in the Jap-American war.

There are radio loud-speakers in Tokyo's zoo cages, so the beasts may soothe their savage breasts with music.

"—he thinks he's a hero"

When a Jap sentry slaps an American woman or kicks an American man he is a "hero" avenging the affront of our immigration exclusion act—which might tactfully have excluded Japs without offering an insult.

Like the Germans, the Japanese can burst into tears at being so unappreciated.

* * * *

Some of our experts think that as soon as the British have won their war in Europe—if and when—they will put their pants back on in Asia.

Our experts also think that declining to renew promptly our treaty with Japan would be equal to doubling our Pacific fleet, in dickering with the Japs.

* * * *

The Japs are both communistic and capitalistic—but more communistic, if anything . . . The relationship between Jap millionaires and the army is like that between German millionaires and the brown shirts . . . Japan is more vulnerable to blockade, boycott and embargo than any other great nation.

Watch to see whether our diplomats keep Japan on the anxious seat by stringing out the treaty negotiations.

Housing Sought For Delegates

The American Youth Congress yesterday asked Washingtonians who can give lodging to the National Citizenship Institute delegates here February 9 to 12 to call the American Youth Congress office at National 6136. The office is at 1410 H street northwest.

On Monday, Mrs. Roosevelt requested cooperation be given the Washington Youth Council in its efforts to obtain free housing.

The young people will come here to learn about the Government and inform it of their needs, the announcement said, adding: "But these young Americans need your aid. Many of them do not have enough funds to finance both their transportation and their living expenses while here. They must depend in part upon the hospitality of the Washington friends of the American Youth Congress."

Cabinet Chiefs Urge 'Draft' For Roosevelt

Ickes Hopes Lewis Is Better Union Leader Than Prognosticator

The "draft Roosevelt" campaign moved into the open again yesterday, as a chorus of inner circle protests followed C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis' forecast of "ignominious" defeat in any third-term attempt.

At the Columbus, Ohio, convention of the United Mine Workers, 47 resolutions supporting a third-term for the President came in the wake of the Lewis sally.

In Washington, a round of political conferences developed at the White House, but out of these came no word of the President's intentions.

Miss Perkins Breaks Silence

Secretary of Interior Ickes reiterated assertions that the President should and could be reelected, injecting a "hope" that "Lewis is a better union leader than he is a political prognosticator."

At the Labor Department, Secretary Perkins touched on the issue for the first time, asserting:

"I am not a political prognosticator, but I have an idea that if the President runs again he would be reelected."

"Is that a woman's intuition?" asked a reporter.

"No, it's not that important," said Miss Perkins. "It's just a hunch."

Answering Lewis' assertion that this Administration has not kept faith with labor, Secertary Perkins said the whole program of relief, wages and hours and collective bargaining was designed "with the objective of doing a kind of simple justice to wage earners without any expectation of getting their vote or their support."

Donahey Sees President

Among White House callers was Guy T. Helvering, Internal Revenue Commission. Back from the Midwest, Helvering told the President that Kansas sentiment was "very strong" for a third term. He said Roosevelt could carry that section "with a larger vote than ever before." The President declined his invitation to attend a Washington Birthday dinner of Kansas Democrats at Topeka on February 22.

Also calling on the President by invitation was Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, who has been silent on his "favorite-son" plans since Ohio's Democratic State chairman said the Ohio delegation would be nominally for Donahey, but would vote for the President.

Donahey has not said whether he would run or how he stands on a third term. Garner and McNutt forces are awaiting his decision. Their names may be entered in the Ohio race if Donahey fails to run.

Donahey was reticent with reporters, saying:

"I talked to the President a few minutes on the Ohio situation and that is all."

High on the White House calling list was Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, reported to be favored by Lewis for the Presidency.

Wheeler Discusses Bills

Wheeler, who, on Wednesday, remarked it would be difficult for the Democrats to win again with Roosevelt, yesterday told reporters: "The President can have the Democratic nomination this year if he wants it." He recently said the President could "veto" if he chose any Democratic candidate put up not to his liking.

The Montanan said "no politics" were discussed with the President. He said he discussed only legislation.

Although the 47 third term resolutions offered at the United Mine Workers convention were reported prepared before Lewis struck out at a third term, they were introduced nonetheless, in the face of the C. I. O. chief's statement. Other resolutions were offered against use of mine worker funds in political campaigns. Lewis put up $500,000 for the 1936 Democratic campaign.

Tax on Receivers Argued in Court

The immunity of receivers of closed national banks from paying the business privilege tax imposed here from 1936 to 1938 was disputed before Justice F. Dickinson Letts in the District Court yesterday.

Justus S. Wardell, receiver of the District National Bank, which closed in 1933, claimed immunity, as a Federal officer, in a test suit brought by the District. Receivers of nine national banks here will be affected by the decision. They have been assessed about $5,000 in taxes.

Should the receivers be held liable for the privilege tax, they might also be compelled to pay income and personal property taxes on the assets under their control.

Justice Letts took the case under advisement.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Mrs. William E. Borah (with veil) was supported by Mrs. C. C. Anderson and another friend as she attended final rites for her husband yesterday in Boise

Twenty Congressmen Among 7,000 Mourners At Grave; Funeral Train Halted at Many Towns So Citizens Can Do Him Homage

Boise, Idaho, Jan. 25.—United States Senator William Edgar Borah tonight lay in a grave on Morris Hill, overlooking Boise Valley, after simple yet impressive funeral ceremonies viewed by 7,000 persons.

The Morris Hill services, conducted by Borah's old friend, Dean Frank Rhea, of the Boise Episcopal Church, were held after the statesman's body had lain in state at the State Capitol for five hours.

The illustrious "Lion of Idaho" came home to his beloved adopted State, for the last time after 33 years outstanding service at Washington, aboard a black-draped funeral train which arrived in the gray haze of a heavy snowstorm.

Despite the heavy snow, hats were removed by the large crowd at the depot and National Guardsmen stood at attention while the train slowly entered Boise and came to a stop, ending a sorrowful trip from Washington.

Chimes in the depot steeple tolled out a muffled requiem while the body was removed from a special car by six high military officials.

Senator D. Worth Clark and Representative Henry Dworshak, both of Idaho, stood as guards of honor over the casket, as the train stopped at Idaho towns before reaching Boise.

At each depot, between Montpelier and Boise, crowds assembled to meet the train, and at each station the car bearing Borah's body was opened and a number of formal offerings were presented by various city officials and others.

Borah's admirers passed silently in single file and with hats removed before the open door to view the casket and pay their last respects.

Upon arrival of the train at Boise, Mrs. Mary Borah, the Senator's wife, slipped through the crowd and was taken to the home of her close friends, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Anderson. She showed the strain of her grief and the long cross-country trip.

The 20 members of Congress who accompanied the body from Washington joined the funeral procession down Depot Hill to the Capitol, and later to Morris Hill. Hundreds of automobiles followed the funeral procession, their lights dimmed and motors muffled as the snow continued falling on Boise, a city of mourners.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt Popular With 6 Out of 10 Voters, but Many Oppose Third Term

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 25.—As the last year of his second term in office begins this week, Franklin D. Roosevelt continues to hold popular support as President among a large majority of his fellow countrymen in a national Institute survey. More than six voters in every ten polled say they think he has done a good job in office, and his popularity index is as great today as when he was elected in 1936.

DR. GALLUP

This fact does not mean, however, that the majority of voters indorse the idea of a third term, or that his popularity would continue at the same level in case he decided to run for a third term. The results of the poll, taken in conjunction with Institute studies on the third-term issue itself, serve to emphasize an apparent phenomenon of American politics—that it is possible for a President to be highly popular in office right up to the final year of his second term and still have no assurance that a majority would vote for him for a third term.

The President's popularity in office has been measured from month to month since 1934 by Nation-wide Institute surveys in which this question is asked:

"In general, do you approve or disapprove today of Roosevelt as President?"

	Approve	Disapprove
This Month	63.5%	36.5%
Last Month	63.5	36.5

In a second series of surveys the Institute keeps a continuous index of sentiment on a third term for Roosevelt. In making this index, the Institute puts the following issue to voters:

"If President Roosevelt runs for a third term will you vote for him?"

The results show that many persons who approve of the President at this point in his second term say they would not be willing to vote for him for a third term. The actual results in the last third-term survey, released January 12, were:

Would Vote for Roosevelt For Third Term	46%
Would Vote Against	54

These figures do not, however, indicate the effect which nomination of the G. O. P. candidate may have on third-term sentiment. If the Republicans picked an unpopular candidate and conducted a blundering campaign, the number of persons willing to break precedent and vote for a Roosevelt third term might be considerably higher than that shown today. If, on the other hand, a strong G.O.P. candidate entered the field against Roosevelt third-term sentiment might decline sharply.

30% of British Feel War Will Last 3 Years

Nearly one-third of voters polled in England by the British Institute of Public Opinion say they think the war with Germany will last for another three years or more.

An equal number say they think it will continue for only one year or less. The poll, conduced throughout England by a staff of specially trained interviewers, asked voters:

"How long do you think the war will continue from now?"

The guesses, in order of frequency, were as follows:

One year or less	30%
1 to 2 years	25
3 years or more	30
No opinion	15

Senate, House Uphold Cuts of $33,314,000

Committees Sustained On Treasury-Postoffice And 2 Deficiency Bills

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

Congressional Appropriations committees yesterday were sustained in cuts down the line in three appropriation bills as House and Senate rang up a $33,314,000 saving in a fruitful bipartisan economy drive.

Leaders predicted new taxes and a debt limit increase may be avoided if the budget-slashing pace is maintained.

Chief threat to the campaign to shear expenditures short of the $45,000,000,000 legal debt limit was the $677,000,000 Agriculture Department bill due for report to the House on Tuesday.

A House subcommittee has further pruned the farm bill, and refused to add $225,000,000 in unbudgeted parity payments, but the bill risks a farm bloc attempt on the floor to raise budget totals.

Upholding committees on all salient cuts:

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate a $1,032,154,000 Treasury-Postoffice bill, reduced $11,491,000 under the President's estimates.

The Senate passed and returned to the House a $251,822,588 national defense deficiency bill, holding $20,176,935 in budget reductions.

The House passed the $58,502,000 urgent deficiency bill, trimmed $1,822,400.

$128,000,000 Shorn

Net result of the economy campaign as of yesterday was an aggregate of $128,000,000 shorn from four appropriation bills, including the $95,000,000 previously scaled by the House from the independent offices measure.

But all of these still faced a rocky road to final passage. Administration agencies themselves took the lead in a fight to put back at least part of the independent office bill savings.

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday heard the first of three White House agencies completely deprived of funds—the National Resources Planning Board. Spokesmen for the other two, the Office of Government Reports and the Council of Personnel Administration, will appeal to the committee today. The Maritime Commission, hardest hit of the independent agencies, also will seek more liberal Senate treatment.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said the economy record gave him reason to hope neither new taxes nor an increase in the debt limit will be required. But he said a farm bloc drive for more funds conceivably might wipe out the savings.

Barkley said he was opposed to an increase in the debt limit to $50,000,000,000 "because it might have a bad psychological effect."

Farm Study Urged

The President's budget estimates were $81,000,000 below the existing debt limit provided $460,000,000 in new taxes be enacted. The economy goal is to slash outlays below the need of new taxes.

Chairman Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, of the House Agriculture Appropriations subcommittee, warned yesterday that Congress must seek a permanent legislative solution of the farm problem this session, or else revert to parity subsidies.

He urged Congressional study of all proposed farm plans, ranging from Secretary Wallace's certificate (processing) tax plan to cost of production and loan plans. A bipartisan House farm bloc meanwhile was surveying the field in a series of weekly meetings.

While economy axmen were hopeful of sidetracking any $225,000,000 farm parity amendment in the House, in the Senate Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, will fight to add that amount. The budget slashers feared such an increase would launch a general spending break, with flood control, reclamation and rivers and harbors blocs also clamoring for more funds.

Lone Effort Defeated

Representative Whittington (Democrat), of Mississippi, head of the House flood control bloc, said "at present" he is considering no request for more funds.

House and Senate yesterday recessed until Monday. Only one major effort was made in the Senate to restore $200,000 for purchase in Puerto Rico of land for an Army depot. Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, defended the purchase against charges of excessive land valuation, but the Senate overwhelmingly deleted the item.

Green Urges New NLRB, Same Basic Act

By John B. Oakes

Post Staff Writer

With a bitter accusation of "bias, prejudice and hostility," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday demanded that the National Labor Relations Board undergo "a complete change in personnel."

At the same time, Green told the Smith committee investigating the NLRB that he desired no "fundamental change" in the principles of the Wagner act. The reforms he suggested were directed "wholly to the administration of the act," he declared.

Green charged that the "general policy" of the board is to destroy A. F. of L. union through "outrageous delays" in holding hearings; and he alleged that through these delays the board had "caused strikes" in some cases.

In a wrathful denunciation of the board's decision lumping all Pacific Coast longshoremen's groups in one bargaining unit, Green said the board had "compelled" A. F. L. unions to be represented in collective bargaming by Harry Bridges, C. I. O. leader—"a man that almost all people in America understand and know to be a Communist."

Assails Landis' Ruling

Waxing sarcastic over the decision of Dean James M. Landis, of Harvard Law School, that Bridges was no Communist, Green said that "I think the evidence shows that about all the people in America accept Bridges as a Communist except Dean Landis and Secretary Perkins."

"We don't want to be represented by Communists in collective bargaining," stormed Green. "In this case," he said, "we will never accept the board's ruling as 'valid and in accordance with the spirit and letter of the law.'"

The A. F. L. chieftain told the committee that each of the three members of the NLRB was "out the window so far as I am concerned;" and he added, in response to a query of Committee Counsel Edmund M. Toland, that he thought they had all "disqualified themselves to serve in any judicial position."

The board has endeavored to promote industrial as against craft unionism, Green declared. He added that, in its interpretation of what constitutes the appropriate bargaining unit, the NLRB has "committed all the crimes in the calendar."

Asks 5-Man Board

Green made it clear that a mere change of individual administrators would not satisfy him. Of equal importance, he declared, were the "administrative amendments" he proposed.

These amendments in the Wagner act include enlargement of the board's power to determine the appropriate bargaining unit; permission for Circuit Court review in representation cases; and elimination of delay in the hearings.

But, said Green, "we would endure the troubles and punishment we are now forced to undergo, and maintain the act and even its Administration," rather than see Congress repeal the entire law.

He declared he was "uncompromisingly opposed" to amendments proposed by Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, and the National Association of Manufacturers.

Green charged the board had connived with the C. I. O. in delaying decisions.

In the Consumers Power Co. case, Green alleged that a year's delay in holding an election was a "manipulation" of the board intended "to cause the C. I. O. to win."

In the America-France Line case, the NLRB resorted to "vicious trickery," snapped Green.

After yesterday's testimony, the committee adjourned until Monday when the NLRB is scheduled to begin a presentation of its side of the case. Board Chairman J. Warren Madden is expected to the first witness.

Churchmen Favor Board

Cleveland, Jan. 25 (AP).—The United Christian Council for Democracy heard the National Labor Relations Board criticized and defended today—then unanimously commended the board's personnel.

H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, asserted testimony before the House committee investigating the board showed board members and agents "have made a mockery of American justice."

Prentis' statement, read before the council's annual conference, was in reply to an address Tuesday by Chairman J. Warren Madden of the Labor Board.

The council represents "social action" groups of eight Protestant churches.

The adopted report asserted the Dies committee "violated democratic procedure" in its investigation of un-American activities. It charged the Smith committee, investigating the Labor Board, with the use of "some" similar undemocratic methods.

625,000 Cut Off WPA Still Without Jobs

12.7 Pct. Found Work, Harrington Reports; Many Back on Rolls

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Only 12.7 per cent, or less than 100,000, of the 775,000 Works Projects Administration workers dropped from the rolls in July and August had obtained private employment in November, Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, said yesterday.

These workers were dismissed under the provision of the 1939 relief act which requires separation from the rolls of persons having received work continuously for 18 months.

The tendency of employers to rehire workers whom they had recently dismissed was held responsible for the fact that, even in a time of rising industrial production and employment, so small a proportion of the 18-months WPA workers were absorbed by industry.

Face Hard Competition

Harrington pointed out that an additional 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 unemployed persons were seeking jobs. The dismissed WPA workers, thus, were a small addition to the Nation's labor surplus.

In November, 26.7 per cent of those dismissed had been reassigned to the WPA, or more than twice as many as those obtaining private jobs. An additional 28.4 per cent were on local relief rolls.

By November 24, moreover, 64 per cent of those dropped had been recertified as eligible for WPA employment. This was cited as evidence that "the great majority of the separated workers continued to be in need of assistance."

In order to keep within the $1,500,000,000 appropriation voted by Congress last year, it will be necessary to drop about 700,000 persons from 2,200,000 now on the rolls between now and July 1, he said. The reduction will begin in April.

Further Cut Ahead

The contemplated $1,000,000,000 WPA appropriation for the next fiscal year, he said, will necessitate a cut in the rolls of about one-third. The average number of WPA workers during the year will be about 1,360,000 instead of the 2,000,000 average during the present fiscal year.

The experience with the dismissal of 18-months employes in July and August "certainly" does not argue for a decrease in the WPA appropriation, Harrington remarked.

Figures relating to last summer's dismissals were based on a survey of 138,000 of the dismissed workers in 23 representative cities, including Washington.

Of the 3,188 dropped here, 335, or 10.5 per cent, had obtained private jobs, 26.1 per cent had been reassigned to WPA, 1.8 per cent were on local relief, and 61.6 per cent were still seeking work. Average weekly earnings of those who had obtained jobs was $16.10. Twenty-five per cent were earning less than $10 weekly.

Tells of Privations

The average weekly family income of the 2,356 who had not been reassigned to PWA was $3.32. A little more than 20 per cent reported no income at all. More than 13 per cent, however, were earning in excess of their WPA wage.

Many of those dismissed, he said, were found to be living on credit extended by grocers, begging for left-over or other unsalable food, selling furniture or other personal property to obtain funds, or doubling up with relatives. Children in many cases were kept out of school "for lack of warm clothing, books and pencils, or even adequate food."

said the flag apparently was placed in the loft last night.

Local newspapers reported they received anonymous telephone calls several hours earlier announcing that "something big" would happen at the convention's afternoon session.

Prior to the commemoration ceremonies, participated in by five men who attended the founders' convention in 1890, the delegates adopted a resolution urging discontinuance of the Dies Congressional committee investigating un-American activities.

The resolution condemned the committee as part of the "forces seeking to bring about a government for the benefit of the few" and recommended that funds appropriated to it be transferred to the La Follette Senate civil liberties committee.

Other Resolutions

Other resolutions adopted:

Expressed sympathy for proposals to tax labor-saving machinery and authorized further study of the subject.

Described convictions in the Scottsboro, Ala., attack case as a "frame-up" perpetrated by "reactionary officialdom" and called the release of four of the accused colored boys as a "distinct victory for the Negro people."

Indorsed proposed Federal anti-lynching legislation.

Dedicated two minutes' silence to the memory of ten steel workers killed in the Chicago strike riot in 1937.

Urged liberalization of workmen's compensation benefits.

The convention shelved resolutions urging peace between the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor, but authorized a U. M. W. committee to continue negotiations on the controversy.

Michigan Nominates Two for Mapes' Seat

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 25 (AP).—Two Grand Rapids men, Bartel J. Jonkman, a Republican, and William McCaslin, a Democrat, won the respective nominations for Congressman from the Fifth Michigan District in a special primary election today.

Jonkman is a former prosecutor of Kent County while McCaslin is an attorney and a former bank receiver in Grand Rapids. The winner next month will hold until January 1, 1941, the seat vacated by the death of Carl E. Mapes.

$50,000 Bond Set for Marine In Little Death

Quantico Private Pleads Not Guilty to Murdering Salesman

Alexander J. Stevenson, 28, Quantico Marine private, was held last night in $50,000 bond after pleading not guilty to FBI charges that he murdered Sidney M. Little, 28, Virginia tobacco salesman.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner John W. Monroe in Alexandria, he said he was unable to post the heavy bail, and was lodged in the Alexandria jail pending a hearing scheduled for 10 a. m. January 29.

Two other men—one a Marine private also stationed at Quantico—were held in bond of $5,000 each as Government witnesses. They were identified by Monroe as William Joseph Palmer, the Marine, and James Howlett, of Stafford County, Va.

G-Man Silent

Guy Hottel, FBI agent in charge of the investigation, declined to disclose what the two witnesses knew about Little's slaying January 7.

Little's body, the head battered, was found in a picnic ground on Federal property near Fort Hunt, Va. Beside him was a section of a grate from an outdoor cook stove, apparently the weapon used in hte killing.

Stevenson was arrested late Wednesday by FBI agents. He was held at Quantico until yesterday, when a warrant charging him with first degree murder was issued by Commissioner Monroe.

In custody of half a dozen FBI agents, Stevenson and the two witnesses arrived at Monroe's office shortly after dark last night. The curly-haired Marine smiled as he sat nervously twirling his uniform cap while awaiitng arraignment.

After pleading not guilty, Stevenson was asked if he would like to summon any witnesses in his own behalf.

"I haven't any witnesses," he whispered, lowering his head and swallowing hard.

Witnesses Held Reluctantly

"No, sir. I don't know where I'd ever get that much money."

In fixing bonds for Palmer and Howlett, Monroe said he was "sorry to have to hold them, but the law says I must."

The murdered man was a member of a prominent family in Washington, N. C., the FBI reported, and had been conducting his business out of Fredericksburg, Va.

3 Letters to Hitler Found in Clipper Mail

Hamilton, Bermuda, Jan. 25 (AP).—The chief censor of Bermuda announced today that in examination of Pan American Clipper airmail, recently instituted, the censors had discovered three letters addressed to Adolf Hitler.

He won't get them.

Leader for 13 Years, He Will Retire on First of February

Capt. Taylor Branson, leader of the Marine Band for the past 13 years, will retire February 1, it was announced yesterday.

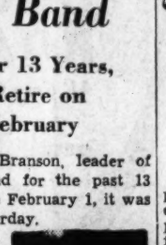
BRANSON

Ill since last spring, Capt. Branson is expected to pass on his baton to Second Leader William F. Santelmann, who has been in charge of the band in recent months.

Capt. Branson, a native of Washington, has been a member of the band for 41 years. He enlisted as a Marine bandsman during the Spanish-American War and held various posts with the organization before becoming its leader in 1927. For more than 25 years he was solo violinist and became second leader in 1921.

The author of a number of musical compositions, Capt. Branson is noted for his marches, "Tell It to the Marines," "Marines of Belleau Woods," "The President's Own" and "Eagle, Globe and Anchor."

His services have been in demand as guest conductor of various musical organizations and as judge of musical contests. He has been especially active in popularizing Latin-American music in the United States, and Colombia has made him an officer of the Order of Boyaca.



SANTELMANN

Born here on July 31, 1880, Capt. Bronson makes his home at 137 Twelfth street southeast. He is a member of the Gridiron Club and other organizations.

Santelmann is the son of Capt. Branson's predecessor as leader of the Marine Band. The elder Santelmann, leader for nearly 30 years, took charge shortly after John Philip Sousa had raised the band to an enviable position in world music circles.

The Marine Band is the oldest military band in the United States, being formed in 1798 in Philadelphia. The first of its open air concerts was held here in 1800.

Ickes Proposes Plan to Resettle 'Dust' Migrants

Reclamation Program Urged as 'Solution' for Thousands of Farmers

By the Associated Press

Secretary Ickes yesterday proposed to Congress a multimillion dollar irrigation and reclamation program as a "permanent solution" for the thousands of farm families forced out of the Great Plains and dust bowls by drought.

The Interior Secretary recommended expenditure of $24,100,000 in 14 Western States during the next five years for small water conservation projects and $20,000,000 to $60,000,000 annually for larger reclamation projects of the type of Grand Coulee Dam.

Ickes' program was placed in the Senate record by Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska. The proposals were made in an exchange of letters between Ickes and Senator Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona.

Hayden Asked Program

Hayden said migration of thousands of farm families to California, Oregon, Washington and Idaho was the chief cause of the "growing relief problem and of the social unrest throughout the Pacific Coast States."

The Senator said that during the fiscal year of 1940 the Federal Government spent $359,000,000 for emergency relief under WPA in 17 semiarid and Great Plains States.

Hayden asked Ickes for a program that would enable migrants to become "self-supporting, ultimately home owners and taxpayers."

Ickes replied that there were two problems: First, "anchoring" the remaining population in drought areas, and second, finding new homes for thousands who have migrated.

For the first, the Secretary suggested small water conservation projects in 14 States, which he listed.

Driest Weather in History

Ickes said these would be expensive projects and so could not return all funds expended to the Treasury, the usual aim of reclamation projects. He suggested about $5,000,000 in reimbursable projects and $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 in relief projects annually.

For families that have already migrated, Ickes said Grand Coulee Dam and similar projects of smaller size could offer new homes on irrigated lands.

Both Ickes and Hayden said that recent winter months had been the driest in Weather Bureau history.

Bride, 18, Weeps as Court Voids Marriage to Brother

Indianapolis, Jan. 25 (AP).—Virginia Williamson, 18, her hands clenched tightly and her eyes fixed upon Juvenile Court Judge Wilfred Bradshaw, today heard the court declare that her marriage to Leroy Williamson, 20, "never existed" because they are brother and sister.

The two were married January 6 after Leroy investigated records and concluded they were not related.

Judge Bradshaw held that a juvenile court investigation "conclusively shows they are brother and sister—they definitely had the same mother."

"There is no way of knowing whether they had the same father," he added, "but the evidence indicates that they did."

Leroy had lived most of the time with his mother in another city until her death a few years ago. Virginia had been placed in an orphanage here soon after her birth and later was adopted by the Wolfe family.

One of the few times Virginia displayed emotion was when Judge Bradshaw asked her:

"You understand the situation, don't you, Virginia—that you and Leroy are brother and sister?"

"I don't believe it," she replied with a sob, "but I'll have to accept it."

"Under the law," the court told the girl, "you never were married and, under the law, it is not necessary to annul the marriage but it might be wise to have annulment proceedings."

Judge Bradshaw condemned laws governing illegitimacy and asserted, "I don't think there is such a thing as an illegitimate child."

He told Virginia that the child she said she is expecting would be legitimate under Indiana law.

Relief Clients Not Barred From Politics, Hatch Says

Act Does Not and Should Not Forbid Their Activity; Its Author Explains; Law's Enforcement Up to Department Heads

By Alfred Friendly.

Contrary to general belief, the Hatch act does not and should not forbid political activity by persons receiving relief funds, according to the author of the legislation.

In an interview yesterday to correct widespread misconceptions about the act, Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, also said that enforcement of the law's prohibitions against political participation by Federal employes is not the general responsibility of the Justice Department, Civil Service Commission or General Accounting Office.

Instead, he said, enforcement depends entirely on the "honor and integrity" of the individual department heads.

The question of political participation by relief workers, it was learned, has been pending for many months before the Justice Department. Hitherto, Justice attorneys have withheld a decision, believing that the Hatch act did not bar such activity, but fearing that announcement of this point of view would subject the Administration to charges that it was attempting to "undermine" the legislation by weakening decisions.

Interpretation and Intent Coincide

The Justice Department has been recently informed, however, that its interpretation coincides with Hatch's intent in drafting the law, and now will advise complainants that politically active relief workers are well within their rights.

Discussing other phases of the act, Hatch disclosed his intention to oppose an amendment introduced by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, January 17. It would allow Government employes to participate actively and run for office themselves in "local" elections.

Hatch said he would support an amendment permitting such participation by Federal workers in "Government towns" near Washington, where the population is comprised mainly of Federal employes. He believes, however, that the general permission proposed in the Smith amendment is entirely too broad and would undo the purpose of the original measure.

He said that Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, had requested a limited exemption for "Government towns," that would have the effect of reestablishing similar exemptions of long standing in the civil service regulations. A Senate privileges and elections sub-committee is studying the matter and probably will offer the amendment requested, Hatch intimated.

No Limit to Their Activity

Reminded that complaints had been made of relief workers being politically active, Hatch said that in drafting the act he had no intention of barring them from running for office or from being just as politically active as they desired. The act was designed only to protect them from coercion and to make sure that their vote was their own, he said.

He noted that the general impression was incorrect that the Civil Service Commission had the general duty of enforcing the law, or that the General Accounting Office could stop the salary of a violator before the individual had been found guilty and discharged by the head of his agency.

Reminded of the fact that the law permits of no mitigation of the penalty of discharge for a Federal employe found guilty of violation, Hatch said that he believed a "rule of reason" would be followed.

He admitted that "hard cases" might develop if a discharge followed every minor infraction, as the law provides, but indicated his belief that administrators would deal with unintentional and unaggravated violations by warnings and "desist orders" which would be just as effective in promoting the intent of the act.

Hatch also conceded that the law, as now written, would allow an administrator to dismiss an employe who violated the act, and then reemploy him in another position. Such action would be considered an absolute evasion, however, he insisted.

Annie Serves Davis Family For 47 Years

80 Tomorrow, She Prefers Job to Pension; Seldom Misses Day

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

"I think," said Mrs. Allan Davis, wife of the retired principal of Roosevelt High School, "that I have a story for you."

Yes, Mrs. Davis; go on.

"It's about Annie, our housekeeper. She will be 80 years old tomorrow and she has been with us 47 of those years.'"

That is how Annie Jackson, rare as radium in these days of transient house servants, came to be interviewed yesterday over a sizzling skillet of fried chicken in the Davis residence, 900 Eleventh street southeast.

Even if she weren't all that Mr. and Mrs. Davis say she is, even if she hadn't been born into salvery, the colored housekeeper would still make good copy, though she is self-effacing and as unobtrusive as a mouse.

Prefers Job to Pension

"Between working and retiring on an old-age pension, I'll take my job," she said, turning over a drumstick. "I enjoy my afternoons off, though. I generally go downtown and window shop, then, when I get hungry, I buy a hot dog and a root beer.

"On my way home I pick up a couple of pork chops and make supper for my sister and me. I'm enjoying myself; yes indeed."

Annie was born in King George County, Va., on January 26, 1860, or so she was told by her father, whom Mrs. Davis remembers as an unschooled but self-educated former slave. She was brought to Washington as a child and, at the age of 10 or 11, got a job with the Watson family, minding their infant daughter, Maud.

On Coastwise Route

Maud was still a baby when Annie went to work for another Washington family, remaining in that household until Maud Watson brought her back in 1893. Two years later Miss Watson married a young teacher named Allan Davis.

"I would pit Annie against any person I've ever known for character and disposition," Mrs. Davis said yesterday. "Without her I don't know how we would ever have gotten along."

Annie did most of the rearing of all four Davis children. Watson is director of Science Service. Malcolm, keeper of the National Zoological Park bird house, is now with the Byrd Antarctic expedition. Fremont is a science photographer and Evelyn is a well known dancer and dancing teacher.

Seldom Missed a Day

The housekeeper has never missed a day's work because of illness, though she has taken time out on rare occasions to attend a funeral or to care for some ailing relative. She lives with her sister at 18 Fifth street northeast.

She does all the housework and cooking, tolerating outside assistance on the ironing and window washing. If Annie has any regrets, it is that she didn't get any more schooling than she did.

"I still got my third-grade diploma at home," she said, laughing. "When I was a child they gave a diploma after every grade. Wasn't that—excuse me, looks like this chicken is about done now."

encouraged Germany to do likewise. Destruction of the Graf Spee and the return of the raider Deutschland to Germany for refitting—and renaming—was also believed to have prompted the plan.

Tourists recently returned from Curacao say some German residents there are aware of the scheme and have predicted privately that neutral and Allied shipping would be staggered with attacks set for the near future.

British warships are known to have been intensively active along the east coast of South America recently, but it was thought that they were tracking down the German ship Altmark, which has been described as a prison vessel that accompanied the Graf Spee on a foray that meant death and destruction to at least nine merchant ships.

The area involved is on the route between United States ports on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts and South American ports, a newly popularized tourist track taken by vacationists who have been turned from Europe by war

BEWARE NOW OF EPIDEMIC COLDS!

Here's Some Good Time-Tested Advice

With folks all around suffering with contagious colds, be just as careful as you can—and you may avoid a lot of sickness, trouble and worry.

Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Beware of wet feet and drafts. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SIGN OF A SNIFFLE, SNEEZE OR NASAL IRRITATION... put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril right away. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because Va-tro-nol is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you'll find that a few drops of Va-tro-nol helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) depend on Vicks VapoRub to relieve miseries. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a warming poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both Va-tro-nol and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks Va-tro-nol and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today.

U. S. Restricts Clipper Mail To War Zone

Neutrality Provisions Invoked as Britain Is Accused of 'Evasion'

By Hobart C. Montee,
United Press Staff Writer.

Postal authorities yesterday issued a new regulation barring parcel post packages and all materials except sealed letters and copyrighted articles, such as books and films, from airmail addressed to belligerent countries, or passing through belligerent territory en route to neutral nations.

The belated ruling, which has a direct bearing on the United States-British controversy over search of American mails for contraband, was issued under terms of the neutrality act which, officials said, provides that only written letters and copyrighted material can be carried.

The regulation was promulgated shortly after State Department officials indirectly accused Britain of "evasion" in seeking to justify mail seizures on the high seas on ground that letters and packages from this country to Germany often are found to contain contraband.

The officials said that the basic issue is not whether the mails contain contraband, but this Government's contention that Britain is violating international law by interfering with mails on the high seas.

Although it was impossible to judge the effect of the postoffice ruling, it did not appear to remove a major excuse offered by the British for their recently inaugurated practice of searching and censoring American air mail carried on Clipper planes stopping at Bermuda on their way to Europe.

The air mail incidents have not been protested since the State Department feels that Britain may be within her rights in inspecting the cargo of the Clipper planes which stop at Bermuda voluntarily.

The protest against the mail seizures from ships was based partially on the fact that the vessels in question do not call at blockade control points voluntarily but are forced to visit them by blockade regulations.

The airmail order does not prohibit the dispatch of checks, money orders, stocks, bonds, etc., which Britain considers contraband and which it contends has been discovered in Clipper mail.

In charging British evasion of the real issues in the mail dispute, State Department officials would not discuss or deny the British charges that large quantities of food, clothing, money and valuables have been shipped by German sympathizers in this country to friends and relatives in the Reich.

The truth or falsity of this allegation is not relevant, they said. The point is that the British government is violating section one of the eleventh Hague convention declaring that letter mails on the high seas, whether in neutral or belligerent ships, are inviolable.

Farmers Hurt By Trade Pacts, Taber Asserts

Declares Extension Will Mean Billion More Relief Outlay

By the Associated Press

The master of the National Grange told Congressmen yesterday that the reciprocal trade program had hurt agriculture, although previously the president of the American Farm Bureau Federation had asserted the program had benefited the farmers.

L. J. Taber, master of the grange, warned the House Ways and Means Committee that if the act is extended for three more years it will necessitate another billion dollars for farm relief.

"After experimenting with trade pacts for six years," Taber declared, "American farm prices are 22 per cent below parity and imports of agricultural products have been detrimental to American farmers."

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau Federation, declared that the trade pacts had been beneficial to American farmers, encouraging exports of farm products as well as increasing domestic sales as a result of industrial stimulation.

"The American Farm Bureau," O'Neal said, "feels that substantial progress has been made under the trade agreements program and, if world conditions permit, much greater progress can be made in the future."

Representative Robertson (Democrat), Virginia, submitted a letter from R. G. Phillips, secretary of the International Apple Growers Association, favoring extension of the trade pacts because they had secured reduction of trade barriers and concessions from foreign countries which had greatly increased exports of American apples and pears. Phillips reported that sales to Great Britain had increased 25 per cent.

Secretary Hull, "father of the trade pact program," reentered the fight over extension of the act long enough to assure Representative Ferguson (Democrat), Oklahoma, in a letter read in the House—that no concessions on imports of chilled and frozen beef were under consideration.

Some Representatives from cattle-raising States have expressed opposition to the reciprocal trade program on the ground it would be detrimental to cattle interests.

As Taber completed his testimony he was asked by Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, whether he thought American farmers would be better off under the old Smoot-Hawley tariff rates or under an extension of the reciprocal trade program.

House Votes $75,000 for Dies Inquiry

The House unanimously voted the Dies Committee an appropriation of $75,000 yesterday to carry on its investigations during the current year, while Secretary of the Interior Ickes suggested that Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, resign his chairmanship in order to establish "public confidence."

Blasting away at the committee's methods, Ickes asserted that "the chief difficulty is Dies." He admitted that the committee had produced "some results," but said it failed to protect the rights of accused persons.

Resuming the attack on Dies which he launched before the House on Monday, Representative Hook (Democrat), of Michigan, accepted the Texan's invitation to appear before the Dies Committee to prove his charges of Dies' association with Merwin K. Hart, alleged "collaborator" with the Christian Front.

Hook demanded that Dies produce "immediately" the evidence of a bribe of $3,250 which the Communist Party allegedly offered for a false affidavit connecting Dies with the Christian Front.

"I deeply resent his linking in one statement his reference to me and his assertion concerning the alleged offer of a bribe by the Communist Party. This is typical of Congressman Dies' methods," Hook asserted.

The committee, which went out of existence temporarily on January 3, does not have to reappointed, Speaker Bankhead told his press conference.

his plane would be equipped to land on the snow in event of an emergency on either of the islands.

Disabled shipping in the storm-tossed Chesapeake and Atlantic kept busy most Coast Guard craft available. The cutter Sebago, headquarters in Washington reported, radioed she was towing the crippled City of Savannah, Ocean Steamship Co. liner, into Hampton Roads. The steamer hove to 35 miles southwest of Diamond Shoals after a rudder post gave way in heavy seas.

The cutter Mendota was attempting to float the steamer Lillian Ann, of Norfolk, which had gone aground on Adam Island in the Chesapeake.

A cutter was ordered to stand by the tug Sampson and barge at Marthas Hook, near Philadelphia, after the craft, battered by waves and ice, had been unreported for two days.

The steamer Andreas radioed that two lifeboats had been carried away, that she was taking some water, but was not in immediate danger. Cutters were standing by to aid the ship, whose position was given about 700 miles east of Savannah.

10,000 Clearing Roads

The "snow that comes only once in 20 years" still left parts of Maryland and Virginia in virtual isolation, though at least 10,000 men were working in the States to clear the highways. Leonardtown, in St. Marys County, Md., 50 miles south of Washington, continued cut off by 6-foot snow drifts standing on the highway into the area.

The Associated Press listed Jewell, Friendship, Shadyside, Owings Station and Deal as Anne Arundel County communities still snowbound.

In Washington, city crews continued to pile snow into trucks for dumping into the city's sewer system or into the Potomac. Most of the city streets were clear, but snow ruts at some intersections were deep enough to menace auto springs.

Plead Lack of Funds

To charges from Capitol Hill of inefficiency on the part of District officials responsible for snow removal, the Commissioners retorted that the city is without sufficient funds for modern equipment.

Washington temperatures since December 31 have ranged 7 degrees per day below normal, the Weather Bureau reported a 22-year record for January.

For the first 24 days of January, 1918, the mean temperature was 22.7 degrees. The "mean" for the same period this year is 26.4.

The lowest temperature for January, 1918, the bureau said, was 1 above. This year's record low is 8.

Most of the Nation suffered from piercing cold, the Associated Press reported.

Subzero temperatures were common throughout the Midwest. Most of the East and the bulk of the South remained under freezing. The Pacific Coast received a dash of rain and snow. Recent snows covered the entire United States with the exception of the South Atlantic Seaboard States, a fringe of territory along the Gulf, and the Far West.

Prowler Escapes As Nurse Screams; Children Sleep On

Police last night sought a colored prowler, frightened from the home of George E. Hamilton, jr., 2330 Wyoming avenue northwest, by the screams of a nurse who surprised the man in a bedroom where she and the two Hamilton children were asleep.

Leona Morley, the nurse, told police she first heard somebody walking. Then a colored man came into the bedroom.

She screamed and the man fled Miss Morley's screams awakened Hamilton and his wife, who made a hasty examination, but found nothing apparently missing.

Police said there was evidence that the man had ransacked the third floor and finding nothing to please his fancy had ventured to the second floor.

The Hamilton youngsters, Betty May, 9, and William, 6, were not awakened.

The Future Seems To Puzzle Indian

A distrust, or uncertainty, of the future seemed in the mind of 74-year-old Chief Jeff Abbey, of the Louisiana Coushatta Indian Tribe, when he waited on Indian Affairs officials here yesterday.

The chief wanted to place the tribal lands in a trust status to assure it to the Coushatta posterity. He also discussed school needs.

With the chief was Douglas John, interpreter. The Indian Office described the Coushattas as a poor but independent sort of people, who have lived in Allen Parish, near Elton, La., for generations.

Fallon Gets 9 Months As Manton's Stooge

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—William J. Fallon, so-called "bagman" for former Federal Judge Martin T. Manton, was sentenced today to nine months in prison and was fined $5,000. He pleaded guilty to an indictment charging conspiracy to defraud the Government of the fair and impartial services of a judicial officer.

Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut passed the sentence.

Reich Warns Rumania She Must Get Oil

'Other Methods' Are Threatened if Request Brings No Increase

By Edward Kennedy,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Jan. 25.—Germany and the Allies appeared heading for a showdown today in their battle over Rumania's vast petroleum resources, with Nazi envoys reported to have told the Rumanian government that it must supply more oil to the Reich.

The German envoys were said by a high authority to have declared that an increased supply of Rumanian oil is "a matter of life and death," and that Germany would be compelled "to seek other methods" if Rumania fails to ship it of its own accord.

As this veiled threat was disclosed, the influential Turkish newspaper Republic predicted that the nations of the Danube and Balkan areas would go to war against Germany or Russia at the least sign of aggression by either in southeastern Europe.

Weygand Arrives

Republic's editorial, which appeared as Gen. Maxim Weygand, commander of French forces in the Near East, arrived at Ankara for conferences with Turkish leaders, added:

"We know that not only will the Western democracies (France and Britain) be with us, but also the entire world."

The German demand for additional Rumanian oil caught the Bucharest government between two fires. Only two days ago France and Britain warned her against forcing British and French companies operating in the country to produce oil for shipment to Germany.

Inasmuch as 80 per cent of the oil industry is foreign owned—chiefly by Britain, France and the United States—Rumanians say they can meet the German demands only by defying the Allied warning and levying quotas for Germany on the French and British companies.

Indications that neither side is disposed to yield in the controversy caused increasing fear in Rumania that the coming of spring will turn the country into a battlefield. Rumania's position already has been rendered difficult by Hungarian and Bulgarian demands for territorial revision at Rumanian expense, and by Russian claims to the Province of Bessarabia.

Articles in the London press are interpreted here as meaning that Britain might be forced to withdraw her prewar guarantees to this country if King Carol accedes to German demands.

Papers also have published a quotation from Le Temps, of Paris, to the effect that Britain and France will do everything, even against Rumania's will, to prevent her from falling into Germany's sphere of influence.

Nazi Envoys Called Home

Budapest, Jan. 25 (A.P.).—German ministers from southeast European countries were reported tonight to have been summoned to Berlin for conferences.

Prelates Attending 'Methodist Advance' Sessions

Methodist Prelate Addresses 1,100 At Session Here

An indictment of adults for "confusing the minds of modern youth" came last night from Bishop Paul B. Kern, of Nashville, as a Methodist youth meeting climaxed the "Methodist Advance" sessions here.

Addressing more than 1,100 adults and young people at Foundry Methodist Church, the Southern prelate declared that youth of today is confused by adults' false emphasis upon material values, and reminded that "in America, money and social standing are success."

Bishop Kern warned that "today's youth must withstand the attack of highly commercialized and highly advertised vices, with forces destructive of character over-eager to lay hold upon the young people of the land."

Mentions Liquor's Return

Directing his remarks to the young people in the group, he declared:

"You did not repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, and you spent only a small portion of the $4,000,000,000 that went for liquor in the country last year."

Later in his message, delivered from a flower-decorated rostrum near an American flag, the prelate pictured "adult lack of confidence in the power of idealism as a great handicap to youth, then asked where the great wave of peace sentiment which swept America some time ago had gone.

Discussing youth's loyalty, he insisted that "youth will give their loyalty to something," then recalled having seen 2,000 young German women on the sports platz in Berlin, "marching, drilling, marshaled and regimented, glad to give their highest loyalty to the German Reich and Adolph Hitler."

If the church is to have an ideal higher and more worthy of loyalty than such a state, it cannot be a church with a closed mind, he added.

Merle Lank Speaks

Merle Lank, of Petworth Methodist Church, spoke briefly at the youth session in place of Frank Cleaver, president of the Methodist youth organization of Washington, who was ill. Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, resident prelate, presided.

One of many Nation-wide Methodist gatherings designed to strengthen the spiritual unity of the now united 8,000,000 members of the former Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Protestant and Southern Methodist churches, the meeting earlier was addressed by Bishops Clare Purcell, of Charlotte, N. C.; Hughes, Kern and Robert Jones, of Columbus.

Bishop Purcell described Methodism as "not just another ism, despite the closing syllable of its name."

Other highlights of the day were the Methodist men's luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel, where the prelates spoke, their messages being broadcast, and the women's sessions and the joint men's and women's meeting in the afternoon.

A consecration service led by Bishop Hughes closed last night's program. The young people's choir of Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church sang.

Nazis Reclassify Pocket Battleship

submarine warfare will be increased "by leaps and bounds."—Editor's note.]

Deutschland Renamed

Chancellor Hitler, it was announced, issued an order renaming the Deutschland the Luetzow, in order to free the name Deutschland for a larger ship.

This was taken to mean the Deutschland will be the name of the first German super-battleship, estimated to reach 40,000 tons or more and which is expected to be launched in the near future. Until the launching of the British 40,000 tonners this will be the biggest battleship in the world.

According to the best information available, Germany has two, and possibly three, such ships on the ways. The first of them, listed as the "H," was laid down at Kiel in 1937; the second, listed as the "I," was laid down in the navy yards at Wilhelmshaven in 1938.

The "H" should be ready for launching in the normal course of events.

35,000-Tonners on the Way

Germany already has two 35,000-ton battleships, the Bismarck, launched in February, 1939, and the Tirpitz, launched April 1, 1939, which are being rushed to completion. Also there are two 26,000-ton battleships—the Gneisenau and the Scharnhorst—already in commission.

If the war lasts long enough and Germany completes her super-battleships, she could seriously endanger British command of the seas, not so much by outfighting the British navy as by conducting surprise operations in a force which nothing short of the whole grand fleet could cope with.

The name Luetzow was already given to a heavy cruiser launched July 1, 1939. By taking that name the former Deutschland, and presumably the other remaining picket battleship, the Admiral Scheer, are now being classified as heavy cruisers, which are named after German admirals and generals as were the German armored cruisers before the last war. But inasmuch as the name Luetzow is already in the new German navy, why the switch when there are plenty of other equally distinguished names available?

There have been rumors the former Luetzow might be turned over to the Russians in payment for supplies.

According to the official announcement, the Deutschland returned "some time ago."

It is noted that in contrast to the days of the British auxiliary cruiser Rawalpindi's sinking, when the German navy was hailed as the new ruler of the seas, there was no such exuberance as on the present occasion, the ship being congratulated merely on "escaping from the enemy."

Questions Raised

Berlin, Jan. 25 (A.P.).—Authorized sources said the safe return and exploits of the erstwhile Deutschland, sister ship of the scuttled Admiral Graf Spee, demonstrated that Great Britain "is not completely mistress of the seas."

Naval sources declared the Deutschland operated without any supporting base, and practically without guidance from home.

The Deutschland captured the American merchantman City of Flint October 9. The City of Flint subsequently was taken from the German prize crew by Norwegian authorities and released. She is due to reach Baltimore tomorrow.

On November 25, the Deutschland sank the British armed merchant cruiser Rawalpindi near Iceland.

While German circles were jubilant over the Deutschland's performance, it was understood that two questions of naval construction had been raised by reports on the condition of her sister ship, the Admiral Graf Spee, following her battle with three British cruisers off the coast of Uruguay last December 13.

Doubts Raised by Spee

The Graf Spee was destroyed off Montevideo by her own commander four days after the battle.

The questions were:

Does welding instead of riveting the armor plate of a man-of-war, to reduce weight and increase speed, insure sufficient stability?

Is it safe to concentrate on armament at the expense of the thickness of armor plate?

The German communique today said the German air force had carried out reconnaissance flights over France and Britain, but said there were "no special events in the west."

Dutch Decline To Hear 'Siren' Call to War

Favor None, Would Fight Any Invader, Says Foreign Chief

By the Associated Press

The Hague, the Netherlands, Jan. 25.—Belligerent nations were told bluntly by Foreign Minister Van Kleffens today that the Netherlands gives no heed to "siren voices trying to involve us directly or indirectly in war."

A unanimous vote of confidence was given the foreign minister by the first chamber of Parliament at the end of a speech reiterating the nation's determination to defend her neutrality, insist upon respect of her sovereign rights and refuse to be swayed by threats or appeals from belligerents.

Without naming First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill, Van Kleffens rejected the contention which Churchill made in a radio speech Saturday that neutrals were under both juridical and moral obligations as League of Nations members to join the Allies.

German criticism that by League membership the Netherlands was siding with the Allies also was waved aside by the foreign minister.

Says League Must Be Fair

Though expressing hope for development of the League as a universal body of sovereign nations, Van Kleffens warned that membership in a League of one-sided political character would be impossible in the long run.

He said the Netherlands relied on promises by the belligerents against violation of her neutrality and on the belief that no world power, for geographical reasons, could permit Netherlands territory in Europe and Asia to fall into other hands.

"If others need our help to find an approach to each other, we are willing," he said in a peace gesture, declaring that the Netherlands does not wish to see central and western Europe "go down in poverty and bolshevism."

He asked if the time had not come for "an intelligent arrangement of European affairs."

Rejects British Claims

"From the British side there has come a voice which declared that neutral nations have a juridical obligation as members of the League of Nations to go into the war," the foreign minister said:

"I strongly deny there is a juridical or a moral obligation for the Netherlands to participate in the war."

Van Kleffens said that "whoever takes up arms against us will be opposed by our arms."

He praised Belgium's neutrality attitude and said the two Low Countries are "open to the same dangers" and must have a joint watchfulness, although, he said, "military consultation beforehand is not possible, in view of our own special policy."

250,000 Told To Register for British Army

Class Aged 23 Is Expected to Begin Training in March

Copyright by New York Times

London, Jan. 25.—Great Britain today told all men aged 23 to register for military service February 17. This registration will apply to approximately 250,000 men.

Since conscription was introduced last April 806,200 men, not including the class aged 23, have been called up but it is not likely that those aged 23 will go to camp until mid-March.

Those now conscripted include all men born between January 1, 1916, and December 31, 1916.

So far men up to 28 years are liable for military service.

Food Program Assailed

London, Jan. 25 (U.P.).—David Lloyd George, Britain's World War premier, tonight led an attack on the government's food supply program with a warning in the House of Commons that it will be a long war and that "all apprehension of famine and privation" must be avoided.

The white-haired liberal, himself a practical pig raiser, said that victory or defeat for Britain may depend upon her agricultural program.

Britain's bread basket is her weakest point and every available acre of soil should be conscripted by the government for food growing, Lloyd George said.

Air Defense Stepped Up

London, Jan. 25 (A.P.).—Britain today prepared for intesified warfare in the belief that Germany planned sharper air attacks in an attempt to sever the United Kingdom's overseas supply lines to match the Allied naval blockade.

The Royal Air Force said in a communique it was developing "counter measures" to deal with the expected increased air attacks by Germany on British supply lines. It kept secret their nature but in connection with the communique it was recalled Britain recently announced development of long-range fighter planes as bomber escorts.

At the same time the defensive "balloon barrage" was being extended still further. It already stretches along 700 miles of coast.

Neutral shipping, which brings a substantial proportion of the supplies which feeds the British, had another black day.

The 1,731-ton Norwegian steamer Biarritz sank early in the morning after an explosion, believed due to one or two mines, in the North Sea.

Twelve of her 24 passengers and 28 of her crew of 35 lost their lives; those saved were picked up by the Norwegian steamer Borgholm.

Other losses which occurred earlier but were disclosed only today included:

The 1,333-ton Finnish steamer Onto struck a mine Tuesday in the North Sea and sank. The crew of 18 was saved.

A Swedish Seaman Lost

The 1,188-ton Swedish steamer Patria sank Saturday in the North Sea after hitting a mine. Four survivors of the crew of 21 reached a Swedish port today on a Finnish steamer.

The 1,580-ton Norwegian steamer Ila was wrecked last Sunday off the English coast and her crew of 19 rescued by a lifeboat.

The Swedish steamer Gothia, 1,840 tons, sank several days ago after an explosion. Eleven sailors who reached a Scottish island said three of the crew were killed and 10 were missing.

A report from Oslo said the 1,328-ton Norwegian steamer Miranda had gone down off the British coast. Fourteen members of her crew were missing.

Aspinwall Made Head Of Garfield Board

C. A. Aspinwall has been named president of the board of directors of Garfield Memorial Hospital, it was announced yesterday. Elected with him were G. Thomas Dunlop, first vice president, and Dr. L. H. Reichelderfer, second vice president.

On the board of directors are F. M. Bradley, Mrs. J. C. Boyd, William R. Castle, Mrs. W. S. Corby, Mrs. C. B. Crawford, J. C. Folger, Walter Bruce Howe, Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, U. S. A. (retired), Dr. H. C. Macatee, William Montgomery, H. A. Willard, H. B. Spencer, Lloyd Wilson and Mrs. Simon Wolf.

War Policy Vote Called by Canada

of attacks on the Dominion government's alleged inefficiency in equipping Canadian troops and in making Canada an effective arsenal for the empire. Last Friday he put his legislature on record as condemning the Mackenzie King government by a vote of 44 to 10, after threatening to resign if the resolution failed of passage.

Consulting With U. S.

"During the months which have elapsed since the close of the special session, my ministers have given unremitting attention to the organization and prosecution of Canada's war effort. The government has been in constant consultation with the government of the United Kingdom, and the measures adopted have been those which it is believed will best serve the common cause," Parliament was told in the "throne" speech.

"Vigorous action has been taken through all branches of the armed forces to provide for the security and defense of Canada, and for co-operation with the Allied forces on land, and sea and in the air.

"Since last you met the developments of the war have made increasingly clear the nature of the struggle in which we engaged. . . . My ministers are of the opinion that the effective prosecution of the war makes it imperative that those who are charged with the grave responsibility of carrying on the government of Canada should, in this critical period, be fortified by a direct and unquestioned mandate from the people."

Second Division to Sail

A subsequent announcement said that the second division of Canada's overseas force would sail "as soon as possible."

Mackenzie King explained that the advanced date for the election would permit the second division to vote before leaving Canada and the first division, now undergoing training in England, to cast its ballots before going on to France.

"This government intends, if it is returned to power, to see that the first division is reinforced from week to week and month to month but it intends also to see that the second division is sent overseas as soon as may be possible," the prime Minister asserted.

He told the House that he had hoped to hold a regular parliamentary session to pass essential legislation nad hold the election. Lack of unity, he indicated, exploded this possibility.

Canadian law provides for an election within seven weeks after it is called by Parliament, allowing two or three days of grace.

Driver Is Cleared In Traffic Inquest

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated James R. Wilson, 23, of 715 Eighth street southeast, after an inquest into the traffic death of Mrs. Mary E. Hall, 72, of 1525 Half street southeast.

The fourth traffic fatality this year, Mrs. Hall died at Casualty Hospital Sunday of a fractured skull. She was knocked down January 13, while crossing in the 1100 block Fourth street northeast.

Verdict was that the death was "accidental." Witnesses testified that the woman walked into the front of Wilson's automobile while crossing not at a crosswalk.

Prize Essayist Went to School But 4 Years

Agriculture Employe Was Ill in Childhood; Writes of Americanism

An employe of the Department of Agriculture who has had a little more than four years of formal schooling in the 36 years of her life, was announced last night as one of the Washington winners in a Nation-wide essay contest.

Miss Agnes Burkhalter, 1126 Eleventh street northwest, who condenses reports on diseases of swine for the Bureau of Animal Industry, couldn't go to school until she was 14. Until then her life had been dominated by doctors who were trying to straighten out a back broken in a fall when she was 18 months old.

Freed at last from the sick room, she skipped through eight years' schooling in four and was graduated from a junior high school in her native Winchester, Tenn. Five years ago she came to Washington and studied as much as her work would permit at Roosevelt High night school and the Department of Agriculture school.

Miss Ralph a Winner

Then a week ago Miss Burkhalter composed a piece on the contest subject, "What American Democracy Means to Me." She wrote:

"I am the master of my own destiny . . . Some of our most useful and beloved citizens are those who have risen above incurable physical defects . . . I am fortunate, indeed, I am an American."

Just as Miss Burkhalter said, none of the contest conductors or judges knew of the babyhood accident that halted her growth at 4½ feet.

Two Are 17 Years Old

Both Miss Ralph and Miss Riggs are 17. Both stand high in their school classes. Both have previously exhibited talent for writing.

Contents of Miss Ralph's essay are under the copyright of Town Hall, contest sponsors, who announced winners last night on the "Town Meeting of the Air" radio program. She told The Post, however, that American democracy to her meant "the right of the individual to seek and to find happiness and success through service to the community, State and Nation. Since democracy is dependent upon freedom of expression, I like to recall the famous quotation:

"'I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it.'"

"I live in a land where . . . alien children play hop-scotch on the sidewalk squares with young descendants of the Puritans," wrote Miss Riggs, whose father is Rear Admiral Charles Edward Riggs, retired. She added: "This complex, kaleidoscope land, this America that was dedicated to the people, is mine. I possess her more truly than any monarch ever held a kingdom . . ."

Girls Are Honor Students

Miss Riggs is a junior at the National Cathedral School for Girls where her short stories have won prizes and where she edits the literary magazine. Half in Earnest. Miss Ralph, who graduates fourth from the top of her class at Roosevelt High School next month, was editor of the Roosevelt Reporter, president of the Spanish Club, vice president of the debating society, and winner of four bi-annual student awards. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Ralph.

Contest judges were Dr. John B. Studebaker, commissioner of education; Joy Elmer Morgan, editor of the Journal of the National Education Association; Felix Morley, editor of The Post; Aubrey Williams, National Youth Administrator, and Elmer Louis Kayser, George Washington University history professor.

Fraud Indictments Against Gallagher, Nolan Dismissed

The District Court criminal docket yesterday was cleared of all prosecutions resulting from the $300,000 bankruptcy of the Nolan Motor Co. three years ago.

Three fraud indictments against William J. Nolan, 48-year-old head of the firm, and five against James F. Gallagher, secretary, were dismissed by John J. Wilson, chief of the criminal division of the District Attorney's office.

Nolan was acquitted of criminal conspiracy and obtaining money by false pretenses by a jury before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue Wednesday. Another jury disagreed on a similar charge against Nolan two years ago.

Wilson said the charges were dismissed because further prosecution appeared unwarranted, in view of the acquittal.

S.S.S. Tonic is the choice to increase the appetite...to boost energy

COUNTLESS thousands of men and women can testify to the benefits S.S.S. Tonic has brought them.

The facts are simple because of all conditions effecting the human body a low blood count is most deceptive. If you feel rundown . . . lack a keen appetite . . . have lost weight . . . don't give up until you restore those precious red-blood-cells back to normal.

S.S.S. Tonic may be just what you need to get you on the right road to health and happiness again.

In S.S.S. Tonic you go after the trouble in two ways . . . first you increase the appetite and better your stomach digestion—thus making better use of the food you eat—secondly, thin, weak, watery blood is made rich and red again thus giving you a boost in energy.

Try S.S.S. which any drug store can supply and no ethical dealer will suggest a substitute. The big 20 oz. size is a two week's treatment and represents a saving in the purchase price. S.S.S. Co.

Finnish Loan Goes to Second Senate Group

Foreign Relations Committee Receives Export Bank Bill

The proposed $30,000,000 nonmilitary loan to Finland, tactly authorized in the new Export-Import Bank expansion bill, yesterday was submitted to a second Senate committee for scrutiny.

Carrying the overwhelming indorsement of the Senate Banking Committee, the bill was favorably reported to the Senate and then promptly referred to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

A movement for further restrictions on the loan, and a possible reexamination of the Government's foreign loan policy, immediately started in the latter committee.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, who has made private contributions to Finnish relief but opposes governmental participation, said he would oppose any action on the loan.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, who opposed a direct military loan, said the modified bill met some of his objections, but might need further restrictions. He said he would not oppose credits limited to purchase here of food, clothing and medical supplies.

Hemmed around with restrictions, the bill doubles the Export-Import Bank's revolving fund to $200,000,000, and, without naming Finland, limits loans to any one country to $30,000,000. None of the bank's funds could be used for purchase here of military supplies or for any act violating international law as interpreted by the State Department. Bulk of the increase presumably would be used in continuation of the bank's South American trade policy.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley conceded the committee might further modify the bill, but said he expected the measure to be reported. He expressed doubt that purely Export-Import Bank features of the bill will be touched by the group, which is concerned only with foreign policy. Amendments are expected to be offered in committee to prevent the bank from advancing credit to any country in arrears on its war debts here.

Urge Calling Of Peace Parley

to organize international relations upon a sound basis.

Dr. Bryn-Jones predicted that the new peace will be better than that organized during the Versailles Conference, because the people of all nations today feel determined that men and women shall not continue to live in fear of impending conflict.

"This is a people's war," he stated. "Not that they wanted it. They hate it. But they knew it was coming and are oppressed with a great feeling of futility. They are determined to have a peace which will last."

The outbreak of war in Europe, he added, was "the loss of a battle in the age-long campaign against war."

"It is a challenge and we will give ourselves more fully to achieving a world in which men and women need not live in fear."

Mrs. Cairine Wilson, member of the Canadian Senate, and Miss Sin Chi Huang, worker in the Chinese Y. W. C. A., also spoke. Miss Josephine Schein presided.

Executive committee members for the next year are Miss Carrie Chapman Catt, honorary chairman; Miss Josephine Schein, chairman; Mrs. Harrison Thomas, Dr. Emily Hickman and Mrs. Frederick Beggs, vice chairmen; Miss Henrietta Roelofs, secretary; Miss Elsie Harper, treasurer; Mrs. George B. Ford, administrative chairman; Miss Louise F. Bache, Miss Berthelec Brayles, Dr. Esther Caukin Buenauer, Mrs. E. C. Costir, Mrs. F. Earle Fairchild, Mrs. Howard G. Prince Bertil Visits Capital On Swedish Import Mission

$50,000,000 Normal Purchases Will Be Doubled, He Says

PRINCE BERTIL

Prince Bertil of Sweden arrived in Washington last night at the head of a trade delegation seeking agreements to increase Swedish imports from America.

Judging by the experience of the last war, Prince Bertil said, Sweden's normal imports of $50,000,000 a year from the United States should be almost doubled this year. Raw materials, principally cotton, and textile machinery would be chiefly affected, he said.

Prince Bertil declared the purchases were for Sweden's own use, and represented her normal peacetime needs. Sweden is turning to America, he said, because the war has cut her trade with England and other countries from whom she normally buys.

The 28-year-old prince refused to make any remarks about politics, declaring: "I am not a politician. I do not know how far Sweden will go in support of Finland," he added, "but we are, of course, deeply interested in what is going on."

Prince Bertil is accompanied by Rear Admiral Nils Wijkwark; B. G. R. Haeggloef, chief of division in the royal ministry for foreign affairs; A. abriGelsson, chief of the Volvo Co., automobile manufacturers; Capt. Hard af Segerstad, F. C. G. Falkendal, marine engineer; C. A. Wastfelt, secretary in the foreign office, and Count Folke Bernadotte, nephew of ing Kustav, who married EstelGle Manville, American asbestos heiress.

The party arrived in New oYrk Wednesday on the liner Manhattan, and were met by W. Boston, the Swedish minister, who accompanied them to Washington. They are staying at the Mayflower Hotel and expect to be here about a month.

Japanese Hope To Avoid Embargo

months ago, was issued by the foreign office. Despite the abrogation of formal Japanese-American trade relations, the communique expressed the hope that the present delicate diplomatic conversations would result in a new treaty.

As Japan's relation with both the United States and Britain approached a critical stage, the foreign office statement apparently sought to mitigate the concern of the western powers over the present Tsingtao conference where the basis is being laid for the projected Wang Ching-wei central puppet government in China, the communique declared:

"Japan's policy in China is not aimed at the elimination of the just and reasonable interests of the third powers. On the contrary, it is firmly believed that many fields of cooperation between Japan and the third powers will be opened up by the creation of the new order in East Asia.

"Unfortunately, no agreement has been reached on the question of a new treaty with the United States. Both nations have, however, decided not to impose discriminatory duties on each other upon the expiration of the treaty today. Thus in practice, commercial relations are unchanged.

"Nevertheless, the situation renders unstable not only the trade but also the general relations between the two countries. It is confidently hoped that these relations will shortly be restored to a normal state on a treaty basis."

Meanwhile, a statement by British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, defending the Asama Maru interception and saying "the last thing Britain wishes is action derogatory to Japan's prestige," drew sharp resentment from the Japanese foreign office.

A foreign office spokesman described the British Ambassador's statement to the press as "possibly unprecedented." He accused the Ambassador of going over the Japanese government's head inasmuch as his statement was issued before Britain's formal reply to Japan's protest of Monday against the Asama Maru action.

He declared Craigie had been "unfriendly in appealing to the Japanese nation before formally replying to the Japanese protest." Craigie's declaration stated:

"Judging from articles in the Japanese press and statements made by Japanese visitors to the embassy, we have gained the impression of misapprehension of the actual point at issue in the Asama Maru case.

"The only question at issue is whether Germans of military age may be removed from a neutral ship or whether such action must be confined to an enemy actually serving in the armed forces.

"The question surely can be settled in a calm atmosphere without anger on either side. I should like to assure our Japanese friends that the last thing Britain wishes is action derogatory to Japan's prestige."

Russians Batter At Finn Trap

Kollaanjoki. The Finnish high command said the Aittojoki attacks were thrown back with "heavy" Red army losses; the Kollaanjoki assault was smashed at dawn today with several hundred Soviet dead and three tanks destroyed.

At two points to the north and in the Karelian Isthmus, iron-ribbed barrier to Henlsinki, the Finns said the Russians had equally bad luck.

An army communique said Finnish positions at Markajarvi, on the Salla front 50 miles from the Soviet border, were assaulted but held fast.

A Red army force of 40,000 men, abandoning a drive intended to cut Finland in two, retreated to Markajarvi some days ago, where it was forced to fight a bitter rear-guard battle. Now, apparently this force has launched a counterattack.

Far to the north, in the deadly cold of Petsamo, Finland's northeastern tip, two Russian attacks met no success and the Russians lost two more tanks, the Finns said.

On the isthmus to the south, Soviet "big Berthas" threw occasional shells at long range at the seaport of Viipuri.

"They did no damage," said Finnish official reports.

New assurance of foreign help came to this capital with the arrival of a British labor delegation headed by Sir Walter Citrine.

Sir Walter told newspaper correspondents that British material aid is reaching Finland already in greater measure than is commonly believed.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

"SUNSHINE BAND" TO DEL RIO. Maxine Patrice, the "R-K-O Sunshine Girl of the Year," and her orchestra will open in Del Rio's Fiesta Room on Sunday evening . . . This band is one of the most notable in the country, has played for R-K-O for four solid years, a really remarkable feat. So, snow or no snow, you'd do well to drive out to Del Rio to hear "Sunshine Patrice" and her music-makers. They'll be here for two weeks . . . After that Manager Herbert Sachs expects to book a topflight rumba band from New York . . . This gives you just tonight and tomorrow to bid fond goodbys to Maestro Max Zinder and his boys.

"MOLLIE, THE MARE," will make a startling debut in the Shoreham Blue Room on Monday eve. Mollie's the pet of the White Brothers, comedians. She has big goo-goo eyes, rabbit ears, is black as Ferdinand, the Bull, and has the same kind of disposition . . . Dancers Stuart and Lea and Barytone Gene Archer will be held over.

HI HAT GOES INTERNATIONAL. Opalita and her International Trio will open in Hi Hat on Monday. Hundreds of people will certainly scramble through snowdrifts to hear them. Because Hi Hat changes are always plenty interesting . . . Opalita plays both piano and accordion, with supporting violin and guitar. The trio goes in for both Mexican and Yanqui harmony, has played many of the best spots on the West Coast and in Manhattan.

MORRIS DANCING was introduced into the Pall Mall Room last evening by Gene Gowing, who also lured the customers into participating in some good ole American square dancing . . . Sessions of English folk and American square dancing will be a regular Thursday feature at Pall Mall.

RINGSIDE CAMERA. Shar-Zad. Mary Howard of "Lincoln in Illinois" with sister, Meredith Howard, one of Washington's top glamour girls. They were squired by John Boland.

Mayflower Lounge. N. B. C. executives Fred Shawn, John Dodge and Ross Fillion all dropping in after the N. A. D. A. banquet, listening with much amusement to Singer Billie Bailey's account of how she met Vice President Garner.

Salle Versailles. Spain's Ambassador Cardenas executing a highly graceful and expert tango with Countess Roberti of the Italian Embassy. Count and Countess Roberti were among the Ambassador's guests at a diplomatic party. P. S. The Versailles will be open until 1:30 on Saturdays hereafter.

ISABELLE AND ANDY, the new dance stylists at Cafe Caprice, are a fulfillment of that phrase, "bright young moderns." Most of their engagements have been in New York and their knowledge of the town's bright spots would fill libraries. If you're going Manhattanward, better have a chat with them. Incidentally, they are starting their own dance studio in the Roger Smith Hotel.

SUPERLATIVES. Troika. Prettiest pair of ankles in town belongs to Dena Lorena, the "Bubiltchki" girl.

Louis Riviera. There are those who disagree, but we still think Artie Humes is the most effective trumpet player hereabouts. Or should it be cornet?

Lotus. When Bill Strickland calls Buddy Shaner the "Irish lad with the champagne voice," he achieves the ultimate in descriptions.

Rainbow Room. If there is anyone around who can top Durward Bowersox as a dance music violinist, we'd like to hear him. We haven't yet.

Bamboo Gardens. Marian Dawn holds the girls' long distance record for singing in the same spot. And no wonder. She's a little lady who knows her business.

MADRILLON GAZETTE. All that "Gone With the Wind" celebration starts today. Your "G. W. T. W." cocktails will be served by a strapping duplicate of Butler Pork. And to the accompaniment of tunes favored by the Boys in Gray, it'll be worth your life to request "Marching Through Georgia" . . . Ann, the cunning ciggie lass who arrived last evening, will impersonate Scarlett O'Hara.

TIN FLUTE. Maybe it's all foolishness for musicians to spend thousands of dollars on fancey instruments . . . For George Macdonald, of the Metronome Room, is stopping the show every night by his "Nola" solo on a tin flute that he bought at the dime store . . . Another currant Metronome humdinger is the flip "Serenade to a Wealthy Widow" as double-pianoed by Eddy Brandt and Fred Jagels.

GLEN HARDMAN is due to say good-by to the Neptune Room about the middle of February, though it's hoped he will remain longer . . . All depends upon the Music Corporation of America, with whom Glen has just signed a 7-year contract. It's possible that he may head for Cleveland . . . Flash! Bert just phoned to say he's just received a check for his new number, "Upright Organ Blues." Pretty going!

leader of Mayfair's Karson Trio

SEAFOOD-MINDED? But, naturally . . . Then one of your best bets is to hop into your car and drive to Hall's Restaurant and order shrimp creole. The shrimps are big and fat and the creole seasoning has that N'Orleans zest . . . Or you might drop into Dick's Grill and have yourself some of their delectable lobster tails combined with rice Espanol.

ROBIN HOOD ARRIVES. The new Robin Hood Grill will open informally next Monday. It's on K street near Fourteenth, smartly decorated and bright as a button.

SPECIAL TO ROSETTA of the Anchor Room. Where are those pictures you were going to send us? Those candid camera shots taken by that collegiate who insisted on having Anchorette Esther in the foreground.

FAVORITE MAESTROS. Fat Boy. De Vaughn Clements is going in for a lot of sweet swing these evenings. But how he can hot-cha when he takes the notion!

River Bend. George Stein is a veteran music man who knows all the answers. One of his credos is to give request numbers the right of way and to play every one of them.

Nightingale. Bill Downer is known as an expert in modern dance music. But he got that way because he has an open mind, travels around and listens to other dance bands on his every free night.

Elopement to Hobohemia

The hilarious story of the American adventures of Winston Churchill's nephew and the sister of Hitler's "perfect Nordic dream girl"— two young lovers who fled Britain to try dress-selling, door-to-door soliciting, and, finally, bartending in the land of opportunity. Esmond Romilly and his bride, the Hon. Jessica, found fun in every hardship, and have written the story of their adventure in a delightful series of articles, to appear serially in The Sunday Post. You'll be young and carefree with them, as you re-trace their path from romance to reality.

Nazi in Rome May Modify Trade Basis

Diminishing Shipments Of German Coal Worry Mussolini

By Herbert L. Matthews.
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Jan. 25.—Dr. Karl Clodius arrived here today from Bucharest, where he has headed a German trade mission, for important talks which may change the basis of Italo-German trade.

Italy is chiefly concerned about the diminished shipments of German coal, since this country cannot exist as an industrial nation without enormous imports of coal, and if she cannot get it from Germany, she must apply to England, Belgium and Holland.

This is one more way in which the Allied blockade is vitally affecting not only the status of Italy's economy, but her relations with Germany. Of the total coal imports, which fluctuate between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 tons, fully 10,000,000 tons used to come by sea from Hamburg, Stettin and Gdynia.

Experts estimate that, at best, Germany can only supply half the amount which she used to, which was slightly more than 9,000,000 tons, counting Austrian, Czecho-Slovakian and Polish coal, as well as German.

Italy's domestic production was 2,353,000 tons in 1938 and probably close to 2,500,000 tons in 1939, but that means coal, anthracite and lignite together, lignite being about one-third of the total.

The Duce, in effect, is asking the lignite industry to triple its production.

The main trouble is that Italian coal is of inferior quality. A London economist recently estimated that only 2 or 3 per cent of that is suitable for important industrial purposes.

Dr. Clodius, therefore, has something vital to talk about. The German Embassy here says that this is a normal semiannual contact between the permanent Italo-German trade delegations, but that the doctor hopes to "modify the existing trade treaty in accordance with the needs which have arisen since the war started."

There are reports also that the Rumanian oil situation is playing a part in his visit, since he comes fresh from his discussions in Bucharest. Some say that he is going to bid for Italian support in his effort to corner a large part of the Rumanian oil exports for Germany, by promising Italy a larger share. In 1938, Italy imported 522,872 tons of crude and lubricating oils from Rumania.

Americans Reported Told to Flee Sweden

London, Jan. 25 (AP).—The Daily Mail said tonight United States Minister Frederick Sterling in Stockholm, Sweden, had circularized all Americans urging them to return to the United States.

Reports of troop concentrations in north Germany, said the Daily Mail's dispatch from Stockholm, were believed to have influenced the United States diplomat's decision.

1 Dead, 6 Hurt in Blast In Power Building

Hazard, Ky., Jan. 25 (AP).—One person was killed today and six others were injured, two seriously, in an explosion that wrecked a three-story building occupied by headquarters of the Kentucky and West Virginia Power Co.

R. L. Gordon, district manager for the power company, believed the blast was caused by gas accumulated in a well under the building.

Commerce Spokesman Denies Statement Hopkins' Report Was Rewrite of Aide's Book

A Commerce Department spokesman yesterday issued a heated denial of a statement that Secretary Hopkins' recent annual report was a "rewrite" of a book whose co-author was Richard V. Gilbert, head of the department's new industrial economics division.

The statement was made in the Kiplinger Letter, a weekly news dispatch circulated privately to businessmen.

Victor Sholis, special assistant to Hopkins in charge of public information, admitted that Gilbert, a former Harvard professor, worked on the draft of the report, along with four or five other department advisers.

He asserted, however, that Hopkins spent three weeks working on the final copy, revising drafts, dictating a large part himself, and revising passages.

Gilbert 1 of 7 Authors

The book on which the report was allegedly patterned is "An Economic Program for American Democracy," of which Gilbert was one of seven authors, the others being Harvard and Tufts University economists. It was published in 1938.

Sholis said the allegation was an unfair "innuendo," and that although many of the ideas in the book also were expressed in the report, the latter was Hopkins' own product and expressed his own point of view.

He added that the President's budget message probably contained the same philosophy as the sections of Gilbert's book concerning fiscal policy, but that there was no more justification for saying the message was a rewrite of the book than in making the same charge about the department's report.

He admitted the possibility that certain passages containing phraseology from the book may have been Gilbert's contributions to early drafts of the report which were accepted by Hopkins.

Some Similarities

A review of both documents revealed similarities in statements of the economic causes leading to the depression, the efficacy of Government remedial measures and the role of the Federal Government in the Nation's future economy.

Pronounced views in the economists' book on the necessity for continually expanding Government spending, and statements that the resulting debt need not be repaid found no counterpart in the report. On the contrary, Hopkins said that the budget would be brought into balance in prosperous periods.

Similarly, the report did not touch on a score of specific remedial programs advocated in the book, nor did it reflect the book's fear that "businessmen, obsessed with a devil theory of government, will attempt to use their economic power to suppress democracy and place in its stead a dictatorship."

Similarities in certain wording were noted, nowever.

For example, Hopkins said, "the Government is setting a bottom to a deflationary spiral," while the book noted the Government had "embarked upon a spending program which put a bottom to the vicious spiral of deflation."

Both documents find that in 1937 there was "the sharpest decline on record."

Agree on Use of Resources

Gilbert's book said "the Government must assume responsibility for maintaining the national income at a sufficiently high level to assure full and effective utilization of our human and material resources."

In a similar passage, the department report noted that "Government, on its part, is charged with primary responsibility for the national welfare. It seems clear from past experience that the community must accept, finally and without qualification, the responsibility for securing and maintaining the conditions necessary for the full utilization of our resources."

A striking example of an identical method of reasoning was noted in similar arguments of both publications to prove that Government rather than business was responsible for the increased flow of income contributing to recovery.

Gilbert, who is 37, received a doctor's degree in international trade and has taught at Harvard since 1924. In 1937 he made special studies for the Treasury Department and was brought to Hopkins' staff last year. He was sick yesterday and could not be reached for comment.

Harrington Finds Politicians Learn 'To Let WPA Alone'

Col. F. C. Harrington, Works Projects Administration commissioner, said yesterday that he thought politicians were coming to realize that the best policy was to "let WPA alone."

"I think there is a growing realization in political life," he remarked, "that the best plan is to allow WPA to run a good, efficient show."

Harrington said at a press conference that, despite restrictions enacted since the 1938 elections, he looked for some efforts at political activity this year, and felt that one of his jobs would be to "hold the line" against it. The implication was that some politicians still were "unenlightened."

7 Bid $1 to $286,715 Apiece For 4 Ships in Ghost Fleet

Seven bidders, including a New Yorker, who offered $1 for the Mount Vernon, one-time luxury liner, submitted proposals to the Maritime Commission yesterday for four ships of its "Ghost Fleet" off Solomons Island.

Highest offer was $286,715 by Simpson, Spence & Young, New York, for the George Washington, used by President Wilson in trips to and from the Versailles conference. The bid was entered on behalf of Thomas W. Ward, Ltd., England.

W. H. Arnott, Young & Co., and Metal Industries, Ltd., Scotland, bid $276,603 for the Monticello, $250,814 for the Mount Vernon and $[illegible] for the America.

Charles Osborn, of Jamaica, Long Island, who said he was bidding for himself and Valentine Henderson, bid a dollar for the Mount Vernon. His bid contained no explanation of what he proposed to do with the vessel.

The Union Shipbuilding Co., Baltimore, bid $173,211 for the George Washington, $117,004 for the Monticello, $169,774 for the Mount Vernon and $138,907 for the America.

Northern Metal Shipbuilding Co., Philadelphia, bid $133,000 for the George Washington, $130,590 for the Monticello, $123,950 for the Mount Vernon and $112,460 for the America.

The Boston Iron & Metal Co., Baltimore, bid $176,500 for the George Washington, $161,500 for the Monticello, $152,500 for the Mount Vernon and $166,500 for the America. The firm also bid $750,000 for all four vessels.

Eisenbahnwerte Holding Aktiengesellschaft, Switzerland, bid $202,000 for the America.

Compton Gets Assistant Navy Secretaryship

Roosevelt Nominee Is Edison's Righ-Hand Man, Knows Ropes

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Lewis Compton, a World War patrol boat commander and civilian naval administrator for the past 3 years, to be Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Compton advances to the post vacated by his chief, Secretary Charles Edison, who was promoted to the Cabinet last month. He has been Edison's right hand man in the Navy Department as he was in business before the two came here in 1937.

While the appointment came as a surprise, Navy men pointed out his advancement should keep the warship building program on an even keel, for as administrative assistant to Edison he is familiar with the details of the Navy's vast and complex expansion. Few civilians, they said privately, would have been able to take hold of building operations at once.

Tall and of youthful appearance, Mr. Compton has held several elective and appointive public offices in New Jersey. He was State director of emergency relief, assistant State WPA director and member of the common council of the Borough of Metuchen, his home town.

In the World War Mr. Compton, now 47, served as an ensign, and has been active in naval affairs since. Resigning his commission in 1920, after service at sea in command of the patrol boat Nirvana and on other ships, he was commander of a naval reserve unit until 1930.

Like his predecessor, the World War Assistant Navy Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mr. Compton is an enthusiastic amateur sailor. He was fond of horseback riding until a fall broke his leg here last spring.

He attended public schools in Perth Amboy and Phillip Exeter Academy in New Hampshire. With his wife and two children he now lives in Beverly Hills, Alexandria.

Embargo Japan, Senators Demand

distinguished in the report from the yen-bloc lands, Manchukuo, Korea and the occupied areas of China, trade with which provide no foreign exchange for Japan.

Emphasizing that trade with Japan plays a relatively less important part in this country's national existence, the study shows Japanese purchases accounted for only 8 per cent of American exports and only 7 per cent of this country's imports were supplied by Japan.

The European war has "greatly intensified" Japan's dependence on American trade, the report continued. It has greatly checked her purchases from Germany, the United Kingdom, Scandinavian countries, Canada and the Netherlands' Indies.

Recent increased orders from Japan for American goods were attributed in part to "recognition that with increasing volume of domestic orders in connection with our own defense program, and of orders from European nations, filling of new orders will henceforth be more and more difficult."

Technically, the Japanese-American trade will continue on a day-to-day basis without imposition immediately of any changes in duties or other restraints. But hanging over Japan constantly will be the threat of restraints through which this country may make effective her resentment of the many discriminatory restrictive measures taken by Japan against American trade and other rights in the conquered areas of China.

The United States has rejected Japanese proposals or requests for a temporary agreement or exchange of notes to fix the status of trade relations.

Japanese Envoys Confer

By International News Service

Budapest, Jan. 25.—Amid increasing concern over Rumania's immediate future in the Balkan tug of war between the German-Soviet and Anglo-French combines, a new factor entered the picture tonight with the arrival of Japanese envoys in Budapest from all parts of Europe.

The Japanese diplomats will begin an important week-long conference tomorrow.

It was generally assumed in Budapest's diplomatic circles that the imminent Japanese conference will concern itself primarily with coordinating Japanese policy in Europe—especially as it concerns the belligerents and Soviet Russia—with Nippon's Far Eastern policy.

The Japanese Ambassadors to Germany, Italy and Turkey have already arrived in Budapest. The Japanese Ambassador in London is likely to be represented by an underling due to the present Anglo-Japenese tension.

Rover's Good Intentions Pave His Way to Dog Hospital

Barbara Scruggs, 9, of 5239 Wisconsin avenue northwest, visited Rover yesterday to cheer him up

That dog Rover, for ten years the talk of Tenleytown, to whose citizens he belongs collectively, is in the hospital with badly bitten ears and eyes.

The neighborhood's dogs didn't go for his good intentions and protective instinct—the qualities that brought him his fame and a handout at any door.

It seems that he turned, momentarily from accompanying children across the streets and to school, from following the Eighth Precinct policemen on their lonely night patrols—to the protection of a poodle owned by M. J. Byrns, of 4400 Fessenden street.

Well, the dogs ganged up on him. And yesterday veterinarians at the Washington Veterinary Hospital, 5313 Wisconsin avenue, said his condition was good, thanks to a violet ray treatment and their prompt efforts in removing with tweezers Rover's prickly mahogany hair that the teeth of his assailants had driven deeply into his hide.

As many as 35 children, and as many grown-ups and policement, have visited him at the hospital, said the attendants, who told the story of a dog's good intentions gone wrong.

The dog, an expert would know, is part German police, part Airedale terrier. Nobody knows where he came from. They remember that a decade ago he wandered in and gave himself to everybody, mostly to the children. For years, most any resident would step up and pay his license. Of late the police have been seeing to it.

Rover will recover, and undoubtedly return his allegiance to the children. He knows where he slipped.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Edbert Ruhl, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, basso, gave a joint recital Thursday evening in Constitution Hall, with Emilio Roxas as accompanist.

A friendly audience in Constitution Hall encouraged a young Washingtonian last evening when Edbert Ruhl, tenor, made his first appearance here in a joint recital with Nicola Moscona, Green basso of the Metropolitan Opera. Once an evident and natural nervousness had been dissipated by the cordiality of his hearers Mr. Ruhl carried through his share of the program with a growing confidence and made a good impression as an earnest pursuer of artistry. His voice has a pleasing quality of lyricism and capabilities of dramatic development.

He began with Handel's "Ombra mai fu" and followed its stately measures with Durante's tripping "Danza, fanciulla." His second group contained three lieder by Brahms: "Die Mainacht," "Wie Melodien zieht es mir" and "Meine Liebe ist gruen," and at his third appearance he essayed Meyerbeer's aria, "O Paradiso." Other selections were "Welcome Love" and "Adoration" by Roxas, "E lucevan le stelle" from "Tosca," and an aria, "The Years Are Long," from the American opera, "Cynthia Parker," by the Texas composer, Julia Smith.

This aria, in which he was accompanied by the composer, made one curious to hear more of the opera from which it is taken. It is well written for the voice with an attractive melodic line, and the harmonic setting has a slight flavor of American idiom.

Mr. Ruhl's voice is still in a transitional stage, and his use of it varies between a subdued, slightly veiled utterance and a full tone in which the Italian sob has been inculcated. He has yet to learn the easy gradation between these extremes as well as the shades of emotional expression. The three Brahms lieder lacked variety in their interpretation, and there was a general monotony in his treatment of different styles.

Nicola Moscona is an experienced singer who knows how to make a robust voice dulcet as well as stentorian. His control of a naturally large tone for the purposes of refined phrasing was manifested in his first group of Gluck's "O del mio dolce ardor," Scarlatti's "O cessate di piagarmi" and Beethoven's "In questa tomba oscura." Later he released a forceful volume in arias from Verdi's "Cimon Boccanegra" and "Don Carlos," and "The Golden Calf," from "Faust," his fortissimo being occasionally marred by excessive vibrato.

He also contributed Lothario's lullaby from "Mignon" and three contemporary Greek songs by Komninos and Valtotsiotis. At the close of the recital he joined Mr. Ruhl in the duet, "Solenne in quest'ora," from "La Forza del Destino."

Louisiana Session Ends In Verbal Riot

By the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 25.—Invective echoed through Louisiana's Capitol today when Gov. Earl Long closed a special legislative session in a swirl of angry oratory unmatched even in the days of blustery Huey Long.

The Assembly adjourned in confusion with a lone oppositionist, Senator James A. Noe, still seeking the floor. The six-day "lame duck" session gave quick assent to all of Long's proposals, described by Noe as "vote getters."

The Governor denounced his political opponents, the State's newspapers and criticized Assistant U. S. Attorney General O. John Rogge, prosecuting the Federal "scandal" investigations in Louisiana.

He charged Rogge was trying to "Run our elections down here" but invited him to conduct a "real investigation of some of our politicians."

"Rogge! Rogge! Rogge!," Long shouted horsely. "What a man. Yeah!"

Crowded galleries gasped when Long roared a charge that President Roosevelt was preparing in 1935, just before Huey Long was shot, to spend about $6,000,000" in Louisiana to defeat the "Kingfish."

"Why four years ago, they put thousands of men on the WPA rolls for political purposes to defeat Huey," Long cried. "They had five and six men on one shovel. Now, Mr. Rogge, when you come back, let's investigate that and give Louisiana a clean bill of health."

Rogge at present is in Washington, but has announced he will return shortly to conduct further investigations of alleged election frauds and other irregularities, and to prosecute scores of persons already indicted.

Long planned to plunge swiftly into his campaign to retain his post in a Democratic runoff primary February 20 against "reform" candidate Sam H. Jones.

"Frankly," he confessed, "I did it because I wanted to help re-elect Darryl Zanuck production head of Twentieth Century-Fox."

REMINDER: Before going to California to appear in the Coast production of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" Alexander Woollcott stopped at Sun Valley, Idaho, and witnessed the intercollegiate ski meet there . . . Ina Claire, who sat beside Woollcott during the meet, saw the rotund, parlor-couch athlete draw his memo pad from his pocket and make a note . . . Ina peeked over Woollcott's shoulder and read the memo: "Remind yourself never to put on a ski."

DEFEAT: George Jessel asked George Jean Nathan to appear in the Hecht-Jessel picture. Nathan agreed on condition that he be allowed to sing . . . Jessel now is completing a song for the critic, never realizing that Nathan was kidding . . . A Hollywood studio offered Nathan $50,000 to appear in a movie. "I'll do it if Loretta Young will play the love scenes with me," said the critic—and the studio agreed. . . . "Also," Nathan told them, "I want all expenses paid for my maid"—and again the studio agreed. But the deal was called off when the studio was unable to meet his third demand—that he be co-starred with Rin-Tin-Tin.

SUCCESS: Sunday evening after the White House guests had seen the movie "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" President Roosevelt told Max Gordon, the producer, how much he liked it . . . "If this movie about President Lincoln doesn't make money," said Gordon, "I don't know what will" . . . "If it doesn't, try making movies about the other 31," Moss Hart suggested. "You're bound to hit the jackpot."

YOUTH: Phil Baker's 7-year-old daughter was instructed by her school teacher to draw a landscape . . . The little girl devoted a full hour to a painstaking sketch of rolling acres and spreading trees beyond a lake . . . "Very good," said the teacher and started to take the drawing from her . . . "Wait, I'm not finished," the little girl insisted—and above the clouds she had drawn slowly began to pencil the letters "I. J. Fox."

CHATTER: A local producer wants to present at one recital a quartet composed of Marian Anderson, Dorothy Maynor, Paul Robeson and Roland Hayes. Miss Maynor is the only one willing to accept. . . . The Paradise, which shut its doors last week-end, is scheduled to reopen within a few days . . . Eddie de Lange, whose orchestra ranked among the hottest of swing combinations, is joining Guy Lombardo's sweet-music band . . . Greta Garbo shopped at John Frederic's Tuesday, wore her trench-coat and flat-shoe uniform and then waited five minutes at the corner of Fourty-eighth street without being gaped at or even recognized . . . Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Gilman, friends of George Ade, who secretly have been compiling scrapbooks of clippings about Ade, will have that record preserved in the archives of Purdue University. Damon Runyon will write a dedication for each volume.

AMITY: David Niven sent a letter to Sam Goldwyn expressing his appreciation for all that Goldwyn had done, assuring him of unfailing devotion and expressing the hope that if he survies the war he would like to resume that pleasant relationship . . . Goldwyn treasured the letter. "It's the nicest letter I ever received," said the producer. "It must leak out to the press."

ALARM: Gervase Huxley, cousin of Aldous, arrived from England on the Scythia, a vessel armed with a 1902 cannon operated by a veteran of the Boer War . . . On the first day out the veteran warned the passengers that he expected to hold gunnery practice in the morning to see if the gun worked and that they must not be alarmed. At 7 a. m., while Huxley was walking the deck, the gun went off. Out of a stateroom rushed an elderly lady wearing a sleeping hat and bathrobe. She flung her arms around Huxley and shrieked: "Tell the captain to surrender!"

TRIUMPH: Eva Langbord, who was Margo's understudy in Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset," has received favorable notices from the drama reviewers for her excellent portrayal of a Communist in Elmer Rice's new hit, "Two on an Island" . . . Miss Langbord is not a Communist but she was brought to Elmer Rice's attention by an old friend—Emma Goldman.

Five in Row

Robert Paige just completed work in his fifth picture in as many months at Paramount. The new film, "Opened by Mistake," gives him an important reporter role with Charlie Ruggles and Janice Logan.

Make-up Expert

Ida Lupino, who appears with Ronald Colman in "The Light That Failed," prefers playing character roles that require a lot of makeup and once played an 80-year-old man on the stage.

Movies' Big Debt To Edison Told

Without the inventive genius of Thomas Alva Edison, Hollywood could not be filming the events of his life in two pictures, "Young Tom Edison," starring Mickey Rooney, and "Edison, the Man," starring Spencer Tracy. In fact, but for Edison, there might be no Hollywood at all.

Edison created the following vital items which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be using daily in putting the stories on the screen:

The electric light, without which interiors could not be photographed.

The talking machine, from which recording principle modern sound on film was derived.

The carbon transmitter for the telephone.

Generators, electrical plants and storage batteries.

The dictaphone on which the scripts were recorded.

The mimeograph, through which hundreds of departments and workers received scripts in preparation of their duties.

Portland cement which made sets practical.

Electric trains and trams for transportation.

The Quadruplex Telegraph through which information was received—and the stock ticker.

Old Troupers

Willard Robertson and Charles Waldron, who play an attorney and a judge respectively in "Remember the Night," in which Barbara Stanwyck and Fred MacMurray are co-starred, played together in New York in "The Warrens of Virginia."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'The Brass Will Crash And the Trumpets Bray!'

Capital Will Be Groggy With Premieres Tonight; Gloria Jean, Elsa Lanchester Join the March; News, Notes and Gossip of the Theater

SETTING THE RECORD STRAIGHT, once and for all, so that he who runs may read:

Three years of waiting, hundreds of hours of discussion and no end of controversy and conjecture will crystallize into accomplished fact when David O. Selznick's Technicolor picturization of Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" is shown for the first time on a Washington screen at Loew's Palace Theater this morning.

BELL

Today, doors at the Palace will be thrown open at 9 a. m. For the 9:45 a. m., and 2:45 p. m., projections of the 3-hour-and-47-minute feature, seats will not be reserved. First come, first served, will be the rule of the day under the usual "grind" policy of continuous performances. Those arriving late for the first showing—provided they can get in—will be permitted to remain over for the second.

Not so nights and Sundays, when all seats are reserved, with performances beginning at 2 and 8 p. m. Seats for these performances are on sale in advance at the box-office.

Olivia De Havilland, who plays the role of Melanie in "Gone With the Wind," is arriving at the Washington airport this morning and will be present in person at tonight's evening, reserved-seat premiere—which already will have been been preceded by two unreserved, public screenings of the picture. One of the most brilliant audiences ever assembled in a Washington theater is expected to be present at tonight's gala showing, which will have the customary concomitants of microphones, army lights, top hats and tiaras, excitement and good-natured milling about.

Gen. Julius F. Howell, commander-in-chief of the Confederate Veterans, personally will attend the premiere at the age of 94, at the head of a contingent of Confederate veterans of which he is the youngest. Also expected are a group of Union Veterans. The two groups will be brought together at the theater and seated side by side.

If all this seems repetitive, it still appears necessary information to lighten the strain on a telephone that keeps ringing almost continuously.

While all of this is going on at the Palace tonight, down the block on Thirteenth street, at the Earle, considerable military pomp and circumstance will be signalizing the evening premiere of the Warner Brothers' production of "The Fighting 69th." A group who knew and loved Father Francis P. Duffy, one of the leading characters in this saga of the Rainbow Division of the A. E. F., starring James Cagney, Pat O'Brien (Father Duffy) and George Brent, will be present. Furthermore, arrangements have been completed, through Col. Walter W. Burns, commanding officer of the 260th Coast Artillery (A. A.), for the detailing of the regimental band of 30 pieces and a detachment of 100 men from Headquarters Battery and Battery A, to take part in the ceremonies. The soldiers will be guests of the Earle management at the 9 o'clock performance and will parade in a body from the Pennsylvania avenue armory to the theater. The antiaircraft searchlight equipment of the 260th will be focused on the Earle from 7 o'clock on, to enhance the gala atmosphere of the occasion. Between the stage show and the presentation of "The Fighting 69th" the band will take the stage and play the "Rainbow Division March." A delegation from Georgetown and Catholic universities, many of whom were close personal friends of the beloved regimental chaplain, Father Duffy, will be guests of Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers. Among this group will be Monsignor P. J. McCormick, vice rector of C. U.; Dr. Timothy May, Dr. James J. Hayden, the Rev. P. J. O'Connor, Dr. O. J. Ramler, the Rev. Gilbert Hartke and Sister Aniceta.

Gloria Jean, Universal starlet, is the latest and, incidentally, the youngest Hollywood luminary to add her name to the roster of stars coming to Washington for the President's birthday celebrations next Tuesday. Gloria, the prodigious little soprano who was an overnight hit on the screen in "The Under-Pup," and at the age of 12 is able to reach high "C" with utmost ease, will arrive in the Capital next Monday, with her mother and Charles Previn, musical director for Universal pictures. They will be on the same train with Mickey Rooney. Gloria is working in "If I Had My Way," Bing Crosby's next starrer, and last night was heard with him in his network radio program. Upon the conclusion of her work in the Crosby picture, Gloria will sail for Australia to appear as soloist with the Melbourne and Sydney Symphony Orchestras.

It is also announced that Elsa Lanchester (Mrs. Charles Laughton) and Connie Boswell are coming along for the gay doings on January 30—all for the benefit of the national fight against infantile paralysis.

If you can't find the local drama desks anywhere else next week, you might possibly discover them out thumbing the newsstands. It is being grapevined that James Thurber is reporting his own play, "The Male Animal"—a smash hit on Broadway—with his own cartoons in one of the February national mags, and that William Bledsoe is blowing the lid off Hollywood in another, with a piece called "Revolution Came to Hollywood," which purports to explain how "high ideals and low I. Q.'s made possible Stalin's profitable putsch in movieland." Mr. Bledsoe is whispered to have named names and pulled no punches.

For the distinction it would give the award, DuBose Heyward—author of "Mamba's Daughters," now at the National—resident dramatist of the Dock Street Theater, in Charleston, S. C., requested the use of Clare Boothe's name for the national prize to be awarded the best one-act play submitted in the theater's annual playwriting contest. Although she is the donor of the award, Miss Boothe was quick with her retort deadly: "I do not for a second agree with you that it will add any prestige to the award. I think you could do much better to find some other name to put to it. How about the 'John Wilkes Booth Award?'"

As she appears in the stellar feminine role in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Balalaika"—Nelson Eddy is the costar—opening today on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 25 (INS).—While I wasn't a mouse under the chair when Carole Lombard and Joe Pasternak had luncheon at Universal, I happen to know what they were discussing. Joe was interested in getting Carole to costar with Charles Boyer in "Neon Lights," with Henry Koster directing. You can't pin the Pasternak down for a minute to say this is the truth—but I don't need to have him tell me, for I got my information elsewhere.

LOUELLA PARSONS

If La Lombard has Koster direct her and Pasternak produce the movie, she's a lucky girl. This team makes no flops and they bring out all the best qualities in every star with whom they work. Boyer, who is tops among the gents, will be lucky, too, for good pictures are what all our stars need—and Joe makes them.

Claudette Colbert has had to take a lot of kidding on being the highest paid gal in the U. S. A. To equal her 1938 record she will have to work hard in 1940. Well, she has an extensive program laid out for her by all the companies. If she accepts that's another matter. She has promised Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer one picture and if King Vidor has his way it will be "Witch of the Wilderness." That's the novel by Desmond Holdridge, c'apted by Lawrence Stallings, in which a yachting party is stranded and faces death on a South American island. Their primitive instincts came to the fore quite a la "The Admirable Crichton." The hero is the captain of the boat and Spencer Tracy has already been elected for that role.

The moment I got home and had a chance to talk with Hal Wallis, I asked who would play Henry Field, the New England minister in "All This and Heaven, Too.' At that time everyone was undecided, but today he told me that Jeffrey Lynn is set to play this role opposite Bette Davis and Charles Boyer. Bette is responsible for the selection of Jeffrey. She wanted him in "Dark Victory," but at that time he wasn't available. It will be interesting to see whether young Lynn fulfills the conception. In the book, Field was younger than the governess he marries, played by Bette.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Madge Evans, who married playwright Sydney Kingsley a few months ago, has a date with the stork; Myron Grainger, Mrs. Ruby Schunasi's boy friend, is in Hollywood, and so is she; Laura Whitehead, the first Mrs. Paul Scofield, is in California. She inherited a huge fortune from her second husband, Bill Whitehead, of the Coca-Cola family, and is spending some of it at Arrowhead Springs; the opening, Tuesday night, of Ciro's promises to be a big social event and reservations are coming in fast and furious. I like the name. It reminds me of happy times at Ciro's both in London and Paris; Gracie Allen is nursing a bad case of neuralgia; Jackie Cooper was Judy Garland's beau at her broadcast with Bob Hope.

Constance Collier reaches here in six weeks to be the house guest of Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard; Norma Shearer is home and George Raft couldn't be happier; Carole Landis and her new heartbeat, Harvey Seymour, doing a rhumba at Victor Hugo's; Nancy Kelly and Irving Cummings, jr., now a steady diet—at the races together yesterday; who is the mysterious South American beauty with whom Bruce Cabot was dining tete-a-tete at the Brown Derby? Irene Hervey leaves Friday to join her barnstorming bridegroom, Allan Jones, in Buffalo. Bet Allan will be glad to see her; Diane Lewis and Bill Powell were at the party Gail Patrick and Bob Cobb gave and the gang all voted in favor of Bill's choice. Frank Parker sang, and when he sings, it's an occasion for my money. All of the crowd joined in, and among the ditties was "Melancholy Baby," Bob's favorite.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Star's Car Hauls Light Tap Floor

When Eleanor Powell drove her new car on the lot for the first time, she had a surprise for fellow actors, Fred Astaire and George Murphy, in "Broadway Melody of 1940."

For, built to fold into the back compartment of the car, was a portable "tap floor" which may be unpacked and taken anywhere the star chooses.

Eleanor hit upon the idea when, upon accepting invitations to appear at numerous benefits, she often found herself handicapped by floors either too slippery or uneven, thus risking dangerous falls.

The portable floor is adjustable as to size and so light that, if necessary, Eleanor could carry and install it herself.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 25.

To me the best story of the week concerns a newly rediscovered star, Joan Crawford. A year ago bets were made that Joan wouldn't be lasting much longer at M-G-M. Why? Because she was making bad pictures. No one came right out to say she was getting rotten stories — which she was. She did a skating story called "Ice Follies;" she can't skate; it would have been a natural for Sonja Henie. That wasn't Joan's folly, but Metro's. Then Joan literally begged to play the smallest and meanest part, the cat, in "The Women." She gave a swell performance, was badly photographed. She's just given a fine performance in "Strange Cargo," with Clark Gable. And now the story bought for Norma Shearer, then given to Greer Garson, is Joan's—"Susan and God." The finish of it has one of the most terrific scenes you'll ever get in any picture. This fluttering busybody blames everybody but herself for her bad luck, at the end discovers she has not only found God, but God has found her, and through Him solved all her problems. From a feline to this in six months is going some. And I will say during all her troubles the two men who fought for her were Hunt Stromberg and Louis B. Mayer. Louis B. has always said: "She's made more money for me than any star we've ever had. She's a fighter, a swell girl." She's made mistakes—haven't we all? But she's helped more people than have ever helped her. One of the most generous girls in town, doesn't talk about it, and that's why I say, Joan is the best story of the week.

HOPPER

I don't have to tell you that Mike Curtiz is one of our finest directors. What he did for Errol Flynn in "Captain Blood" is Hollywood history. I'd like you to know what he did for Big Boy Williams in "Virginia City." Everybody loves Big Boy, but he never gets a close-up. Mike says: "He has the most natural way of doing things. If love goes." And said to Big Boy: "You're a great big dummy, but I lof you." And in a fight when he knocked a guy down, while he was smoking a cheroot, Big took out his knife, reached down, cut it off, just missed his mouth, which you'll really see in a beeg closeup in "Virginia City."

Speaking of "Virginia City," Warners will take a trainload of celebs there for the opening of the picture March 1. There still stand the homes of Vanderbilt, Mackay and Fairs, even though only a couple of hundred people live in the town. The Crystal Bar is still standing; it was there Mark Twain ran a newspaper. The mayor of the city went 'round to his leading citizens and gathered money to entertain the show folks—even got $500 from the gambling joint . . . At the sneak preview the other night, "Young Tom Edison," Mickey Rooney, gave no trace of Rooney, which is pretty hard to believe, with Fay Bainter and Virginia Weidler, and the whole picture is a winner.

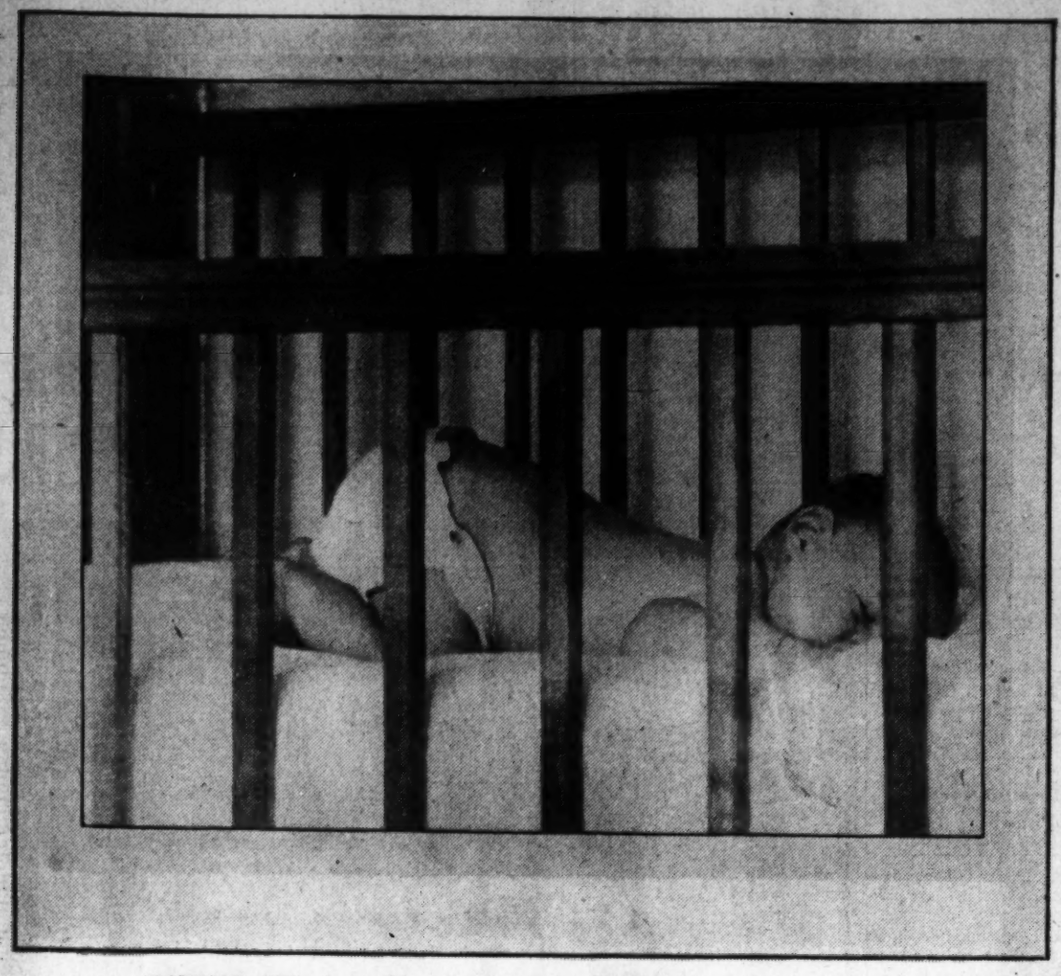
Work of Local Amateurs Honored

Of interest to anyone who has snapped a camera shutter—or anyone who hasn't, but would—is the 1940 Kodak Exhibit opening today at the Willard Hotel.

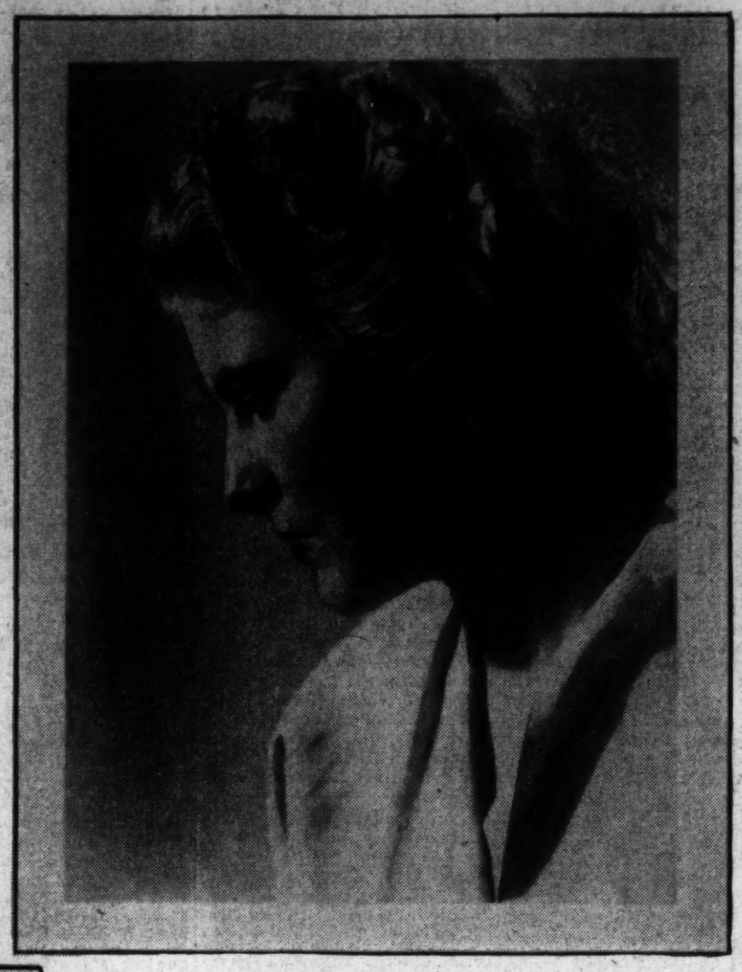
A "Best Twenty" panel gives places of honor to the work of as many Washington amateur photographers. Five from that select group are reproduced, without retouching, on this page.

Chairman of the judging committee was Don Bennett, president of the Washington Camera Council. Assisting him were Maurice Ricker, Dr. D. R. Craig and Chester L. Davis.

The collection of more than 200 photographs from all parts of the United States is one of the most varied and comprehensive exhibits assembled.



"BOTTOMS UP"—A candid, cute picture by Theodore Bishoff, of 3933 North Fourth street, Arlington, Va. The baby is Mark Bishoff, 9 months old. Mark was 3 months old when his father made the picture



"PORTRAIT"—This camera study was made by Dr. S. S. Jaffe, 1314 Eighteenth street northwest. It shows Bernadine Curley, a District government employe

"MY PAL"—A picture of Patsy, wire-haired terrier, owned by the photographer, Florence Harriss, 1360 Hamilton street

"ON TOP OF THE WORLD"—Submitted by Jerome Drown, 5505 Worthington drive, Westhaven, Md., this snapshot might well make you imagine the wind in your face instead of the subject's—Jane Gager, 5301 Massachusetts avenue northwest

"WIND AND WAVE"—Snapped by William A. Ray, 1709 North Calvert street, Arlington, Va., this photograph is one of striking contrasts. The scene, Edgewater Park, Cleveland

Surety Control Aim Denied By O'Mahoney

Denounces Charge Of Domination by Insurance Pamphlet

By the Associated Press

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, chairman of the Monopoly Committee, yesterday denounced as "utterly fantastic" any idea that an aim of the committee was to enable the Government to dominate the reserves of American insurance companies.

He said a suggestion that such was the committee's purpose had been made in a pamphlet published by the American Life Convention, with offices in Chicago.

Replying to a complaint against the manner in which the committee has conducted its investigation, O'Mahoney said that he would seek to give the insurance business an opportunity to present "its own story in its own way."

He reiterated previous public statements that "the only purpose of the committee has been to make an objective study of our economic system."

"Suspicions and fears" as to what the committee might do with respect to life insurance, O'Mahoney said in a letter replying to questions by Chairman Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, of the House Appropriations Committee, had been engendered by a memorandum recently distributed to the industry by Col. C. B. Robbins, manager and general counsel of the American Life Convention.

Making public his letter to Taylor, O'Mahoney also made public a letter, which he said accompanied the life convention's pamphlet. The letter said:

"It was thought advisable to warn them (members of Congress) of the desire of some members of the Temporary National Economic Committee for Federal supervision of all life insurance together with the taking over by the Government of industrial insurance and merging it with the social security system."

The convention letter also implied, O'Mahoney said, that it was the purpose of the committee or some of its members to abolish the agency system of selling life insurance.

"No member of the committee, or of its staff," O'Mahoney wrote Taylor, "has ever intimated to me that the Government should take over industrial insurance, nor has any suggestion ever been made to me by any person associated with this committee that industrial insurance should be merged with the social security system.

"With respect to the allegation that this committee wants to undermine the agency system, I am glad to be able to assure you that there is not the slightest foundation for any such report." O'Mahoney also took issue with contentions that the insurance business "has been subjected to an injurious and unfair attack."

BRIG. GEN. MURRAY MRS. BOYD BILL BOYD

Bill Boyd, screen player, and his wife, the former Grace Bradley, also a Hollywood star, were pictured at Fort Myer last night with Brig. Gen. Maxwell Murray evening dress. Not a 10-gallon hat in the house.

Early in the evening the nervous tension which always accompanies an event attended by the Presidential party, was reflected in the performance of the horses, but horses and riders steadied down to a consistently good performance well before the program had reached the half-way mark.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the sold-out house was filling rapidly and the Presidential escort, Troop F of the Tenth Cavalry, was drawn up in formation in the arena before the President's box. At precisely 8:25 o'clock, the call to attention was sounded by the bugles, and to the strains of "Hail to the Chief" the doors were opened and the Presidential party of five cars swung around the hall to draw up before the Presidential ramp.

On hand to greet the President as he stepped from his car was Col. George S. Patton, jr., commandant of Fort Myer. Reaching the top of the ramp the President faced a battery of cameras and popping bulbs. A flash of sabers as the mounted escort came to attention, a rifle of drums and bugles, and the band crashed into the national anthem, while the standing audience looked on through a mist of emotion.

With the President's party in the commandant's box were Mrs. Roosevelt, who topped her gown with a black velvet cloak and carried a velvet and gold sequin bag; Mrs. Dorothy Roosevelt, Mrs. Patton, little Diana Hopkins, daughter of Harry Hopkins, the Secretary of Commerce; Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson and Capt. Dan Callaghan, the President's aides. Another guest in the box was Mrs. Roosevelt's lecture tour manager, W. Coleston Leigh, of New York.

Others in the box included Brig. Gen. Maxwell Murray and Mrs. Murray, Mrs. Guy V. Henry, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Col. and Mrs. Berkeley Merchant, Miss Malvina Thompson and "Missy" Le Hand. And, of course, the back of the box was lined with the usual Secret Service men who had ridden on the running boards of the car following the President's.

From the first event, the Green Hunters class, through a two and a half-hour show that wound up with exhibition drills, the audience found every moment full of interest. Most thrilling event of the evening was the formation drill put on at the end of the evening by C Battery of the Sixteenth Field Artillery, commanded by Capt. Robert L. Taylor. Dubbed the Grey Horse Battalion when they rode in Madison Square Garden last year, they put the heavy artillery cassions through a whirling, tumbling formation that wound in and out through paths marked by lighted flares in the tanbark. Passing each other with bare inches to spare the battery drew gasps from the fascinated audience, and as a finale drew up in a swift salute to the Commander in Chief.

Another highlight of the evening was the performance just preceding the artillery drill. A musical lance drill, it was executed by 24 young girls of Arlington Hall Junior College. Wearing snappy gray uniforms and overseas caps to match, the girls led by Miss Sally Seward, put their mounts through a number of difficult formations as though they were seasoned veterans.

Others noted in boxes and down front among the spectators were the Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall and Mrs. Marshall, who were seated in the commandant's box; the Chief of Cavalry Maj. Gen. John K. Herr and Mrs. Herr; the Deputy Chief of Staff Brig. Gen. Lorenzo D. Gasser and Mrs. Gasser, Mrs. Horace K. Whalen, Miss Molly Pender Brown; Mrs. Edwin M. Sumner, wife of Maj. Sumner, who was master of ceremonies and announcer of events; Mrs. A. W. Roffe and Miss Frances Roffe.

Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert in their box, as was Thomas Morgan, who had entertained in the same box the evening before a party which included the film star, Miss Mary Howard.

High spots. During the first event the arena was decorated by two small groups of artificial trees by each of which stood lifelike painted wooden foxhounds, which had been dubbed by the post "Abercrombie" and "Fitch."

"Liz" Whitney, who was on hand both evenings and had hoped to ride, stopped by the snow and unable to ship her horses up here from her estate.

Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh drew a big hand last evening. A dislocated bone from an unusual accident had prevented her riding the night before, but she insisted on mounting last night and rode to a second place finish in the Park or Road Hack event on her mount "Palm Sunday."

Thirteen-year-old Laura Ann Hughes, the youngest exhibitor, drew a big sympathetic hand from the crowd when her horse was blown from the ring after refusing a jump, and Eddie Talbert caused hilarious laughter after his horse had kicked down two hurdles in almost circus fashion.

Miss Lisbeth Steig, the game young equestrienne, who rode last night in spite of a swollen jaw from a recent tooth extraction, came through with a flying finish and a big cheer when she won the go-as-you-like event on her mount Hi-Ho.

Tests Announced For Male Typists

The Civil Service Commission's recent announcement of an examination for Federal stenographic and typist positions is a "for men only" affair, the commission noted yesterday. Only male applicants are needed, since an adequate list of women eligibles was obtained from examinations last year, it was explained.

The commission said press announcements of the examination as a "general" one had resulted in numerous calls from women eligibles, asking why another examination was necessary although they had not yet received appointments.

$170,000,000 Issue Offered by Belgium

Brussels, Jan. 25 (AP).—Belgium offered today a new issue of short-term treasury notes to pay for her defense mobilization. The notes will run from 4 to 12 months and will draw 2.4 to 3 per cent interest. Authoritative quarters said the government hoped subscriptions to the issue would reach 3,000,000,000 francs (about $170,000,000).

Groundhog Club Ponders Declaring 'War' on Russians

Quarryville, Pa., Jan. 25 (AP).—A "declaration of war" against Russia was considered tonight by Pennsylvania's picturesque slumbering groundhog lodge in sympathy with its only foreign member—former President Pehr Evind Svinnufred of Finland.

Hibernating Gov. George W. Hensel, jr., announced that "unless things change a lot over there" the lodge would "just have to sever all relations with Russia.

What's to be done will be decided at the annual meeting February 2. Then, too, the lodge members will don high hats and nightgowns for the march down Swamp Hollow way to observe whether the groundhog sees his shadow. They say that's how they tell how much longer winter will last.

Auto Dealers Reelect Horner

Stanley Horner, well-known Washington automobile dealer, was reelected president yesterday of the National Automobile Dealers Association at the concluding session of the three-day convention in the Mayflower Hotel.

HORNER

Justified Veto

The President's veto of the Jenkins bill, authorizing payment to Ohio of old-age assistance grants withheld by the Social Security Board, has evoked loud protests from Ohio Representatives. Charges of political animus and allegations that the Federal Government is penalizing innocent taxpayers and helpless old people have been made.

Fortunately the House failed to obtain the two-thirds majority vote necessary to override the President's veto. Hence Ohio will have to pay the penalty which the Social Security Board very properly imposed for her failure to comply with the provisions of the law in regard to old-age assistance.

The least the States can do, as Representative Woodrum said in his defense of the President's veto, "is to comply with the pattern that Congress has set." There appears to be no doubt that Ohio not only failed to do so but even failed to send representatives to a hearing called by the board to answer charges of maladministration of the old-age assistance program.

Under the circumstances, restoration by Congressional enactment of the sums withheld as a penalty for noncompliance would, as the President says in his veto message, "create a precedent that would seriously endanger the success of the entire social security program."

Moreover, the demoralizing effect would not be limited to the social security field. It would extend to other forms of Federal aid and might make it virtually impossible for Federal administrative agencies to compel the States to maintain standards set by Congress as a condition of obtaining grants-in-aid.

What Price Finland?

On grounds of simple honesty Senators Taft and Danaher were wholly justified in voting against the Senate Banking Committee's approval of an increase in the lending authority of the Export-Import Bank of $100,000,000.

The bill, as these Senators pointed out, is no longer a Finnish relief measure at all, but merely a device to permit the broadening of the operations of the Export-Import Bank. And its ultimate beneficiaries may not be the hard-pressed Finns, now fighting a gallant battle against tremendous odds, but unnamed and as yet undetermined South American nations. Indeed, Finland is never once mentioned in the legislation as it stands.

It is possible that a case can be made out for increasing the funds available to the Export-Import Bank for unspecified future lending operations. But such action should be discussed on its own merits and not voted under the guise of Finnish aid.

To be sure, the provisions of the bill in question would make it possible for the Export-Import Bank to extend a maximum of $30,000,000 to any one country, which means that, in addition to the $10,000,000 credit already granted Finland, that nation could apply for and presumably receive another $20,000,000 for the purchase of agricultural and manufactured surpluses in this country.

But what Finland needs, and needs quickly and desperately, is airplanes, antiaircraft guns, artillery and other weapons of war. These she could not purchase with any credits the E.-I. Bank might grant her. And no doubt this is precisely the reason why, of the original $10,000,000 Export-Import Bank loan to Finland, only 5 per cent—$500,000—has been used.

There is a suggestion that the prohibitions embodied in the proposed measure might, with the tacit approval of the authorities, be circumvented by Finland through turning over to the Allies any agricultural and manufactured surpluses bought here and receiving, from them, in return, essential war supplies. In other words, what this country may not be prepared to do openly we might sanction if done through a transparent subterfuge.

This procedure would be as absurd as it would be hypocritical. If the Senate has not enough courage to vote an outright loan to enable Finland to buy here what she wants and needs, it would be better to drop the whole business.

Finland has had enough of lip service, the loudest of which has come from the United States. She needs practical assistance, and that immediately.

Provisional Victory

The surreptitious effort made by the disgruntled group which seeks to oust the District health officer has been, for the moment, frustrated. The Commissioners have decided to modify substantially that treacherous little section in the reorganization bill which was too cleverly designed to terminate Dr. Ruhland's tenure of office here.

For this tacit admission of what would have been a terrible blunder, the Commissioners deserve due credit. But the real gratitude is owing to the various civic organizations which have been outraged by this attempt to undermine such small measure of self-government as Washington possesses. Without the prompt and vigorous reaction of these organizations the Commissioners probably would not have had courage to take the action made public yesterday.

In the fortnight since the community first learned of Section 209, in the pending District reorganization bill, it has become abundantly apparent that two separate issues are involved. The one is the concealed effort to get rid of Dr. Ruhland, undertaken by a small group whose members now more than ever are indisposed to the limelight of publicity. The other and more vital issue is that of the means chosen to achieve the Ruhland execution.

The undercover attack on the present health officer itself aroused deep hostility, in view of Dr. Ruhland's very successful effort to improve Washington's disgraceful health record. But this attack could be explained, if not excused, by the personal resentment of those whose corns have been trampled in making the institutional improvements which the health officer found to be long overdue and imperative.

What could be neither excused nor explained was the method chosen by Dr. Ruhland's enemies in their ill-judged attempt to oust him. In order to obtain the Ruhland scalp these few Washingtonians were willing to sell the whole local effort for self-government down the river. The easiest way to remove Dr. Ruhland was to have a Federal officer, appointed by the President, named in his stead. So that method, stipulated in Section 209 of the reorganization bill, was chosen and was shamelessly accepted by the Commissioners.

In that bill, purporting to minimize Federal control over the local community and to give the District authorities a larger measure of responsibility, Section 209 stood out like a boil on the nose of Clark Gable. Instead of assisting the increasing public demand for self-government and democracy in Washington the get-Ruhland section insolently opposed it. No wonder the citizens' associations promptly took up this challenge to everything they hold most dear.

The gathering storm of protest revealed some interesting facts. The Commissioners themselves did not particularly care for Section 209. President Roosevelt disowned it. The Public Health Service made clear that it had not sponsored the move. Senator King and other leaders in Congress denounced it. Then, on Tuesday night, the District Medical Society came out in clear-cut opposition.

That final opposition, logically and clearly expressed, proved decisive. Section 209 was pilloried by the representative body of local physicians as inimical both to public health and public policy. The District Medical Society indorsed Dr. Ruhland personally for his "able, efficient and modern administration." And, on grounds of public interest, it opposed any method of selecting a local health officer "which violates the principle that he should be a representative of and primarily responsible to the citizens of the District of Columbia."

With this final and most effective repudiation of Section 209 the Commissioners had no alternative except to withdraw it, which they did yesterday. It is understood that the substitute provision, to be drafted by the corporation counsel, will permit, but not specify, Presidential appointment of a Federal health officer for the District if and when a vacancy occurs.

Until Mr. Seal has completed the drafting of a substitute for Section 209, judgment on its wording must be reserved. But a word of warning is clearly in order. Any substitute which might be detrimental to the effort for a greater degree of self-government in Washington will be resolutely opposed. And the substitute for Section 209 will be scrutinized the more closely because the latter has so clearly demonstrated how easy it is for a small and prejudiced group to pull a fast one on this disfranchised and largely defenseless community.

Snowbound

The heroic energy of the State roads commission appears to have put an end to the isolation from the rest of the world for about 24 hours following the big snowfall of certain communities of southern Maryland and the lower Eastern Shore. By this time, very likely, the mails and the delivery and telephone repair trucks, possibly even the school buses have managed to get through to all but the remotest sections.

No doubt this isolation, brief as it was, meant a good deal of hardship. Infants were cut off from their supplies of milk and the sick from medical attention. Certainly, this sudden paralysis of traffic served to remind us rather painfully of what vital dependence we now place in our road systems and our automobiles.

Some generations ago almost any rural community situated at some distance from a railroad, might, in the course of a hard winter, find itself cut off even for weeks from the rest of the world. In parts of New England it was usual for farm families to find themselves separated by impassable drifts from their nearest neighbors for days on end,

Such an experience was probably less arduous than it sounds, for the weather rarely caught these communities or families unprepared. There were, besides, certain positive benefits of isolation of which the people of those times were unaware. A community, for instance, that was free of infection when the first flakes of great snowstorms began to fall was safe, as long as it remained snowbound, from the epidemics that once ravaged the cities and larger towns.

Something of the same sort might apply to the moral and spiritual epidemics so rife in the world today. Thus a millennium ago in many a mountain monastery, guarded by snows, some light of civilization flickered far above the universal darkness of the Western World. And perhaps more than one of our southern Maryland neighbors may sigh as he watches the snowplows devour his short-lived Shangri La.

The Netherlands Also

The Dutch government is about to follow the example set by the United States by marking up the value of its gold reserves in terms of the depreciated guilder, taking the so-called revaluation profit for its own use.

When our dollar was devalued, the Treasury took over at once the so-called profit, transferring $2,000,000,000 of it to the exchange stabilization fund. The Netherlands, however, simply permitted the guilder to depreciate after suspending the gold standard in 1936 and now has a managed currency quoted at somewhat less than 80 per cent of its former gold parity. So, under the financial pressure of war, the Dutch government has turned to revaluation of its gold holdings, a simple bookkeeping operation, as a quick and easy way to obtain a considerable amount of needed revenue.

The decision to spend the profits of revaluation does not, it is said, imply any formal devaluation of the guilder. The country will remain off the gold standard and the currency will continue to be managed as at present. However, in marking up the value of gold holdings about 18 per cent—slightly less than the actual depreciation of the guilder—the government virtually serves notice that there is no thought of a later return of the guilder to its former gold parity.

The proposed revaluation plan, while not unexpected and wholly in line with what other countries have done, nevertheless, calls attention to the widespread declines in the exchange value of leading currencies since the dollar itself was devalued. The decline in sterling has been exceptionally pronounced since the outbreak of war. And currencies linked to sterling have likewise fallen.

The drop in the exchange value of other currencies, while the dollar remains stable in terms of gold, results in an appreciation of the dollar. That affects our export trade adversely and tends to encourage imports. Of course, under present abnormal conditions, the effect of new exchange relationships is obscured. But when peace returns and a measure of normality is restored, problems of currency stabilization will become insistent.

Incidentally the trade concessions given and received under reciprocal trade pacts will have to be reviewed and doubtless modified in some cases to allow for new wartime exchange relationships between the currencies of the parties to an agreement.

Conscripting Bacteria

From the Los Angeles Times.

What may prove one of the most important bacteriological discoveries in a decade is reported from Harvard University as promising an early end to epidemics of European typhus fever, called the worst of all war diseases and for centuries a devastating plague.

Oddly enough, however, the discovery is not of a new vaccine but of a method for making an old one fast enough to keep up with the ravages of the lice-borne disease. Almost literally it amounts to the application of factory mass production methods to the propagation of bacteria.

Science has long been helping industry; now it seems to have been industry's turn.

Two Headlines

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your three-column headline on January 23, "Social Register Hears Miss Morgan Urge Help for French Refugees—400 Turn Out for Luncheon at Which Only 300 Were Expected," raises questions.

Where were the 400 (and your reporter to describe their gowns) at various meetings for the Spanish refugees? Have these American women turned out to aid the Chinese, homeless because of our furnishing Japan with scrap, oil and airplanes? Has the Social Register heard of our own share-croppers, of two million children in the United States who cannot go to school because they have not rags enough to cover them?

Miss Morgan states that the French refugees from the villages in the war zone "are a completely dislocated civilian population that is our concern."

France, through her treaty-breaking, has caused the roads of Czecho-Slovakia and Poland to be choked with refugees, but it is difficult to believe that she made no provision for moving her own people back from the Maginot Line.

However conditions may be in France, there is a complete dislocation of civilian population right here in the U. S. A.

Lessons On Mounting A Horse

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If all the horse laughs evoked by Gene Autry and his mounting instructions in this morning's Post could be heard by him at one time, he would probably take up knitting or cutting paper dolls.

Such incompetent instruction is not only ridiculous but downright dangerous, for sometime, somewhere some tenderfoot will try to mount a skittish horse by the same method and land in the hospital if not the cemetery. Better riders than Gene Autry ever dreamed or pretended to be, have met their Waterloo by just such carelessness.

Never mount any horse facing forward, and never mount any horse with a loose, sloppy rein. What is the profit of winning an argument and losing your life? Few horses stand absolutely still while being mounted; some are trained to start forward when the rider reaches for the saddle; some are naturally nervous or impatient; others dislike the rider and resent his clumsy movements; still others purposely crowd toward the rider to prevent him from mounting.

Whether you are from the East, the West, the North, or the South; whether you are mounting a riding academy pony, a high strung thoroughbred, a sleepy plow horse, or a snappy Western bronc, gather up the reins snugly (not tightly) upon the top of the horse's neck with the left hand, drawing the left rein just a bit shorter than the right rein. This will keep his head toward you and prevent him from crowding with his body.

Being sure your footing is secure underneath, and that your shoes or boots are neither muddy or icy, stand beside his left shoulder facing backward and while balancing yourself with your left hand upon his neck, grasp the stirrup and turn it around with the back side toward you and insert your foot. When (and only when) you are sure that your foot is well placed in the stirrup, grasp the horn or fork of the saddle with the right hand and swing up. The movement of the horse as he starts forward will automatically pivot the rider into the saddle, and you have never been in any danger of being kicked, crowded, overbalanced, or jerked off your feet during the entire process.

LeROY L. BRANDT.
Washington, Jan. 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gene Autry's technique in mounting a Western saddle conveys a wrong idea of the most practical method employed in getting quickly, safely and efficiently into place astride a spirited and fast-starting Western range horse.

Like many other "Western" presentations theatrically evolved in the Hollywood spirit, this technique suggests the "wild West," as created by Eastern-born writers of thrill-filled pulp magazine fiction, where all "cowhands" "tote" "six guns" and shoot unerringly from both hips.

Back in 1915 I happened to be a California movie director, and 50 years ago I also did some broncobusting and range riding, and in 1906 I was a policeman during the San Francisco earthquake-and-fire period. Through five generations my paternal side of the family in America was identified with ranching on a large scale and with the raising and breeding of range cattle and of horses chiefly produced for saddle purposes.

My great-grandfather, after pioneering westward from North Carolina as the first white settler in western Missouri, founded Kansas City in 1822. My father, having crossed the plains to California by covered-wagon train convoying many cattle and horses, was, in the early 'sixties, while head vaquero (cowboy) of the Rice herds of 5,000 head of cattle grazing on the vast and unfenced plains of the San Joaquin Valley, rated the most expert rough-rider and vaquero in the Far West and in competition defeated the best from Mexico.

But in all his Western experience my father never owned or carried a pistol, never wore "chaps." Never in 30 years of familiarity with California cattle ranches did I ever see a cowboy toting a pistol.

The approved method in very practical range riding was never to grasp the horn of the saddle, either to get up or to stick on. Such a display revealed the "gringo," the "Easterner." To mount, one held the reins (as always) in the left hand, faced toward the horse's head, and with the same left hand also took a generous and firm short grip on a handful of mane just in front of the withers. Thus set, the rider then did several things simultaneously: thrust the left toe into the stirrup (a signal for the horse to break from the mark), swung the right leg in a wide arc to clear the cantel as the forward pull of the horse helped hurl the rider into the saddle. The right hand and arm waved free in balance and in readiness. To pull aloft by gripping the horn means to pull the saddle out of position or wrinkle the saddle-blanket next to the horse's back. To face rearward and hand-hold the stirrup looks like a Central Park idea.

Fiscal Responsibilities

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of January 22, "Helping The Child," was in general so appreciative, that I would hesitate to call attention to one error in it, were it not that the misapprehension thereby created might easily have serious results.

In the course of the editorial you state . . . "it (the Report Committee) threw the whole financial responsibility upon the Federal Government." As a matter of fact I think the Report would not have received a single vote of the conference had it proposed to throw the entire responsibility upon the Federal Government. The Report proposed to continue and emphasize existing local and State fiscal responsibilities.

It proposed Federal participation only when these efforts of local and State authorities still failed to deal adequately with imperative needs in particular areas. We had in mind primarily public health and education, but also public relief. In every case that we had in mind, the full operating responsibility remained in the hands of the State and the localities, and the Federal Government was to play a minor factor in even the financing—but we think a very necessary one, an indispensable one in fact.

I would appreciate it if you would correct this impression because the difference is fundamental.

Blood And Serum Bank

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On behalf of the board of directors of the Children's Hospital I write to thank The Post for the generous part you are taking in the promotion of "America's Card Party" in February for the maintenance of a permanent blood and serum bank Children's Hospital.

This blood and serum bank was established and is now a "going concern" as a result of the numerous Valentine card parties which were enjoyed by thousands of our people last February and from which over $2,500 was realized. During 1939 more than 3,000 blood transfusions and countless serum treatments were given at Children's Hospital. Nothing like this volume would have been possible without the blood and serum bank. Undoubtedly it saved the lives of scores of children.

There never was a time when this important adjunct was not needed. Now that it has been put in operation the need has been demonstrated and we know how imperative it is that funds shall be provided in order to continue this life-saving work.

Budget Balancing

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the Post of January 22, Mr. George Galloway made an eloquent plea for a double standard system of bookkeeping, covering current and capital expenditures. By its use our economic tamperers of the New Deal blunderbund would be enabled to juggle budgets in a clumsy attempt to excuse their extravagance, and gloss over their failures and delvings into state socialism.

What we really need is a budget so incontestably in balance under any system that resort to fiscal legerdemain will be impossible and nature faking unnecessary.

The obligation rests with Congress to dismantle the Santa Claus laboratory which has prevented any attack against the New Deal's biggest unsolved problem, unemployment; to trim the bloated bureaucracy to workable size; and to curb the spending mania.

A Fall From Grace

The other day in Florida I fell from grace—I went fishing yet again, after my latest never-never resolution. But look—there sat the Atlantic, thumbing its nose at me; and there rocked fishing boats in plenty, their tall outriggers waving in wide arcs with the swinging of the wind and tide. So what was I to do? There is only one outdoor sport I prefer to fishing, and that is breaking a resolution. So, as I could do both in one act—well, you see.

Hopping into a car at Hillsboro Club (Florida's loveliest caravansary), the other hardy early morning guys and I, sweater-bedight, drove to Boca Raton, the site of the world's swankiest club, bar none. Don't take those last two words seriously, since the prohibition law was repealed.

There, after crossing a drawbridge, we trotted down some stairs and boarded a boat—a cute little cabin cruiser about 25 feet long. As a novice at the deep sea stuff, I was assigned the place of honor (if the printers get that "place of horror," don't stop to correct it), the right-hand frontmost of the four swivel chairs arranged for the sedentary pescadors (gee, I'm using some costly words).

First we trolled through shoal water and with white rags tied to our hooks, with light tackle for "blue runners." If it had been off Ocean City, Md., they would have been called "bunker;" a sort of slum-dwelling poor relation of the mackerel family. These we were to use for bait; the method being, if the catch of blue-runner be plentiful, to wire their mouths shut and fasten them, alive, to the large-tackle hooks. If the catch be niggardly, then the blue runners are split up, which is not so good. The live bait swims vigorously and gets the game much more agitated than a mere uncooked filet wriggling along through the choppy waves.

Well, we got the blue runners, and went into the business of glutting the market with fish steaks.

After a bit of trolling, with gulls trying to snatch our bait as it wobbled along atop, the Boston rector who had the swivel chair and big tackle opposite mine (our reels were 6 inches or more in diameter), got a strike and the fight was on.

I say fight, and that is the right word. When I used to read the tales of fights with a hung fish, I copiously punctuated my reading with poohpoohs and any number of pishtushes. Never again. That is a fight, bringing in one of those hundred pound fish that actually weigh from 15 to 25 pounds when you get them in. I shudder to think how big one of those boys would be if he got away!

I watched the wiry little minister struggle with his prey and thought it must be a whale. When finally they landed it with the gaff and it was in the ice box astern, I did a lot more scornful thinking. I said to me, in the strictest confidence, "that old boy must be about petered out; must have at least one gam in the tomb. Anybody who couldn't just haul that 14-pound king mackerel in, without hestitating, is a physical wreck and has no business going out fishing with he-men who have their health!"

About the time that pitying thought was fully developed in what I laughingly call my mind—whambo! My own line got such a jerk that the pole-butt, ensconced in the front of my swivel chair, left its socket and nearly got away from me. Everybody yelled:

"Hold him! Keep him coming in! Attaboy! You've got 'im!"

I said to myself, between gasps, as I held that 150-pound monster, "Now, if the preacher had hung a baby like this one, he'd have had something to struggle with and pant and sweat about. This is a fish as is a fish."

Several times, I thought he had me. Despite the fact that I was holding on like grim death, he would exercise his privilege and use the drag on the reel, making her sing like a storm through the rigging while he took a little journey back toward where I had connected with him. The captain, of course, had given the motor the gun when the fish had struck, and was adding his gasoline pull to my feebler one.

Eventually, at a particularly long last, I got him to where the most of the wire leader was above water, and the captain took charge of the still-fighting whale—which turned out to be a twin-brother to the one that had so well-nigh conquered the clergy! You can easily duplicate my humble, penitent thought at the time. Yes, the preacher's guppy was as big as my whale, and none of it made sense.

Next day I went out (what's the use of breaking a resolution unless you do it right?) and hung an 18-pounder; but no fish will ever again feel as big and strong to me as did that first 14-pound kingfish that nearly pulled me in.

In fact, I said to him, once, when I was pausing for breath and he was using the drag:

"Old feller, what's the use of both of us being so doggoned stubborn? One of us will have to compromise. If you don't give up and come in pretty soon, I'll jump overboard and join you. For I've fully made up my mind that you and I are going to get together."

If you never deep-sea-fished and never hung one of those really good-sized fellows (they catch kingfish as heavy as 45 pounds, groupers weighing 75 and sailfish weighing 100), you have never known what the real thrill of fishing is. And unless you've fought a good one for an hour or so and then pulled in his head only—the rest of him having been neatly cut off by a shark or a barracuda, you haven't experienced the depths of human despair.

Reverse Propaganda

GEORGE SPELVIN, the average American, has been running a fever about this business of raising money for the Finns, and last night when he came home he threw the old lady an argument. He often does this to get straightened out. He uses the old lady for his other self, but she is smarter than his other self—or his regular self, either, if it comes down to that—so she usually bends his ears back. Then Mr. Spelvin adopts her ideas on the proposition as his own, which is legally all right, because she is his old lady and what's hers is his.

Like last night, Spelvin said "It certainly looks suspicious to me."

"What is suspicious about it?" she asked. She didn't bother to ask what looked suspicious, because her part is to give him an argument. Sometimes before they are through he will be arguing her way, and then he will go around impressing people how smart he is on her ideas.

"What is suspicious about it?" she said.

"Why, sending all this money to those Finns," Mr. Spelvin said.

"I don't see anything suspicious," she said.

"That's all you know," said Mr. Spelvin. "You know what they are saying, don't you? It is a conspiracy to get us hopped up and then get us into the war to save the Jews."

"Who has been giving you that?" she said.

"Why, it's all over town," he said. "Everybody is on to it. Ask anybody."

Mrs. Spelvin Throws A Few Oral Darts

"THE FINNS ain't Jews, are they?" Mrs. Spelvin said. "And the Norwegians ain't Jews, too, are they?"

"No," he said, "but that ain't the idea. The idea is the Jews are sore at the Nazis, so we get sucked in to help the Finns against the Russians, and then the Nazis move in to help the Russians against us and the Allies. So we win the war for the Jews. That's why you see so many Jews rooting for benefit shows for the Finns."

"Jews like Herbert Hoover," she said.

"He is a stooge for them," Mr. Spelvin said.

"And President Roosevelt, too?" she said. "Are Hoover and Roosevelt partners now?"

"Don't be clever," he said. "When you run out of arguments you get nasty."

"Well," she said, "I always heard Hitler said Russia was under Jewish domination, and sometimes you used to say the Communists were all Jews. And now you are telling me the Jews are trying to drag us into a war to lick communism. Why, I can remember when you said the Communists ought to be wiped out, and now that some Jews want to help the Finns wipe them out you are against the idea. You want to pull yourself together. Are you rooting for the Communists now?"

"No," he said. "I am against the Communists and fellow travelers, too."

The Mister Shows A Change Of Heart

"WELL, the Nazis are fellow travelers in my book," Mrs. Spelvin said. "You said yourself they are going to help the Russians against the Finns and the Allies, and against us, too, if we get sucked in against the Bolsheviks."

"And that is what I am still saying," Mr. Spelvin replied. "What I say is it is a conspiracy by the Russians and the Germans against the decent countries, and they are pulling that Jew stuff on us so nobody will want to help the poor Finns. Like you said yourself, the Finns, the Norwegians and the Swedes aren't Jews or Communists, either, but the Russians are Communists and the Germans are fellow travelers. So when anybody goes to help the Finns fight Bolsheviks then all the Nazis around here start this propaganda about a conspiracy to have this country rescue the Jews from Germany. That is like I said when I came in. I said, 'It certainly looks suspicious to me, all this propaganda to keep us from helping the Finns.'"

"I guess you must be right, my hero," Mrs. Spelvin said.

"Sure," said Mr. Spelvin. "It is one of the most suspicious things I ever saw." That propaganda is all over town."

Public Health Service Issues Booklet on Disease

Running the gamut from amebiasis to yellow fever, a 25-cent booklet on communicable diseases was issued this week by the U. S. Public Health Service.

According to Dr. J. F. Rogers, hygiene consultant of the Office of Education, "if we put into practice all the knowledge furnished in this booklet, the number of the sick and of premature deaths would be greatly reduced."

Dr. Rogers wrote the preface to the miniature medical book, intended primarily for high school and junior college students.

Liberally illustrated, the booklet abounds in such tongue-twisters as ancylostomiasis, Hemoprilus pertussis, scarlatina and Tricinella spiyalis but it also reduces them to the simpler terms, respectively, of hookworm disease, the germ of whooping cough, scarlet fever and the germ of trichinosis.

"If people understand, they will obey reasonable rules and regulations, Dr. A. M. Stimson, author, says. "They will go to their doctors when symptoms appear and shun the quack and the patent medicine vender."

Labor And The Administration

THE NEW DEAL Administration has succeeded in awakening the hostility of the very groups whose support it has most sedulously cultivated, after it had first angered and alienated the other side. Labor is now on the warpath against the President. Mr. John L. Lewis has become the most "scathing indicter" of the New Deal. His demand is now that the politicians "give every man a job," as the best way of protecting this country against "isms."

It would, indeed, be the best way, but neither the President nor Mr. Lewis knows how it is to be accomplished without a radical revision of existing economic practices, including the practices of the trade unions themselves!

Mr. Thurman Arnold, the Assistant Attorney General and another New Dealer, has stirred the wrath of labor by proceeding to invoke the Clayton antitrust act against certain labor unions, thus reviving an old fight and a bitter one.

Even the Wagner act and its administration is no longer satisfactory to either of the two big branches of organized labor. And the President has had to resort to holding a threatening club over the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. in a vain attempt to establish peace between them.

Union Bosses Show No Special Nobility

THIS SAD STATE of affairs was foreseen by a few wise men to whom the Administration was unwilling to listen, taking its direction instead from some eager "intellectuals" devoid of what seems to have become one of the rarer qualities, although it is called "common" sense. The net effect of the Administration's policy, during the first six years, was to give "organized labor"—which in practice means trade union bosses—the idea that the Administration would back them up in anything that they could claim was good for the workers.

It is perfectly true—everybody knows it—that trade union bosses are no more gifted with wisdom, intelligence or nobility of character than any other comparable group of men.

Despite all the talk about labor not being a commodity, the trade union bosses have always regarded it as such, and have bargained on the principle of trade in commodities—to get the highest possible price, regardless of the goods.

Some New Deal spokesmen attempted to introduce the idea that labor is property, a much more enlightened idea, but its acceptance would have required a reorientation on the part both of trade unions and employers. If labor is property and capital is property, then the two are combined for the most economic cooperative use and for the protection of the equity of both. The very term "collective bargaining" implies bargaining for the sale of a commodity. It is so interpreted by trade union practice; and when they talk about "property rights of the worker in his work" they mean that, on the one side, they wish to be regarded as a commodity, and on the other as property—to have their cake and eat it, too.

Result Is Chaos In Labor Relations

THE RESULT of all this is a chaos in labor relations such as we have seldom seen in this country.

If this Administration now tries to bring some order out of the chaos it is immediately accused of "treason"—for it has promised, or given the impression of promising, something that it is unable to deliver.

Labor, which goes on pressing the Government to intervene to restrict and modify the practices of employers, to create jobs, to put the power of the state behind such things as the check-off, is furious when the Government intervenes to restrict the power of trade unions and define what may or may not be unfair practices.

The labor leaders want one part of the economic order to be bound and the other part to be free. Under such a state of affairs the automatic functioning of laissez faire ceases to operate as an adjuster, and the control process does not function either. The result is anarchy. That the anarchy has not completely upset the economic apparatus is due to the good sense of most American employers and most American workers, and to some wise bureaucrats of the Labor Relations Board. It is not due to the set-up, which is lamentable.

Mr. Thurman Arnold is out to put a stop to certain labor boss practices which are holding up American industry, stopping the factory wheels, stifling enterprise and creating unemployment, which the Government then has to subsidize in the form of relief.

Since unfair labor practices are not defined in the Wagner relations act, and since the National Labor Relations Board is not empowered by law to pass judgment upon unions, as it is empowered to pass judgment upon employers, the Government invokes the antitrust act.

Supreme Court Decisions Cited

ORGANIZED LABOR insists that this is a misuse of the Clayton act, and points out that the act "specifically exempts organized labor from its provisions." They base this claim on the statement in the act that "the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article in commerce."

The Supreme Court, in at least two instances, has held that labor unions are not exempt from the provisions of the act. The court so held in the case of the Duplex Printing Press Co. vs. Deering, 254 U. S. 443, and in the case of the Bedford Cut Stone Co. vs. the Stonecutters' Association, 274 U. S. 37. The majority decision in these cases rested on the argument that the Clayton act, as a whole, does not legalize the secondary boycott—a pet weapon of trade unions.

The two decisions have always been a red rag to labor. The A. F. of L. has always insisted that it "wants no Government interference with labor," which means laissez faire for trade unions.

But it has never, since the passage of the Wagner act, advocated laissez faire for employers.

The argument always is that employers are strong and labor is weak and that the Government must balance the scales. But in the absence of any law defining rights this is a very ticklish place for politicians to be in, for neither employers nor labor really want a balance; they both want the scales weighted by Government for one side or the other.

The dissenting opinions in the cases cited above did not for an instant support the theory that organized labor should be outside the jurisdiction of the law. In the Duplex case, Justices Brandeis and Holmes (dissenting) warned against giving the courts, under the Clayton act, the decision in a struggle between employers and workers. They said, "This is the function of the Legislature, which, while limiting the power of individual and group rights of aggression and defense may substitute processes of justice for the more primitive method of trial by combat."

In other words it is up to the Legislatures to pass laws on the subject.

Far More Logical To Amend Wagner Act

MR. HENRY EPSTEIN, the Solicitor General of New York State, who attacked Mr. Thurman Arnold in an able letter in the Times on November 26, 1939, asked, apropos "unreasonable restraints designed to compel the hiring of unnecessary labor" (referring to one of Mr. Arnold's counts against trade unions) "who is, to determine whether labor is useless or unnecessary, the employer, the workers, the courts or the prosecutor?"

But Mr. Epstein did not suggest that the trade unions alone should determine it, or that it should not be determined, but left to "primitive combat." He said that it would be far more logical to amend the Wagner act to determine, also, unfair practices by labor, so that a tribunal might develop under a statute that cuts both ways.

Since there is no such statute, and Congress is showing the usual heroism of a campaign year, the only course open to meet an obvious need is the Clayton act.

The Administration must try to get itself out of its self-imposed dilemma by such unsatisfactory instruments as it inherited, since it has devised none of its own.

National Law School To Hold Day Classes

In response to demand by Government employes who work nights, National Law School will start a day school next Monday, Chancellor Leslie C. Garnett announced Wednesday.

Dr. Charles Pergler, former Czech Minister to Japan, will serve as dean. Members of the faculty will include Francis W. Hill, jr., new president of the District of Columbia Bar Association; Julian C. Richards, former assistant district attorney; Lewis Cassidy, past dean of San Francisco Law School; Brice Claggett, assistant to director general of railroads after the war, and Walter N. Lobiner, attorney.

Behind Lewis' Roar

By Ernest K. Lindley

Attack On Third Term Calculated

JOHN L. LEWIS' position in American politics is similar in certain respects to Mussolini's in Europe. He is not a first-rate power. Nor is he negligible. If the other powers are evenly enough matched, he may be able to tip the balance. He cannot expect to dominate any combination that is strong enough to win. In any hard-and-fast alliance he is pretty sure, in spite of his vigor and resourcefulness, to end up as the horse instead of the rider.

To make the most of his political power, Lewis periodically must roar and threaten. He must try to be independent, ready to throw his weight to one side or the other. He is handicapped, however, by the general knowledge that in a showdown he cannot deliver his followers anywhere he pleases. He would not, even if he could, deliver them to a reactionary Republican running against a reasonably progressive Democrat. For that reason, he must roar all the louder when he wants to impress the White House.

Lewis, it is true, sometimes seems moved by no purpose more subtle than to show off his almost incomparable talent for roaring eloquently. But his attack on a third term for the President was no outburst of exhibitionism. It was carefully calculated. New Dealers have known for some time that Lewis would oppose a third term. He gave warning publicly a few weeks ago when he assailed the Western liberal conference which was then being worked out. His attack was based partly on misinformation as to the origin and character of the conference, but it made his own position clear. (Incidentally, the proposed Western liberal conference has now been merged into the vague, and as yet unorganized, National Conference of Progressives suggested by Secretary Ickes.)

LEWIS' ASSERTION that the President will be "defeated ignominously" if he runs again is a threat rather than a prediction. It means neither that Lewis is convinced Roosevelt would be defeated or that, if he were nominated again, Lewis would oppose him. It's a fair guess that if Roosevelt were renominated and Taft were put up by the Republicans, Lewis would be found on the side of Roosevelt. It's a good guess also that if, at convention time, the Democratic alternatives should be a third term for Roosevelt or the nomination of John N. Garner, or even Cordell Hull, Lewis would be keen for a third term.

Lewis is suspected by some New Dealers of harboring political ambitions of his own. He is a man of force and large ideas. The practical obstacles to his nomination for the Presidency on the Democratic ticket are obviously insuperable. The suspicion is privately expressed in Administration circles, however, that Lewis thinks the Vice Presidential nomination is not beyond his reach.

It is unnecessary, however, to search Lewis for political ambition in order to explain his behavior. He has some power and he will try to make maximum use of it. He is not satisfied with Roosevelt, although I am sure he prefers him to most other candidates. He wants to be consulted about the platform and the candidate. He wants a candidate who, if elected, will continue to consult with Lewis and favor the C. I. O., or at least not favor the A. F. of L., where the interests of the two branches of labor diverge.

THERE IS ANOTHER factor, which goes beyond the narrow interests of Lewis, the C. I. O., and organized labor generally. That is the shift in emphasis from home affairs to foreign affairs. As Lewis said, there is no program worthy of mention before this Congress except appropriation bills. There is no sign that the President and his principal advisers are trying to work out a national program for the next four years. The center of the President's own interest has moved to the scene abroad.

This shift is profoundly disturbing to many of the President's friends and supporters, including members of his Administration. They console themselves with the thought that it may be politically advisable in order to reunite the Southern Democrats with the progressives during the 1940 election. But they cannot dispel the fear that the shift may be permanent: that Roosevelt is seeking to divert the pressures and the ideals of the progressive movement from the home front to the foreign front. Even though he avoids war, Roosevelt may be retreading the path toward the foreign sinkholes into which Wilson poured our idealism a generation ago.

AS AN ALERT observer, with a recollection of history, John L. Lewis is aware of the danger. He is in a position to speak out, and to exert at least a little pressure. At present the C. I. O. is the only large organization which has put forward any comprehensive domestic program, good or bad, for the next four years.

The Roosevelt Administration needs a hardy threat of secession on the progressive side. It has needed it ever since the third parties in Wisconsin and Minnesota collapsed in the 1938 election. The result was to tilt the balance in the Roosevelt coalition toward the conservative side. The threat is needed all the more now since the President's own trend of mind is away from the unfinished job at home. John L. Lewis' threats may lack the weight to tilt the scales the other way. But, despite his attack on a third term, they are more welcome in the Administration than perhaps even the President realizes.

next two years, costing a total of $1,301,000,000.

[The New York Herald Tribune said it had learned that bombing planes bought here by the British are being flown over American soil by foreign crews en route to Botwood, Newfoundland, and thence ferried across the Atlantic.

[It is against the law, the paper pointed out, for planes piloted by members of the armed forces of a belligerent to be flown over American soil or for planes to be flown across the border to Canada with either American or foreign crews aboard.

[French crews were said to be performing the delivery duty for the British. With American crews they are said by the paper to fly from the California plant to some southeastern United States city and thence take off for Botwood. En route across this country the French crews are said to operate the planes at times to "familiarize" themselves with the machines.—Editor's Note.]

The emergency defense bill will supply funds for boosting the Army to 227,000 men, the Navy to 145,000, Marine Corps to 25,000 and the National Guard to 235,000. Smaller personnel increases are provided for the Coast Guard and Federal Bureau of Investigation, and additional planes, motor equipment, antisubmarine devices and training are listed.

Other funds in the bill would pay for the cost of operating the neutrality patrol and recommissioning destroyers long out of service. Including cuts made by the House, the measure is $20,176,935 under budget estimates.

Morgenthau Comment

Secretary Morgenthau, who heads a new interdepartmental committee coordinating domestic and foreign munitions purchases, said that American aircraft manufacturers could handle more plane orders if they could get the engines. Revealing he had visited several aircraft factories recently, Morgenthau said that expansion of engine production facilities was one of the chief problems facing his group.

Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, naval shipbuilding coordinator, told the House Naval Committee that if the fleet expansion bill were limited to a two-year program, the Navy could lay down 21 new ships and 81 others already authorized during this period. His figures did not include 31 auxiliary vessels.

If the bill is limited to 21 additional combatant ships, 31 auxiliaries and about 1,900 planes, its total cost will run less than $700,000,000, as compared with the original Navy five-year proposal costing about $1,300,000,000.

The 21 new ships would include 3 aircraft carriers of about 26,500 tons each, 4 cruisers of about 17,500 tons apiece and 14 1,800-ton submarines, the testimony revealed.

Admiral Robinson said $19,000,000 would have to be spent on navy yards and $9,000,000 on commercial yards.

Peace Puppet

By Barnet Nover

Japan And Wang Ching-wei

IF THE JAPANESE fail to conquer China, and there is a real possibility that victory will continue to elude them, their defeat will primarily be the result not of the weakness of their arms but the inadequacy of their understanding—particularly their understanding of the Chinese.

In Japan's dealings with China, most notably during recent years, familiarity has bred a peculiarly dangerous kind of contempt. The Japanese, especially the Japanese militarists, are sure they know and understand China. But the China they are best familiar with is a China which has largely vanished—the weak and helpless China of the empire when funds intended for the creation of a navy were used to build a summer palace; the China of the tuchuns, of the unending civil wars and indescribable political chaos; the China of the "silver bullets" and cheaply bought politicians.

The China they don't know and appear unable or unwilling to understand is the China of today.

THIS LACK of awareness that China has changed has helped considerably in getting the Japanese into their present mess.

When the present undeclared war began, the Japanese army chiefs assumed that it would be of brief duration. After all, Chiang's armies were no match for the better trained, better-equipped, forces of the Mikado.

It was their belief, therefore, that Chiang would either be smashed in short order or hasten to make peace. Neither happened. The Japanese won victory after victory in the field. One after another of China's principal cities from Peiping and Tientsin in the north to Canton in the south and Shanghai and Hankow in the Yangtze area were taken over. But the Chinese did not give up the fight.

Deprived of the eastern half of the country they retreated to the west. Cut off from all their Pacific ports they built new routes connecting free China with the outside world. Deprived of the once indispensable revenues from the maritime customs they managed to do without them.

THE NATURE of the peculiarly debilitating war the Japanese have had to wage in China has made it apparent to them that Japan could only rule China through Chinese willing to do the bidding of the island empire. They had applied that principle of indirect control with more or less success in Manchuria. It was not long after the present war began that they began to look for ways and means of applying it in China proper.

There is every reason to believe that the Japanese never anticipated the difficulties they have had in finding Chinese tools to do their dirty work. It took a long time to set up puppet regimes in such places as Peiping and Shanghai and Nanking because, the strength of Nationalist and anti-Japanese sentiment being what it is, nobody except obscure, broken-down politicians would consent to serve. And those who accepted have proved poor insurance risks.

No wonder, then, that the work of setting up a puppet central government, under Japanese direction, has proved so difficult.

AT FIRST they flirted with the idea of making the late Wu Pei-fu, the most intelligent of the old-line tuchuns, the head of the contemplated regime. But Wu proved uncompliant.

More recently they have set great store by Wang Ching-wei, who comes closest to being the kind of a man they want for the job. But on the eve of Wang's accession to the headship of the contemplated pro-Japanese government some of Wang's followers made known the terms of Wang's agreement with Tokyo. The new regime, if and when it is set up, will thus begin with the enormous handicap of having undisguisedly sold out—and sold out for a song.

It would be absurd to deny that there is war-weariness in China. For two and a half years that country has been subjected to fearful punishment. The human frame can stand just so much.

No wonder, then, that when Wang Ching-wei recently announced that while he favored peace he would vigorously uphold Chinese sovereignty, he did receive a certain amount of discreet support in Shanghai and elsewhere in the occupied area. And despite his frequent changes of his political coat from violent critic of Chiang Kai-shek to collaborator and again to rival, he did continue to enjoy some of the prestige of one who, for years, had been close to the person of Nationalist China's founding father, the late Sun Yat-sen.

WANG CHING-WEI has toyed with the idea of becoming the head of a rival Chinese government for well over a year and a half. He has been openly in opposition to Chiang Kai-shek and against the continuance of the war for more than a year. It has been assumed, however, that he would not carry out his plans of setting up a rival government until after he had received a binding promise of reasonable peace terms from the Japanese.

The peace terms he appears to have accepted can only be regarded as reasonable by those who believe that Japan's actions in China during the past 30 months constitute a form of "cooperation." They are more drastic even than the notorious 21 demands of 1915. They would saddle China with an army of occupation whose withdrawal, if ever undertaken, would be entirely at Japan's pleasure. They would reduce China to the status of Manchukuo.

These terms have proved too much for some of Wang's own crowd. That is probably why they recently let the very dismal cat of his complete subservience to the Japanese, out of the bag. Because Japan badly needs a victory of prestige to divert the public mind from the stresses and strains of the war and the grim possibilities inherent in the expiration of the Japanese-American commercial treaty, the setting up of the Wang regime may now be hastened. Wang himself may be so entangled in the web of his restless ambition as to be unable to refuse to do Japan's bidding. But this latest chapter in his curious career is hardly likely to be the pleasantest or the most profitable. You can't govern China without face. Wang has lost it.

Patronage Not Sportsmanship, Freshman Tells Amazed House

By James D. Secrest

Post Staff Writer

Achievement of sportsmanship in American politics through the elimination of patronage was proposed to a puzzled House yesterday by one of its freshman members, T. V. Smith, who is a professor of philosophy when he's not a politician.

For a half hour he poked fun at some of the "sacred cows" of politics, at the avowed indorsement of civil service by both the Democratic and Republican parties, and concluded with a lament that members of Congress do not have the time to be statesmen.

Member-at-large from Illinois, Representative Smith, recently engaged in a series of radio debates with Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, candidate for President.

Smith began his tongue-in-the-cheek oration with the remark that he had selected civil service as his topic because there was no danger of "getting in bad with anybody here or with my constituents back home" and because it was one subject upon which the House was in entire accord.

Too Much for Some

He referred slyly to the Ramspeck bill to extend the merit system to all New Deal employes, a measure which has been tied up in the House since the first session.

Civil service's popularity as a political talking point, the professor-politician said, is due to its unimportance rather than to its importance.

This bit of reasoning was too much for some of the members and they began looking for their hats.

Then turning to the subject familiar to all of his listeners—patronage—Prof. Smith said:

"When we have formalized the whole of our Federal personnel under the civil service we shall have established a spirit of sportsmanship for the first time in American political life.

"I for one am ashamed as a public office holder when I know that I already have the advantage over any man that offers to run against me because of the very office I hold. It ain't right and it ain't sportsmanship."

Smith explained that "you cannot legislate sportsmanship directly."

Then he produced a palliative for the earlier dose of political philosophy.

"I want to do my part," he said, "to remove from the mantle of the practicing politician the aroma of skullduggery by low, compromising fellows who are in politics because they cannot make a living any other way."

Actually, he continued, the practice of politics requires extraordinary skill.

"It takes an extraordinary person with an unusual bent of mind, with an unusually soft heart, and an unusually thick skin to be a politician," he explained.

He expressed regret that members are kept so busy with a number of things that they don't even have time to learn the art of public speaking.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Radio Education

Homework by radio is the latest in education. We may presently hear of the little boy who got "E" in radio.

A child's education may ultimately depend on good reception and whether there was much static in his formative years.

"Little Nell was cut out to be bright," some fond parent may explain in days to come, "but her outside aerial fell down at a crucial period in her education."

It has remained for the New York City Board of Education to introduce homework by radio. Teachers discuss subjects over the air 15 minutes at night, and the pupils report the next morning. Little Willie's excuse, "But, teacher, popper was using our set to get Bennie Goodman," will presumably not be acceptable.

We can imagine the conversation between mommer and her boy in many a home:

Mother—Now, Milton, don't you want to listen to the radio now?

Milton—No.

Mother—But your homework is on the air.

Milton—That's why I don't wanna lissen to the radio.

Mother—Be a good boy, Milton, and tune in.

Milton—Aw, I don't wanna.

Mother—Why not?

Milton—I don't feel like radio.

Mother—But you felt like radio when Charlie McCarthy was on.

Milton—Yes, but he doesn't ask me any questions the next morning.

Mother—If you don't listen to the radio you'll grow up and be ignorant, and what happens to boys who grow up ignorant?

Milton—They get radio jobs at $5,000 a night.

Mother—It's a wonderful thing to get school work over the radio.

Milton—What's wonderful about it?

Mother—Everything. When I was a little girl I had no radio to listen to and get my homework.

Milton—Those were the days!

Mother—Think of it! Just sitting in a chair by a radio and having your teacher come to you by air.

Milton—I get enough of her in school. Besides, it's not so easy. Last night I had an important lesson and I got my teacher, two shipwrecks, a mystery drama, a British war and the United States Marine Band all at the same time.

Mother—No more nonsense. Tune in and do your homework.

Milton—Okay, mom, but if I grow up stupid you'll know this was a lousy radio set.

Bacon Lends Itself to Many Uses

Sandwiches Are Excellent Food For the Children

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

BACON and eggs probably will always remain the old American standby, yet there are many other roles in which bacon can be featured. Its characteristic flavor makes it an important addition to muffins, biscuits or waffles, when it is diced, cooked until crisp and added to the batter.

Martha Ellyn

Rice muffins and bacon are just the thing for these cold days, and these are easy to make, a little different and particularly good.

Rice Muffins with Bacon

Sift flour, measure 1½ cups and sift again with 4 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Add 1 cup cooked rice and 1 cup milk to 1 beaten egg and mix thoroughly. Add the dry ingredients. Oil bottoms of medium-sized muffin pans and line the sides of each with a slice of bacon. Fill ¾ full and bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, for 30 to 35 minutes. Serve with jelly. Makes 12 muffins.

For the Children

Bacon is food for children, too. In fact, it is the first meat given to babies because of the high digestibility of its fats and protein. It is high in energy value and furnishes the body with some protein, some minerals and a small amount of vitamins. If you have toddlers about your house, fix some bacon sandwiches. Cut the bread in ¼-inch slice, dice the bacon into small pieces, fry until crisp and make into quarter sandwiches.

Bacon and cheese sandwiches are a substantial luncheon sandwich and excellent for the snack at night. Here is how you make them:

Bacon and Cheese Sandwiches

Butter slices of toasted bread. Cover with slices of bacon, then with grated cheese, and add another slice of bacon. Toast in broiler until the bacon is crisp.

Those who have a "good ear for cooking" find many ways of making eggs palatable. Those who have not may be grateful for the suggestions given by winners in this week's recipe contest. A goodly supply of strictly fresh eggs in the refrigerator, as shown in this photograph, may be the starting point for slipping a poached egg into a bread croustade that has been half-filled with cheese sauce, a fluffy omelet with mushrooms and asparagus, or the universal breakfast combination of fluffy eggs to serve with broiled bacon

Dozens of New Ways For Cooking and Serving

The Post Food Editor.

Approximately 19,000,000,000 eggs go into pies, cakes, bread and other bakery products every year, according to Government statistics. But more eggs also go to make many other appealing dishes. It is not a matter of will you have eggs, but how will you have your eggs, for there are dozens and dozens of new and unusual tempting recipes for cooking and serving eggs—the greatest single item in our national diet. The Post recipe contestants have recipes for any taste, any meal, any occasion. The following are the winners:

Shirred Eggs a la Roberta.
First Prize $3.
Herbert R. Grossman, Investment Building, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Grossman

Recipe: Grease 4 oven proof cups with butter or olive oil. Drop a fresh raw egg gently into each. Add to each cup a small blue point oyster (freshly opened), a half inch square of lean Smithfield ham, a half of a small cooked shrimp, a bit of finely chopped parsley, a drop of Worcestershire sauce, a piece of raw mushroom about size of Buffalo nickel, a pinch of garlic salt (or in lieu thereof, if you are sophisticated, a wee piece of garlic) some finely chopped fresh chives; fill nearly full with equal parts of oyster liquer and French Chablis of German Rhine wine, add a dash of paprika or freshly ground pepper. Bake in slow oven uncovered at 300 degrees for 30 minutes, having first preheated the oven for 10 minutes at 350 degrees. Just a few minutes before taking out of the oven pour over each cup a tablespoon of the wine previously used.

Banquet Omelet
Second Prize $2.
Margaret G. Smith, 201, Eighth street southeast, Washington, D. C.

Miss Smith

Recipe: Cook 1 onion choped with ½ cup freshly cooked chopped spinach in 1 tablespoon butter. Add ½ cup each of flaked crabmeat, cooked minced chicken or minced beef and cooked bacon cut fine. Heat thoroughly. Pour onto 6 well-beaten eggs and continue cooking on surface for 5 minutes. Set in moderate oven, 350 degrees and bake 15 minutes longer. Fold over in center and remove to hot platter. Serve at once. Serves 4 to 6.

Eggs in a Nest
Third Prize, $1.
Ann Myers, 5626 Thirteenth street northwest, Washington, D. C.

Miss Myers

Recipe: Combine 2 cups mashed potatoes with ½ cup chopped ham, 3 tablespoons chopped parsely, pinches of salt and paprika. Put into an oven dish and press four large hollows in it with a spoon. Break 1 egg each into the hollows and sprinkle with bread crumbs. Place a dot of butter on each egg after they come from oven. Bake in moderate oven, 325 degrees for 12 minutes.

Sherry Omelet Souffle
Fourth Prize, $1
Mabel Thompson, 829 Quincy street northwest, Washington, D. C.

Miss Thompson

Recipe: Separate 6 eggs. Lay aside 3 yolks not to be used. Beat whites till stiff but not dry. Add 5 tablespoons powdered sugar and beat 10 minutes. Add beaten yolks, grated rind of ½ lemon, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 2 tablespoons sherry. Mix quickly. Put 5 tablespoons into a slowly heated, buttered baking dish, then the remainder into a pastry tube or bag and press out in roses all over the top. Dust with 1 tablespoon powdered sugar, and bake in a quick oven, 425 degrees about 15 minutes. Garnish with maraschino cherries.

Curried Eggs
Fifth Prize $1.
Mrs. J. D. Swisher, 61 W. Washington street, Hagerstown, Md.

Mrs. Swisher

Recipe: Cook 6 eggs in water that is just below the boiling point for 30 minutes. Plunge into cold water, remove shells and slice. Melt 3 tablespoons butter in a double boiler, add 3 tablespoons flour and mix well. Add 2 cups milk gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add ¾ teaspoon salt, few grains pepper and ½ teaspoon curry powder, 1 cup peas, and the sliced eggs. Reserve 6 silces of egg for garnish. Heat thoroughly and pour into timbale cases. Garnish with slices of egg, sprinkle lightly with paprika. Serves 6.

Figs Splendid Pickled, Stuffed And in Cookies

FIGS have been a food for many a century, but too often it is forgotten that there are many interesting ways of eating them besides as a confection. The form of sugar present in dried figs offers the nutritional virtues of all dried fruits—easy digestion and assimilation. This fruit sugar is noteworthy as a quickly available source of food energy. As food for growing children with their innumerable energy requirements, the quick energy values of dried figs cannot be overestimated. The bulk and roughage furnished by figs are well known. The natural laxative properties of figs are carried with the dried fruit into cooked and baked products.

Quick cooking is now the approved method of preparation, without preliminary soaking, for better flavor and firmer texture. The many methods of using figs is delightful and economical dishes are illustrated in the following tested recipes:

Fig Oat Cookies

Rinse 2 cups dried figs in hot water and clip stems. Put figs and 2 cups rolled oats through food chopper, using medium knife. Combine with 1 cup granulated sugar and flour sifted with 1 teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon cinnamon. Add ¾ cup fat and mix with hands until well blended. Add beaten eggs and continue mixing. As there is no liquid it is necessary to cream well with the fingers. Shape into balls about the size of a walnut and place on greased baking sheet. Flatten balls with fingers. Bake about 15 minutes in a moderately hot oven, 400 degrees.

Pickled Stuffed Figs

Boil 2½ cups dried figs in sufficient water to cover, 10 to 15 minutes, depending on dryness. Drain, slit down one side, and stuff each fig with a nut meat. Press cut edges of figs firmly together, overlapping slightly. Combine 1½ cups white sugar with 1 cup brown sugar, ½ cup vinegar, 1 teaspoon each of ground cloves, cinnamon and mace, 2 cups water, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon rum flavoring in a kettle, and bring to a boil. Add the figs and cook slowly until the sirup is thick, about 30 minutes. These are ready to serve as soon as cold, or may be sealed. If evaporation is very rapid, more water may be needed. Makes about 1¾ pints.

Sopping Called Good In Diet, Etiquette

The practice of using a piece of bread to "sop up" gravy and the juices of vegetables and fruits is not only a good one, but is nutritionally sound and should be revived and put on Emily Post's list of preferred etiquette practices," said Tom Smith, secretary, American Bakers Association, to the 10,000 restaurateurs assembled for the annual meeting, National Restaurant Association, recently. "Science informs us that much of the nutritional value of vegetables often goes down the drain in water poured off after cooking. Proper cooking and retrieving what's left of the juices, or 'sopping,' is not only economical but dietetically correct."

Pickles Give That Needed 'Something'

Pickles are often that needed "something" that makes the difference between an appealing dish and an ordinary one. Following are suggestions for using pickles in an interesting form:

To garnish a meat platter with a grand flourish, make pickle fans by cutting sweet gherkins in long thin parallel slices to within ¼ inch of the end and carefully spreading the slices to resemble a fan.

Spiced peaches may be prepared any time you please by simply soaking canned peaches in the juice from a jar of preserved sweet pickles.

Next time you want to turn out a batch of sandwiches, soften ½ pound sharp cheese with a fork, then work in ½ cup chopped fresh cucumber pickle, well drained, 1 tablespoon tomato ketchup and blend thoroughly.

Calavo Enrich Salad Menus

There is a bonus of Calavo salads for all of us being declared right now—the first time that the "unusual" weather for which the State of California is famous has produced anything more than explanations.

The 1940 Calavo harvest, under the influence of an unexpected lot of daily sunshine ever since September, has resulted in an early crop. Instead of being spread over the 5 months to come virtually the entire crop of Calavo pears is ripe and ready to market now. This unprecedented sunprodded flood of fruit means sheer salad luxury to menus, but we must hurry to take advantage of it, since the unexpected bonanza won't last long and the Calavo will soon be gone.

The simplest way to eat Calavo, and the way that most universally appeals to all, is the classic Calavo half-shell. Now is the time to indulge the yen to eat the exotic fruit as casually as we munch apples. Be sure the fruit has reached the proper eating stage of softness which, as you no doubt know, is not the same thing as maturity or ripeness. You can depend on all Calavo pears having been thoroughly ripened before they left the tree, but they soften only after picking.

For your favorite half-shell Calavo salad, cut each Calavo lengthwise into halves and remove the seed. Then sprinkle with lemon juice and salt and serve the creamy, green-rimmed, unpeeled halved Calavo with a thin French dressing.

Duty Is to Encourage Young People, First Lady Tells Southern Women

Council Hears Mrs. Roosevelt At Luncheon

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

"Our responsibility is not at all to direct young people. Our responsibility is to encourage young people," Mrs. Roosevelt declared yesterday, speaking before a luncheon meeting of the Council of Southern Women at the National Press Club.

Sharing the program with her were Mary Jeanne McKay, of Florida, president of the National Student Federation of America, and Malcolm Cotton Dobbs, of Texas, executive secretary of the Council of Young Southerners, in a panel discussion of "Young Citizens in a Democracy." The talks were all pointed toward the Citizenship Institute of the American Youth Congress, which will bring to the Capital 3,000 young people from all parts of the country February 9 to 12.

Indicating that youth must find the answer to problems the older generation admits its inability to solve, Mrs. Roosevelt asserted that "they deserve our help. We should encourage them, give them the benefit of any experience we have had—not in the nature of direction, but in opening up new points of view, in order that young people may have as comprehensive view as possible of any subject they are considering. Then we shall do a real service."

Commends Spirit Of Youth Groups

She commended the spirit of members of the youth organizations "anxious to meet together conscious of their obligations to the Government, eager to meet the officials and to get across to them youth's problems. It is a healthy sign in a democracy," she declared.

Mrs. Roosevelt emphasized the fact that the 3,000 young men and women expected for the coming institute would cover a range of backgrounds and interests as broad as the country itself and that they could not be expected to agree with each other on all points or always to say things with which older persons agreed. "But it is well to bring into the open what they are thinking and to try to understand why they are thinking as they do," she said.

"Youth is the future," Mrs. Roosevelt reminded her audience.

Preceding her talk, Mrs. May Thompson Evans, retiring president of the Council of Southern Women, who presided, introduced Miss McKay and Mr. Dobbs. Miss McKay spoke for both her own organization made up of representatives from student government associations on college campuses throughout the country, and for the American Youth Congress, whose president, Jack McMichael, was unable to be present.

The term "youth movement" as applied to America has a particularly democratic significance, she said. It indicates the effort to youth "to do something about our own problems and help build a better America."

She defined as the purpose of the institute: "To teach young folks about Government and to teach the Government about young folks."

"Within the American frame we want to work and solve our problems in the American way," she said. "The American Youth Congress is composed of young Americans, born in America, brought up in American traditions. We are terribly earnest, terribly sincere and terribly young."

Southerner Tells Of Purposes

Mr. Dobbs declared that "by young people of America as a group, no other person is held in such high esteem as Mrs. Roosevelt."

He explained the purpose of his organization, the Council of Young Southerners, to dramatize the significance of coming of age and the responsibilities of citizenship for first voters; to stimulate interest in government among young people and to study problems of young people of the South.

He said his organization expected to send 60 representatives, divided equally among workers, farmers and college and church groups. After he had explained the difficulty some of them faced in raising enough money to get here, a voluntary contribution from the luncheon guests was suggested. Miss McKay offered her hat, which was passed with a net result of $50.

Mrs. Richard Hogue asked whether the Southern women there might not offer the hospitality of their homes to the young people. Mrs. Roosevelt promptly commended the idea and said the plan had already been started, that she had written the Cabinet wives, Mrs. Garner and Mrs. William Bankhead, presenting the situation to them and that "the response so far has been very good."

At the close of the meeting, Mrs. Evans introduced the incoming president of the Southern Women's Council, Mrs. Milo Perkins. About 300 women were present. At the head table, representing various Southern States, were sponsors including Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of Associate Justice Black, and Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, wife of Associate Justice Reed, of the Supreme Court; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of the Social Security Board; Judge Annabel Matthews, Miss Earlene White, honorary president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Dr. Minnie L. Maffett, who is here from Texas, present president of the same organization, and Miss Charl O. Williams, a past president of it; Mrs. I. T. Quinn, Mrs. Oscar Powell, Miss Mae Helm, Miss Isabel Ferguson, Mrs. Dave Terry, Mrs. R. W. Hudgins, Miss Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, Miss Gay Shepperson, Representative Clara G. McMillan, of South Carolina; Mrs. Charles W. Tillett, Judge Lucy Howorth, Miss Helen Carloss, Mrs. Grace Brown Stiles, Assistant United States District Attorney, Mrs. Clifford Durr; Miss Mae Rischer, Mrs. Loyle Morrison, Mrs. Benham Baldwin, Mrs. Dave Williams and Mrs. Edward McCormick.

Women Democrats Hear McNutt

Candidate Speaks At National Club's Life Members' Dinner

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, addressing the Woman's National Democratic Club at a "life members dinner" last night, declared fear and reaction on the one hand and courage and liberalism on the other were the 1940 issues between the Republican and Democratic parties.

"The Republican Party has always been a party of reaction. It is still the party of reaction," he said. "The Democratic Party has always been a liberal party and it is still a liberal party. This is the real reason why the Democrats must win in November."

Col. McNutt, citing the fact that "our country is by natural endowment, the most favorable place on earth for men to live," asserted "the chief thing this country now needs is fewer people who talk about what this country needs." The talking he objected to is being done by the Republican candidates for the Presidency, he indicated.

Under the heading of "Republicans on Economy," he checked up to them the losses following the era of prosperity in the "Roaring Twenties" and declared that present Government expenditures were "repairing the havoc wrought by that era of phoney prosperity."

"For the $24,000,000,000 debt increase, the Nation has $19,000,000,000 worth of tangible, useable assets in the form of roads, parks, buildings and other kinds of new construction," he said. "When you deduct $2,000,000,000 of bonus repayment, this leaves a net cost of $3,000,000,000 dollars to pull the country out of the abyss of dispair and chaos into which it had sunk in 1932."

He contrasted 7,854 bank failures in the last four years of the Republican administration to the 278 during the entire Democratic administration.

He asserted of the period since 1932, "capitalism and democracy were saved in the United States in the years which followed. Yet no government in recent times has suffered at the hands of the financiers and monied interests as has this one which did that job of rescue and salvage."

The Federal Security Administrator charged the Republican administrations with permitting dissipation and waste of the natural resources of the country and credited "a wise, prudent and truly thrifty Government" during the past seven years with "a ceaseless campaign to conserve what God gave America." In doing this it has provided jobs for young men through the CCC, WPA and NYA.

He took issue with Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's charge there was need for more thrift; Senator Taft's demand for budget-cutting, and Thomas E. Dewey's call for confidence and declared that, in its achievements, the Democratic Party had "mastered problems that have baffled statesmen for centuries."

Preceding Col. McNutt's address, Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, the club president, presented the life members who were honor guests, among them Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. Secretary Perkins spoke briefly, giving a message of greeting from one of the life members who was absent, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, U. S. Minister to Norway. It was conveyed to her, Secretary Perkins said, by Fru Betzy Kjelsberg, of Oslo, whom she has known many years and who is now in this country. Fru Kjelsberg told her few women had ever come to Norway who had made themselves more beloved than Mrs. Harriman. She goes over the country, according to Fru Kjelsberg, getting acquainted with the people and showing a real interest in them.

Secretary Perkins cited this zeal and friendliness as characteristic of the leaders of the party and something which "should be a pattern in a constitutional democracy such as ours."

She recalled former years when the Woman's National Democratic Club here was described to her by Mrs. Harriman as "a Democratic lighthouse in a sea of black Republicanism." "How times have changed," she observed.

Mrs. A. J. Wirtz Settled After Jaunt to Texas

Wife of Undersecretary of Interior Likes Capital, and Reading, Bridge and Theater, Misses Home State

By Hope Ridings Miller.

BACK IN TOWN and established in an apartment at the Washington Hotel is Mrs. Alvin J. Wirtz, who has rejoined her husband, the new Undersecretary of the Interior, after a brief stay in Texas.

HOPE R. MILLER

Shortly after she arrived yesterday morning I stopped by to see this Little Cabinet hostess who hails from the Lone Star State and has hardly had time to get her bags unpacked. She opened the door herself, ushered me into a sunny living room, and sat down to chat in that easy, unaffected way that's characteristic of many Texans.

Small, trim and much prettier than her photographs, she has brown eyes that twinkle as she talks, graying hair arranged in a conservative style, and a smile that you feel isn't turned on and off to suit the occasion.

Not too talkative, she nevertheless answers questions unhesitatingly, without resorting to the stock tag-line, "Oh, but that's not for publication," that one hears in coy tones all too often here.

Yes, she expects to enjoy Washington because she already has a number of acquaintances here, and she understands the town "is full of Texans." But she will miss her home, friends and relatives back in Austin which in her opinion is still the garden spot of the world.

Somehow, life shifts you around at odd times anyway, she implies. Now, last winter, she spent half her time commuting between her home and this section of the country when her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. James C. Cain, were living in Philadelphia. This year, they are back in Galveston, Tex., and she and her husband are here—almost 3,000 miles from their only child.

Reading and Bridge Favorite Diversions

As to favorite diversions—she likes reading best of all; but in between books and magazines, she likes to sandwich some bridge and the theater. She knows she will like Washington because she makes it her business to enjoy any place where she happens to be. "But of course I shall miss Texas," she says once more with a wistful, far-away look that seems to take in rolling expanses carpeted with blue bonnets and fringed with paint brush. Only now, it's all snow covered, just like Washington.

The first Capital party on her schedule was the White House dinner prior to a recent reception. She came especially for that, then returned home for a few days. She and her husband will be feted at a reception to be given next Wednesday at the Carlton Hotel by Mr. and Mrs. Welly Kennon Hopkins, whom they have known for years. Mr. Hopkins, who is a special assistant to the Attorney General, formerly served in the Texas State Senate, succeeding Mr. Wirtz.

Another new official hostess, Mrs. Francis Biddle, wife of the Solicitor General, will be back in town early next week to spend the rest of the winter. Recently she was here for a brief stay at the Hay-Adams House, where her husband is now living. They will take a house shortly after she returns from New York, where she is spending this week-end.

Capital hostessing will be no new experience for Mrs. Biddle, who already has a host of friends here. She and Mr. Biddle first moved here from their home in Germantown, Pa., in the winter of 1934-1935 when he was chairman of the National Labor Relations Board. A couple of years later, when he was serving as TVA counsel, she visited here frequently. Known to the literary world as Ketherine Garison Chapin, she is the author of three books, "Outside the Word," "Bright Mariner" and "Time Has No Shadow," and a number of poems published in Harper's, Scribner's and the Saturday Review of Literature.

Cornelia Chapin To Have Show Here

Mrs. Biddle's sister, Cornelia Van Auken Chapin, is the noted sculptor. Incidentally, she will be in Washington on February 4 to attend the opening of her show at the Whyte Gallery. Probably she won't linger long in the Capital, as she never has. Preferring sculpture to society, she foregoes the partying around in Manhattan to devote herself to her work. Her studio is located in the Murray Hill sector, where she was born and where the house of her great-grandfather still stands at Park avenue and Thirty-sixth street.

Miss Chapin, whose most successful sculptures have been carved in stone from life, is now working on a 10-inch ebony elephant to be completed in time for the show. The latter will include a number of her smaller sculpture and wood engraving. The exhibition will be open from February 4 through the month.

5 Decorated By Dr. Hu-Shih

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, is in New York, where yesterday he bestowed decorations from his government on several prominent Americans.

At a private ceremony at noon yesterday the envoy decorated Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who, with Mrs. Roosevelt, has been active in work for China relief. Last evening at a banquet of the Associated Board of Christian Colleagues in China the envoy presented medals to Paul D. Cravath, Arthur V. Davis, E. M. McBrier and Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer.

The Ambassador will go to Philadelphia Monday to be present at the opening of an exhibition of Chinese jade in the University Museum there.

Dinner Is Given By Houghtelings

The Commissioner of Immigration and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling entertained at a dinner party last night at the 1925 F street club.

Arriving here on February 15 will be Mrs. Donald McPherson, of Chicago, who will be the house guest of the Houghtelings for several days. They will entertain at a dinner in her honor.

Gen. Hill Here Doing Research

Gen. John Philip Clayton Hill, of Annapolis, has come to Washington to continue research work on the second volume of his series, "The American Government—the Federal Congress," and will be at the Cosmos Club for the remainder of the winter.

The first volume of the series, "The Federal Executive," was published in 1916. Gen. Hill was formerly United States Attorney for Maryland and served as Representative in the Sixty-seventh, Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth Congresses.

He is also the author of "National Protection, Policy and Armament," published in 1916, and of "Annotated Public Service Commission Law of Maryland."

Reynoldses Will Live Here

Mr. and Mrs. Don B. Reynolds, who are on their wedding trip in Miami and Tampa, Fla., will return to Washington February 1. The bridegroom will enter the Foreign Service School at Georgetown University. Up until the time of their marriage at Belair, Md., on Friday, December 29, he was a student at the United States Military Academy.

The bride is the former Miss Virginia Lee Maltby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney T. Maltby, of 718 Nicholson street. She studied at the Visitation Convent and King-Smith School.

Mr. Reynolds is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Reynolds, of Lamar, S. C., and a brother of Miss Genevieve Reynolds, of Washington. Before entering the Military Academy he attended Columbian Preparatory School here.

Envoys Hosts At Luncheons to Foreign Visitors

Several luncheons were given yesterday by foreign envoys in honor of visitors from other lands who are staying in the Capital.

The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi entertained for Mr. and Mrs. Gorla Guston, of Sweden, whom they knew at a previous post. The party was at the embassy on Massachusetts avenue.

The Danish Minister and Mme. de Kauffmann gathered a few friends to meet Dr. W. W. Yen, of China, whom they knew when Mr. de Kauffmann was Minister to that country.

Others Sponsor Ballet Series

Additional members of Capital society have lent their names as sponsors of the series of intimate ballets, "Fridays at Nine," for which Mrs. Roosevelt heads the patronesses.

The first will take place tonight at 9 o'clock at the Wardman Park Hotel, and the others will be March 8 and April 12. Other patrons are Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Conway Peyton Coe, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Eliot, Mrs. Edward E. Finkenstaedt, Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mrs. ZeBarney T. Phillips, and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman.

Mrs. Sutherland Mayo To Entertain Nieces

Mrs. Sutherland Mayo will entertain at a dinner at the Chevy Chase Club tomorrow for her two young nieces, the Misses Natalie Sutherland and Mary Walker, who will be presented to Capital society this spring.

Mrs. Mayo is returning to Washington today after a week's stay at her apartment in New York.

Macatees Entertain

Dr. and Mrs. Henry Cook Macatee entertained at dinner on Monday evening in honor of Commander and Mrs. Robert Kessler, of Milford, Del. The party took place at the Macatee residence at 2324 California street. Commander and Mrs. Kessler entertained Dr. and Mrs. Macatee at dinner on Sunday evening at the Army-Navy Club.

Alice Waples, Sen. Hughes' Son Married

Wedding Takes Place In Episcopal Church At Georgetown, Del.

Of interest to the senatorial circle here was the marriage yesterday evening in Georgetown, Del., of Miss Alice Josephyne Waples, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Benjamin Waples, to James Hurd Hughes 3d, son of Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes, of Washington and Dover, Del.

Senator Hughes served as best man at the ceremony, which took place in the Episcopal Church in Georgetown, the Rev. Martin J. Bram officiating. Ferns, snapdragons, lilies and white candles decorated the altar.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an original Piquot model trimmed with real Chantilly lace and a matching veil. Her bouquet was an old-fashioned cluster of gardenias, sweet peas and white lilacs. Both dispensed with attendants.

A reception at the Century Club followed. Mrs. Waples wore a blue silk crepe gown trimmed with silk fringe and a flower toque. When the bride left for a honeymoon in the South, she was attired in a basque dress of blue suede jersey with a hat to match and a cloth coat trimmed with lynx. The couple will make their home at 207 South Forty-second street in Philadelphia.

The bride attended the Baldwin School in Bryn Mawr, Pa., and is a graduate of the Fairmont School and King-Smith Studio in Washington. Her husband attended St. Andrew's Preparatory School in Middletown, Del., and is an honor graduate of Princeton. He is now at the law school of the University of Pennsylvania.

Elizabeth Hill, Mr. Lee to Wed

Capt. Harry W. Hill, U. S. N., and Mrs. Hill have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Stockett Hill, to Lieut. Fitzhugh Lee, U. S. N., son of Mrs. George Mason Lee, of Chattolanee, Owings Mills, Md., and the late Lieut. Col. Lee, U. S. A.

The wedding will take place within a few weeks in Annapolis, Md. After the ceremony the couple will leave for Venezuela where Lieut. Lee has been ordered as naval attache.

Miss Hill was graduated from Hood College in 1936. Lieut. Lee was graduated from the United States Naval Academy.

Mrs. Jackson To Hold At Home On Wednesday

Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the newly appointed Attorney General, will hold her first official at home next Wednesday in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who had planned to be at home that afternoon, has canceled her reception. Mrs. Charles A. Edison, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, also scheduled to receive on that date, has postponed her at home.

Bulgarian Envoy, Wife Entertain

The Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff entertained at a dinner last night at the legation.

Ranking guests were the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas and Senator and Mrs. William H. King.

Prince Bertil To Stop Here

Prince Bertil of Sweden will stay at the Mayflower Hotel while here on a purchasing mission which is expected to last a month or six weeks.

Tonight the Prince will enjoy a family dinner with the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom, who are planning a formal party or two for him later on.

Letters From Finland and West Front Enliven Stodgy Afternoons Locally

NEWS—Even if the letters took a month to arrive from friends in Europe—makes life in Washington seem extremely dull and stodgy.

And while most of the men correspondents are killing time by playing poker on the Western Front waiting for the big battle that doesn't come, it's the girls who seem to have the exciting assignments since the war started. Two bright particular stars are Virginia Cowles and Marvin Breckinridge.

WORD FROM "Didda" Cowles tells of her recent adventures in Finland. She had just returned to Helsinki after a trip to Hango, which was bombed badly, and reports that the damage and deadly cold are "ghastly." On the way back from Hango the car she was riding in crashed head on into an empty white truck left in the middle of the road. Her automobile was demolished but no one was hurt. But they all began to wish they'd been killed when they had to walk for miles at 3 o'clock in the morning in a temperature of 35 below.

It is hard to imagine the elegant Virginia undergoing such experiences, but adventure has been her lot ever since she started roving about Europe as a correspondent. She covered both sides of the Spanish war for a while. She was widely entertained last spring when she visited Washington to get material for some articles for a London paper. Her father is Dr. Edward S. Cowles, the New York psychiatrist.

MARVIN BRECKINRIDGE, who was making a quiet tour of Europe with her camera when war broke out, now finds herself roving reporter for the Columbia Broadcasting System. They have asked her to visit different countries and tell how the lives of the people have been affected since September. In a letter from Luxembourg recently received by Mrs. Herbert Feis, Marvin tells of her recent travels through Ireland, Holland and Denmark.

"In The Hague in December," she writes: "I was saved from a hotel Christmas by our Minister and Mrs. George Gordon, who invited me to lunch at the legation." Her broadcasts are to be heard weekly at 6 o'clock in the morning.

Miss Breckinridge is a cousin of Mrs. Mary Breckinridge, of the Frontier Nursing Service, and used to make her home here. We last saw her at the large reception given in the spring of 1939 by the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope.

A SMART RESTAURANT on Connecticut avenue looked very placid at luncheon time yesterday after these exciting tales from abroad. Seen here and there were Mrs. John R. Williams at a table with her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Leiter; chic Mrs. L. J. Wiltse, mother-in-law of John Roosevelt, wearing a mink coat and a mink-trimmed hat, with Belle Johnson; Emily Davis in a checked suit and Mary Louise Marsh, in black with a snood hat, accompanied by Ricardo Siri, of the Argentine Embassy.

THE CURTIS MUNSONS, who are visiting Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, are being feted high, wide and handsome. The Argentine Ambassador and Mme. Espil gave a small cocktail party for them yesterday and the Arthur Krocks were hosts at a luncheon in their honor. The Munsons are en route to Aiken to warm up.

ODDS AND ENDS: Additional hosts at dinner before the last meeting of the Dancing Class tomorrow are Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg and Robert Buell . . . Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn will entertain at dinner on Tuesday, and the Gifford Pinchots at a luncheon on Sunday . . . Mrs. Dwight Davis expects to return the fifteenth from her Florida plantation, but the Walter Edges, who live across the border in Georgia, will linger on until the first of March.

DIPLOMATS transferred from duty here to posts abroad are having a painful time with the furniture problem. Insurance rates for ocean transportation are now so high, and vary so often, that many are storing their household goods, and others, like Victor Mallet, formerly of the British Embassy, are selling theirs.

Many Parties Will Precede 'Gone With the Wind' Benefit

Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes Head List of Subscribers to Performance Tomorrow for Finnish Relief Fund

Many prominent members of society will entertain at parties before the showing of "Gone With the Wind" tomorrow evening for Finnish relief.

Joseph Davies, Special Assistant to the Secretary of State, and Mrs. Davies, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn and Princess Boncompagni are among those who have taken blocks of seats and will entertain friends at the movie.

The Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes head the list of distinguished subscribers to the benefit, and others include the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins, the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom, the Portuguese envoy and Mme. de Bianchi, the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, Senator and Mrs. Warren R. Barbour, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator and Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler and Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings.

Mrs. Demarest Lloyd will have five guests with her, and others who will attend include Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. George Patton, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Gen. and Mrs. Seth Williams, Mrs. Lee Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson and Mrs. H. H. Flather.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Sir Charles Ross, Mrs. William McClelland Ritter, Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed, Miss Mary Randolph, Mrs. David Edward Finley, Mrs. Cary Langhorne, Mrs. Charles M. Lea, Mr. and Mrs. John Callan O'Laughlin, Dr. and Mrs. Charles L. Marlatt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, Dr. and Mrs. Davenport White, Miss Margaret Frazer, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Proctor, Mrs. Mary Stewart, Mark Sullivan, Miss Irene Boyle, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, Mrs. Sherman Miles, Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. Harry G. Meem and Mrs. William Lacy.

Dorinda Bakenhus, Dr. Beck to Wed

Rear Admiral and Mrs. R. E. Bakenhus, of New York, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorinda Rogers Bakenhus, to Dr. Lyle V. Beck of Philadelphia, who is widely known here.

Miss Bakenhus obtained her Master's Degree from Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, and is Director of Social Service at Hahnemann Hospital.

Dr. Beck, a Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Pittsburgh, is instructor in the Physiology Department at the Hahnemann Medical College.

The wedding will take place March 9.

Mr. and Mrs. Ickes Are Dinner Hosts

The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes entertained at a dinner party last night at their home, Headwaters Farm, in Olney, Md., in honor of Mrs. E. Gibbons Meyer.

Mrs. Meyer, who has been the guest of Mrs. Ickes for several days, will leave today for New York before returning to her home, San Francisco.

Friends of France Make Miss Hughes A Fault-Finder

Alice Hughes

IT is reported among our society folks, and I don't mean the overdressed and plus-photographed dollies who hang around the fancy saloons, that a lot of them are criticising star-spangled American women who roll dainty bandages all day for so far non-existent French war wounded, when there is so much practical work to be done for the needy in our own land.

I'm no cranky old fuddy, but I think I'll take a dime's worth of that fault-finding. Our Nation passes through critical times, yet these semi-professional lovers of la belle France are knitting countless booties for the gallant poilus of France's magnificent armies, safely holed up in the impregnable Maginot Line for the winter. Maybe booties by the thousand would be of great aid to the Finns, but somehow Finns aren't stylish. Did any of these devoted souls ever have villas in Helsinki for the summer? Not on your last year's Hispano-Suiza, they didn't.

Miss Anne Morgan, J. P.'s sister, is America's leading lover of La Patrie, and during the World War No. 1 her work for France was invaluable, endless and truly devoted. She has hurled herself, 21 years later, into the second edition, and perhaps American response is not quite so ardent. Thousands fought, died, bled, gave money and loaned it to our second motherland in those days, and perhaps we're looking for others who need help more, these days. Some others who hang about the French Riviera are now whooping it up for soldiers canteens there, and saying some pretty silly things about the need. One local lady actually said that as many as 100,000 French troops pass through Cannes daily—and I'll bet a Dijon franc that the town hasn't seen that many front-bound troops since the war began.

Enthusiasm is great. But look around America, girls. France is doing wonderful, up to now.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The town being full of store buyers from all America these weeks, my myopic orbs are practically gone from peering at fashion clothes and all manner of new duds. I saw Brother Mainbocher, the Hawk-eye Molyneux, display his brand-brand new corset, the cylinder one, which doesn't pinch in the poor old waist, but is just a long cylinder. He calls this one the polka dot. Seems like he's going to shift the corsets every six months. Lay off, Main old kid.

JUNE HAMILTON RHODES gingered up her annual wool fashion show this week by having a live but quite small white lamb encaged at either side of the stage where the mannequins paraded. The lamb's bleats were always good for laughs from the customers.

She's Pouring From Four to Six

Jane Bryan, youthful Irish actress who has been creating interest for herself in recent films, poses against a Warner Brothers' set surrounded by her tea service. She is dressed, not like a Hollywood siren, but in a classically simple gown that any local hostess might affect. Zip Pleater For Curtains Now on Market

Mrs. Sew-and-Sew will be pleased to meet the new zip pleater for curtain headings that is making its bow in the January markets. This is a patented affair that enables you to have perfectly tailored pleats in your curtains simply by attaching it, then pulling the draw string. It's something to look forward to—it should be in the stores within the next few weeks. Watch for it if you're interested in an easy and revolutionary way to have the headings of your curtains pleated pr[illegible]ally.

Another radical improvement in the art of curtain-making is promised in a recently patented rod called "ready-fold" because it makes the curtains self-pleating. It's an extension rod and it should make life a lot simpler for a lot of us.

Already on the market and receiving an enthusiastic welcome is "permisette," the new permanent finish marquisette curtain that can be washed without requiring starching or ironing since it keeps its smooth crispness beautifully.

Leap Year Proposal (1912)

"Hello . . . May I speak to Mr. C-C-hester Hare? . . . Oh-er I—I didn't recognize your voice, Chester . . . This is Miss Shrink—I mean Elsie . . . Elsie Shrink . . . no, SHRINK.

"W-w-ell, how are you, Chester . . . Oh, I'm just fine . . . How are you? . . . That's good. Well, why I c-called up was—what? . . . I AM right at the telephone. Well, what I wanted to say was—what? . . . I said, hasn't it been cold? . . .

"Yes, simply terrible . . . Yes, I had to put on my—that is what I mean its been TERRIBLY cold?

"Well, Chester, I hate to bother calling up this way, but—what? . . . I AM as close as I can get to the telephone . . . Well, all I said was—were you very b-busy?

"Oh, no, I'm not at all busy—no, I mean I am terribly busy . . . Well, the girls are all getting ready to give a—a party . . . What? . . . Well I AM speaking right into the mouthpiece. It must be the connection.

"Well, what I wanted to say was—what I mean is, did you know this year was—was—what? . . . Oh, I just said this was 1912 . . . Yes. Well what I wanted to tell you was that all the girls next Friday night were going to give a—a sort of leap year party . . . Yes, this is leap year! Yes! Yes! Yes, isn't that funny

"Well, what I—I really called you about, Chester, was—what? . . . Oh, yes, I'm really right at the telephone. Well, the whole thing is—what I mean is all the girls sort of—sort of—well sort of thought it would be nice if we'd all take a—a m-man to the party . . . What? . . . I said a MAN . . . No, no, not just one man—what I mean is men—that is each girl take one—er man.

"Yes, isn't that funny! . . . Well, Chester I—I was just wondering if you—that is if you weren't too—too busy . . . What? . . . I said were you busy?

Well, this is the way it is—you see each girl has to ask—that is ask one boy . . . What? . . . Oh, for the party . . . Yes, the—the leap year party . . . Yes, and what I wanted to ask was—what I mean is—what? . . . Well I can't see what's the matter with this phone. Well, anyway what I—I called up about was—I said what I called you about was, would you be willing to, that is would you go with me—that is go with me to the leap year party?

Leap Year Proposal (1940)

"Hello . . . Is Tuck Flitter there? . . . Oh, is that YOU, Tuck? Well, for the love of Mike! You sound as if you had too many Scotches last night, Tuck.

"This is Bab, Tuck. What do you know? . . . Cold? . . . I'll say it is! Say Tuck, you oughta see me now. You can't guess what I got on? . . . Yeh, my red flannels . . . Yeh, only they're pink . . .

"Say, Smoothie, did you know this was leap year? . . . Well it is. . . . No, I wouldn't say you exactly needed a cave . . . Listen Jitterbug, what are you doing Friday night? . . . Good! We're going to the Hi-De-Ho . . . Yes, you and me . . . Yes, it's a leap year dance.

"Well, Tuck, I thought I'd call you before any drips got you on the phone . . . Yes, it's white tie and everything. And say—I'm wearing my black dress, so it's white orchids. Get me, Hotcha? . . . OK."

Home Study Of Shorthand

AN intelligent girl, anyone would say! For, instead of wasting her leisure moments she uses them to teach herself shorthand. She's ready then to step into the next secretarial job that's open.

Yet any girl with a little pluck could do the same thing. You can teach yourself shorthand in simple home lessons, acquire a skill which is in demand everywhere. Then you have an advantage over unskilled workers.

And shorthand isn't as difficult as you may think. Pitman shorthand is based on the sounds in the language, not on spelling. For instance, for the sound Bee you learn that the symbol is a stroke and a dot. The sound show is a curve and a short heavy dash.

As all of the words in our language are just different combinations of a few sounds, you don't have many symbols to memorize. By learning a few every day, surprisingly soon you can write many commonly used words.

Speed comes with practice. And Pitman shorthand offers shortcuts which help you keep pace with dictation on the job.

For many words and phrases frequently used in business there are abbreviated symbols which you can write without lifting pencil from paper. "I can be," for instance, is three short strokes joined together.

Start now early in the new year to prepare yourself for a well-paid job. Our 40-page booklet, "Pitman Shorthand Self-Taught," explains symbols in easy stages. Gives time-saving word-signs, phrase forms, tells how to acquire accuracy, speed. A practical course which enables you to take office dictation, lectures, get ahead on the job.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet "Pitman Shorthand Self-Taught," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Local Rentals Give Property Owners Some Return on Investment; Not So Elsewhere, Says Realtor

A NEWCOMER TO ALEXANDRIA, from upper New York State, bitterly complains of the $35-a-month rent she is obliged to pay here for four rooms and bath (heat included). She calls it "exorbitant" in comparison to the $20-a-month she paid back home for a 6-room flat in a nice neighborhood. How account for it?—she asks, when tax assessments on property here are less than one-third of what they are where she comes from. This columnist was told, "It's the price you pay for living in the Nation's capital,"—an explanation which was passed on to the lady. Property owners and "renters" take up the discussion and give various viewpoints herewith. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I feel that your article of January 22, regarding rents, should be answered, insofar as a mere man and realtor is capable of doing it. I am taking that duty upon myself, because the "scene of the crime" is laid in Alexandria, Va., which is part of the territory covered by the real estate board of which I am president.

All real estate officers in Washington and the Metropolitan area are familiar with the arguments which your correspondent advances in comparing rents here with those paid elsewhere. The local realtor's first answer is a very simple one, namely; the rents paid here give the owners of property, in general, some return on their investment, whereas in many parts of the country property is renting for less than the carrying charge, to say nothing of interest, depreciation, amortization, etc.

Secondly, if your correspondent is sufficiently interested in fair dealing to capitalize the rents which she mentions, she will find that not only are they less than the rental figures for similar quarters which the FHA sanctions, but probably will show less cost per room than the USHA projects, even. The latter, as you know, are designed to accommodate sub-standard families.

Whenever I have met statements similar to those advanced by "Mrs. Discouraged," I have briefly outlined the above facts and in many cases have had the satisfaction of hearing the complainant acknowledge that even on a 3 per cent (net) income basis, our rents are by no means exorbitant. I have heard them say that if positions were reversed and the tenant became landlord, there would be equal dissatisfaction with the return on money invested . . . Very truly yours, H. C. M.

Origin of 'Realtor-Owned' Washington Is Told

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: While all Washington tenants must sympathize with the complaint against exorbitant District rentals, voiced thorugh your column of January 22, it is not clear what can be done to correct the situation.

But this we know: Prior to 1917, the apartment house, as such, was practically unknown in Washington. Such few apartments as existed were mostly rooms sublet in private homes, at extremely low rentals. Government clerks (who formed the majority of tenants) generally lodged in single rooms, and the local landladies frankly admitted that their rents went up or down, in accordance with the advance or reduction in the Government clerk's salary.

With our country's entry into the World War in 1917, there came an influx of government personnel for which there existed no adequate housing accommodations: Private home owners and rooming house keepers took advantage of the situation to demand exorbitant rentals for single rooms. In many cases, two to six occupants were lodged in one room without a shred of privacy and with a minimum of modern conveniences.

The Government sought to remedy the situation by putting up "temporary" buildings at moderate rentals for women clerks, but this proved a mere drop in the bucket. Then the Government set about encouraging the formation of a realtor class that would provide the sorely needed housing facilities for Government workers. This was the origin of realtor-owned Washington—charging all that the traffic will bear, holding the helpless tenants in a vice of necessity, sure of its profits, and as yet unaffected by the growing number of realty operators. E. C.

Property Owners Also Get It 'In the Neck'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please tell "Mrs. Discouraged" my story, which may serve to modify her dissatisfaction with high rents in Washington? I speak from the standpoint of house rents, rather than apartment rents, but since about half the Capital's population lives in houses, the comment is not irrelevant.

My mother considered home ownership the safest of investments. As we children grew to maturity, she encouraged each of us to buy a house, which we probably could own completely in a decade or two, and which we might rent when not occupying it ourselves. As a result, the family eventually acquired ten homes. Only four of them are still in our possession. The other six have been lost outright. Last month I lost one myself, although I had been thrifty and careful, as were most of the others.

The trouble, as I see it, is the original cost of the property—which would put the blame on the shoulders of the original "big builders" in Washington, some of whom are now dead. Whether they tried to do "the fair thing," I cannot say. They may have gouged us. Or the original landowners may have gouged them—figuring that land in the Nation's Capital was worth a big price. I only know that unless one bought before the war, he is out of luck if he hopes to get more on his investment than the small per cent a bank pays; and even then he is liable to lose everything, as some of us have done. House Group For Lower Pay Roll Tax

Increased Employe Benefits Also Wins Informal Approval Of Subcommittee

Liberalization of the District unemployment compensation act, both for the employer and the employe, won informal approval of the judiciary subcommittee of the House District Committee yesterday.

Chairman McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, predicted that the bill presented by the Commissioners will be reported favorably to the full committee next Monday after hearing civic, trade, and labor spokesmen.

The measure would reduce the pay roll tax from 3 to 2.7 per cent and increase employe benefits from $15 a week for 15 weeks of unemployment to $20 a week for 20 weeks.

Employer groups, while generally indorsing the amendments, suggested that they, the taxpayers, should be given the major benefits and expressed fear that any increase in benefits might lead eventually to higher taxes.

Sidney Katz, of the District Industrial Union Council, urged even more extensive concessions to the unemployed.

Holding down of the reserve fund, now $16,000,000, to $10,000,000 was urged by representatives of the Board of Trade, the Washington Taxpayers Association, and others.

Frederick P. H. Siddons, of the Board of Trade, said the increase in employe benefits would raise the cost of operation from $150,000 to $200,000 a month.

Arthur J. Sundlun, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, spoke in support of the bill but urged a limitation of $10,000,000 on the reserve fund.

Employers have been paying about four times as much in taxes as has been paid out in benefits, he said. While not opposing the proposed increase in benefits, Sundlun said his organization is opposed "to the principle of continued increased amounts in unemployment compensation, a policy that may set up a dangerous incentive for the shirking of work and responsibility when unemployment compensation becomes too high."

Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, while indorsing the proposed tax cut, urged that the unemployment compensation board be allowed to adjust its rates so as to keep the reserve fund at $10,000,000.

Francis G. Addison, jr., of the District Bankers Association, said the bankers "feel that it is in the public interest to effect reductions in taxes rather than to continue the burden upon business and the taxpayer and find ways of spending the tax.

R. D. Wagenet, assistant director of the bureau of employment of the Social Security Board, objected to a provision of the bill which would blanket into the civil service all present employes of the District board. He said such action would establish "an unfortunate precedent."

Among others indorsing the bill were Charles J. Rush, of the Washington Real Estate Board; Charles A. Walsh, of the Graphic Arts Association; Arthur L. Schoenthal, of the Central Labor Union, and John A. Marshall, of the Unemployment Compensation Board.

The sub-committee also decided to report favorably a bill to provide for the regulation of professional engineering in the District. Although complaints had been made that the measure would discriminate against engineers without college degrees, no witnesses appeared in opposition to it.

Capital News In Brief

Odd Shoes Stolen

Eighty right shoes were stolen from the auto of a salesman for a rubber company, Stanley Wojick, of Baltimore, Md., in the 700 block Eighth street northwest. If the thief who stole 200 left shoes from an auto in the 1300 block Seventh street northwest Monday thought he was getting mates, he was disappointed. It was neither the same salesman nor the same company.

Skinned of Bologna

Somebody's probably full of bologna by now. And it's no laughing matter. A truck belonging to the Briggs Supply Co., loaded with various kinds of prepared meat, was stolen at Ninth and H streets southwest last night. Policemen recovered the truck in the 1300 block of D street northeast, and looked inside. Clean as a whistle. No bologna.

Girl Hurt Sledding

Rose Kelly, 19, of 2620 Thirteenth street northwest, was treated for severe lacerations of the forehead at Garfield Hospital last night after she fell from a sled while coasting on the Shoreham Hill, in Rock Creek Park. After treatment, she was returned to her home.

Boys Club Alumni Pay Jelleff Tribute

Chairman Honored By 52 at Annual Dinner Meeting

A written testimonial presented to Frank R. Jelleff, chairman of the board of the Washington Boys Club, by 52 representative young alumni of the club was a feature of the annual dinner meeting of the organization last night at the Southeast branch, Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast.

Albert F. E. Horn was elected president of the organization for the coming year. Col. Henry P. Erwin was elected treasurer, and James A. Dent, secretary. Vice presidents elected were Sidney L. Hechinger, Northeast branch; R. J. A. Kaemmerer, central branch; Chester D. Swope, Georgetown branch, and Albert E. Conradis, Southeast branch.

Last night's elections added 22 trustees to the board, swelling its number from 52 to 74. They included David A. Baer, Carter Barron, Eugene Meyer, Edward Burling, jr., Maj. Gen. Fred Coleman, U. S. A.; Howard P. Foley, Dr. G. Bache Gill, J. Louis Gundling, Hon. Patrick J. Hurley, Charles H. Kindle, George M. McKee, Charles P. Maloney, J. Willard Marriott, Alfred C. Neal, Llewellyn Nicholson, J. Louis O'Connor, Rear Admiral George Pettengill, U. S. N.; L. Metcalf Walling, J. Benton Webb, Howard L. Wilkins, Arthur D. Willard and W. Thatcher Winslow.

Main objective of the club during 1940 will be the establishment of a new and adequate Northeast Club, Jelleff said in his annual report. Managing Director Charles M. Fyfe pointed out that there has been a 20 per cent increase in the number of boys making use of the organization in the past year.

Four Men to Face Court in Theft Of 30 Radios

Four men charged with housebreaking will appear in Police Court this morning in connection with the theft of 30 radios.

The radios, stolen early this week from the Columbia Wholesalers, 1146 Nineteenth street northwest, were loaded into four cars at the rear of the warehouse, police said. Then they were removed to an empty house a few blocks away and stored for the night.

Next day distribution began. Several of the radios were shipped out of the city, police learned. Others were sold here. One prospective customer informed police of an attempted sale, and turned in a description of the "salesman."

The description led to the arrest of Lawrence P. Brown, 27, of 1126 Lingers Court northwest. Subsequently Benjamin O. Byrd, 45, same address; Robert T. Foster, 29, of 1142 Lingers Court northwest, and Clarence Caretar, 44, of 926 Twenty-fourth street northwest, all colored, were placed under arrest.

Police say 13 of the radios have been recovered.

Rep. Rankin Urges $3,000,000 Cut in District Power Rates

While experts of the Public Utilities Commission sought to arrive at a figure for reducing electric light rates this year, Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, made one of his frequent attacks on District power rates in the House.

Instead of reducing the rates $575,000, as proposed by witnesses before the commission, the Potomac Electric Power Co. rates should be brought down $3,000,000, he said.

Rankin, a champion of the Tennessee Valley Authority, charged that stockholders of the power company are earning from 50 to 75 per cent on their common stock.

"If the people of the District had been supplied their power at the TVA yardstick rates they would have saved $3,025,477 in 1932, or $4,096,264 if it had been supplied at the Ontario rates," he said.

District officials pointed out that Washington now has one of the lowest electric rates offered by any public utility in the country.

"The Potomac Electric Power Co. is able to purchase electricity wholesale, laid down in the City of Washington, at less than half the rates paid by any municipality that buys electricity wholesale from TVA," Rankin added.

"Therefore, this power certainly should be sold to the ultimate consumer at rates not exceeding the retail rates charged by those municipalities handling TVA power."

It Didn't Make Horse Sense, So Bessie Spoiled the Ride

Romantic reminiscence, a harking back to the good old days, a horse, a sleigh, a devoted former retainer and a clash of wills became so hopelessly tangled last night the entire Police Department was concerned for a time

It all started when one "Tiny" Cook, colored former employe of Mrs. Jane H. Maher, of 4120 Seventeenth street northwest, drove up to the Maher menage, his heart filled with gratitude for remembered kindnesses. When Mrs. Maher came to the door, Tiny indicated a vehicle parked at the curb. It was a sleigh and attached to the sleigh was a horse whose name was Bessie.

Now, Tiny works for a riding stable and he asked Mrs. Maher if she and her three daughters, Mary Jane, 17; Patsy, 15, and Joan, 9, wouldn't like a sleighride. Mary Jane and Patsy turned the idea down; little Joan was all agog. So Mrs. Maher bundled up herself and Joan and they set off.

Less than a block away, Bessie got notions of her own and placidly lumbered onto the sidewalk, dragging the sleigh behind her. There Bessie stood, deaf to all of Tony's exhortations, insensible of his proddings, while neighbors came to their windows and offered advice.

But, advice or no advice, Bessie wasn't moving any more. And Joan was chilled and tired of sleigh riding anyway, so Tiny took her home, leaving Mrs. Maher to restrain any impulse, however remote they may have been at the moment, that Bessie might develop to move on. Soon a large and voluble crowd gathered and Mrs. Maher stepped down and mingled with it, hoping, she said, to render herself inconspicuous as a spectator. It was then Bessie made up her mind to move.

Mrs. Maher telephoned police, described Bessie and the rig and went home to await developments while a lookout was broadcast over the police radio system. While things were at this pass, Private C. S. Rodman, of Tenth Precinct, walked up to a patrol box at Second and Upshur streets northwest and halted to stare at an apparition approaching. It turned out to be two boys leading a horse. Behind the horse bumped the remains of a sleigh.

So Rodman called his station house and received instructions to wait there for a man from the stable, who came shortly and took Bessie back to her stall. The sleigh was left behind, too badly damaged to be moved farther.

Social Work Students Open Sessions Here

200 Delegates From 37 Schools Attend Annual Gathering

Nearly 200 delegates from 37 universities attended the opening sessions of the annual meeting of the American Association of Schools of Social Work last night in the Mayflower Hotel.

A discussion of the study of education for the public social services occupied the first general session last night, at which W. I. Newstetter, dean of the School of Applied Sciences of the University of Pittsburgh, presided.

Speakers were Robert T. Lansdale, New York School of Social Work, and Marion Hathway, executive secretary of the A. A. S. W. Delegates discussed in closed session means of more effectively training social workers.

Delegates and guests were received after the session by the faculties of the Catholic University of America and the National Catholic School of Social Service. The Right Rev. Mgr. John O'Grady, director of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, and Miss Agnes Regan, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, were among those in the receiving line. Committee meetings occupied most of the day.

Virginia P. Robinson, of the Pennsylvania School of Social Work, will speak at the annual banquet at 7:30 p. m. today. Her topic will be the cultivation of skill as the determining factor in a social work curriculum.

Symphony Campaigners Hope For Agreement With Musicians

Although the 1940 fund-raising campaign for the National Symphony Orchestra officially has been called off, team captains are holding their volunteer workers together as much as possible in the hope that an agreement with the musicians may be reached and a campaign held.

L. Corrin Strong, president of the orchestra association, made that statement yesterday on the basis of informal talks with the workers. Negotiations over the musicians' demands for salary increases were suspended while the orchestra is on tour in Pennsylvania.

Members of the orchestra interviewed by telephone at Bradford, Pa., expressed the hope that some compromise would be reached, but added that "we do work quite hard and should get more money."

Strong said the campaign had been called off because there would not be time to conclude an agreement between the return of the orchestra next Tuesday and the scheduled opening of the campaign, February 5. The orchestra's demand for a 27-week season and a $10 increase in base pay would mean a campaign goal of $130,000, which the Washington public never would provide, Strong said.

At headquarters of the Musicians Protective Union (Local 161, American Federation of Musicians) the secretary, Charles R. Brinton, said the musicians now receive a base pay of $50 a week for 23 weeks, or $1,150 a year.

This means the musicians have to do other work to support themselves, he said. "Washington doesn't want an orchestra of part-time musicians," he declared, "they should be able to devote their whole time to it."

Standing in Line for Gas, Tourist Almost Recruited

Motoring through war-torn Europe is complicated pleasure, Dr. Harry J. Robinson, of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, told members of the Stanford Alumi Club last night.

Dr. Robinson tried it last September and almost found herself recruited in the French army.

With his parents and a brand new car, Dr. Robinson said, he began several weeks' leave abroad last July. They toured England, Ireland and France peacefully. They were in Switzerland when the war broke out.

"Don't go into Germany," warned the Swiss, "your car may be confiscated."

Turning back toward France, the Robinsons had to give up their car at the border and have it shipped across the fortified boundary line.

In Italy the roads were fine, but there were blackouts to contend with. And when they reached France, again gasoline had become precious. Robinson, trying to buy fuel at one station, was directed to a line of waiting men. Robinson stood in the line, and finally reached the head.

"Gasoline?" asked the officer in French. "You don't get oil here. This is the recruiting line."

Citizens Told To Set Vote As First Aim

Voice in National Affairs Should Be A Secondary Goal, Says Sefton Darr

Obtain local suffrage, then work toward the goal of national representation after the District has become a political unit, Sefton Darr, chairman of the District suffrage committee, told a meeting of the Fort Davis Citizens Association last night.

He cited the Ruhland case, traffic conditions in Washington, and failure to remove snow from streets, as recent instances of the District Commissioners' failure "to answer the demands of the people."

"The newspapers are more nearly the representatives of the people than are the Commissioners," he declared.

Answering those who say Washington has an ideal form of local government, Darr charged that "You can't uncover graft and corruption without a two-party system of politics."

He singled out particularly as a weakness the policy of "sitting down to talk questions over," and then failing to act. "Supposing the Boston tea party had brewed a little tea and then talked things over," he said.

The association went on record as favoring local suffrage. A resolution was adopted protesting the erection of an apartment house in the vicinity of Pennsylvania avenue and Thirty-third place southeast. The meeting was held at the Southeast Branch of the Public Library.

Conduit Road

The Conduit Road Citizens Association last night went on record as criticizing the District government for its failure to have Washington streets cleared more quickly in the recent snowstorm. The association held its regular meeting at the Palisades Fieldhouse.

Fireman James Cox, of No. 29 Engine Company, was commended for his bravery in rescuing a boy from an ice hole in the C. & O. Canal. The association requested the Capital Transit Co. to continue a bus line west from Tenley Circle to Conduit road northwest. Carelessness in collection of trash by employes of the Refuse Department was criticized.

Other resolutions adopted included opposition to the removal of Health Officer Ruhland, and opposition to an increase in the District gasoline tax.

Commander Asks Navy Built Up to Defend Security

Commander L. P. Lovette, U. S. N., last night advocated building up the strength of the Navy in order to maintain the security of our continental territory, and control over strategic areas in the Pacific, the Caribbean, and the Atlantic.

"With current world war conditions it is more than ever necessary for America to be strong," he said. Commander Lovette spoke before the Town Hall Association of the Jewish Community Center, after the group had listened to the Town Hall of the Air broadcast.

He pointed out that the Navy did not favor the construction of battleships greater than 52,000 tons, as they could not pass through the Panama Canal.

Joseph M. Tuchman presided at the meeting. Reuben Borasky is chairman of the group.

Enjoy the SCOTCH WITH A STORY

The Abyssinian methods of crime detection and punishment have been almost unchanged through the centuries. For example, when a theft is committed the authorities can usually tell to which tribe the criminal belongs. Differences in clothing and even in the methods of stealing often make this possible. There is no attempt made to arrest the individual, but every member of his tribe is herded into a huge enclosure. There they stay for weeks if necessary, on a strict diet of bread and water, until the tribesmen themselves produce the culprit. "Usually the criminal confesses," says Captain White, who has spent many years in Abyssinia, "when he sees the hardships he is causing every member of his own tribe. But one way or another, the Abyssinians always get their man." Here's a fair trial you ought to make. Step up to any bar or into your favorite package store and order White Horse. Weigh all the evidence... its smooth taste, its distinctive character, its sterling quality. Study the record of White Horse, its centuries of world acclaim. You be the judge and the jury. If you are like millions of other good men and true, you will say, "My verdict is in favor of White Horse on every count."

Capt. Harold A. White, explorer and world traveler, relates his fascinating experiences in this White Horse series. Hi-Ho Thrills 1,700 at President's Horse Show

Miss Stieg's Mount Stars At Ft. Myer

Red Fox Repeats His Victory; Abdication, Gabby's Scamp Win; President Attends

By Anne Hagner

Before President and Mrs. Roosevelt and 1,700 other enthusiasts who packed the Fort Myer riding hall last night, Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho won one of the weirdest jumping events ever seen locally as the final session of the President's horse show came to a close.

The show committee had thought up a surprise course that was kept a secret from the exhibitors until it was time to put up the fences. Only stipulation for entrants was that they take every fence one time and as rapidly as possible, and the results were no less than amazing.

Young Miss Stieg, in the tough position of being first to take the diabolical conglomeration, cast an eye over what was confronting her little mare and went to work on the ten jumps, taking them from every conceivable angle.

Other riders who followed had their own ideas about the quickest way to get the whole thing over with, but Hi-Ho's spectacular performance remained the best and she won the blue without a jump-off.

Riders Get Lost

Although there were many more clean performances than the delighted audience had expected, some of the vicinity's best riders got lost midway around the ring and were disqualified in the confusion. The three minor awards were taken by Fort Myer officers, as Lieut. David Wagstaff on Rowdy, Lieut. J. H. Polk on Clipped Wings and Capt. Robert Taylor on Eyes Delight placed in that order.

The "go-as-you-like" class, naturally, was the feature of last night's closing session of the show, but the slightly milder hunter events still came in for their share of the applause. The first event, for working horses, was won by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Abdication, aptly named son of Prince of Wales, with Sue Bolling doing the saddle work. The class was a real test of hunting ability, even to the point of requiring riders to crack their whips at two iron foxhounds in the center of the ring.

The road hacks class was annexed by Patricia Henry on Gabby's Scamp, which has been consistently cleaning up all the road and hunter hacks events this season at Fort Myer. Second place went to Mrs. Greenhalgh on her handsome 4-year-old Palm Sunday, scoring over Charles Carrico's Recall and another Greenhalgh mount, Big Boy.

History repeated itself in the open hunters class when Mrs. D. N. Lee's Red Fox, formerly owned by Col. George Patton, defeated the Patton-owned Konohiki for the second time in 24 hours. The same thing had occurred on the opening night of the show and, oddly enough, Charles Carrico's Recall placed third on both occasions, just to make the setup complete. Red Fox, performing in the workmanlike style that has put him on top many times in the past, was ridden by Aubrey Fishback.

Gay Cockade Wins

Popular victor in the final stages of the show was Capt. J. H. Collier's Gay Cockade, who has been showing in Virginia for many years. Last night the game little mare clicked around the stiff open jumpers' course in perfect form to get a large round of applause, especially when she navigated through the double in-and-out fences twice without a single fault. The series of four fences in a row had been the downfall of most of her competitors, but was apparently nothing in Gay Cockade's life.

Second and third went to the Government's Mount Carmel, ridden by Capt. Quill, and Clipped Wings, with Lieut. Polk up, and fourth went to Miss Stieg with her sturdy part-hackney mare, Hi-Ho, who was the only feminine rider in the event.

Following the regulation horse show classes was an exhibition put on by 24 girls and horses from Arlington Hall College. The drill was something novel from the spectator's viewpoint, for the girls were dressed in the blue uniforms of the school and did their work in a manner that would have done credit to any of Fort Myer's experienced troopers. Leading was Instructor Fritz Kleemann's Apple Jack, ridden by Susan Rinehart.

Winding up the horsey extravaganza was the famous artillery drill staged by the gray horse battery of the Sixteenth Field Artillery. No holds were barred as the grays and the caissons whizzed around the limited space of the riding hall,

Reynolds Signed By Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Jan. 25 (AP).—The Los Angeles Baseball Club signed Carl Reynolds, veteran outfielder for the Chicago Cubs, as player-coach for the 1940 season today, and reported that Dean Cromwell, famed University of Southern California track coach, would hand out tips on speedy baserunning during the Angels' spring training.

Reynolds broke into baseball in 1927 with Palestine, Tex., and was grabbed by the Chicago White Sox. Later he played at St. Louis, Boston, Washington, Minneapolis. In 1938, with the Chicago Cubs, he batted .302. Last year, in 87 games, he hit .250.

Maryland U. and C. U. Boxers Close Drills

Cards in 'Dress Rehearsal' for Annual Clash Tomorrow; Terps Hold Regular Session; Hathaway to Make Debut in Battles

Catholic University fighters will hold a "dress rehearsal" tonight at the C. U. gymnasium for their all-important date with Maryland tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock—a date which will see the two rivals in what is expected to prove the winter's outstanding local sports event.

Coach Eddie LaFond will send his squad through a session under the glaring ring lights at Brookland, but Heinie Miller, the Terps' coach, will be satisfied with a regular afternoon drill at Maryland.

So heated is the brief rivalry between the two boxing teams and so large the followings that 750 additional seats will be installed in the Brookland gym to accommodate the expected overflow crowd, Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, director of athletics, announced.

Viner for Bunsa

The Southern Conference champions will unveil a 155-pounder Miller feels certain will give the Terps a point in that division. Catholic U.'s 155-pound captain, Joe Bunsa, will be on the bench for the night, and the Cards will send out Bob Viner.

Miller's "ace in the hole" is Norman Hathaway, a sophomore, and junior middleweight. He will be making his debut in the fight ring for Maryland.

The Cardinals, weak in the light divisions from the start of the season, will have double trouble tomorrow night, for in addition to Bunsa, Fred Stant, national intercollegiate 165-pound champion, and Jay Turner, light heavyweight, will be on the bench. Each of the three fought on the varsity as freshmen, and under a National Collegiate Athletic Association ruling must remain on the side lines against Maryland.

LaFond had to find substitutes only for Bunsa and Turner, however, as Stant has been fighting in the light heavyweight division this year. Joe Carrig, football and basketball star, is to get the light heavyweight call.

Hughes vs. Stanges

Josh Hughes will make his first appearance this year for Maryland in the heavyweight role against the Cardinals' Jule Stanges, while Izzy Leites, another newcomer to the Terp squad, will face Carrig.

If Carrig lives up to the glowing picture painted of him by those who have seen him in training this week, the Cards may be able to make a clean sweep of the heaviest brackets—the heavy, light heavy and senior middleweight spot. Gerry Strang, who has two knockouts to his credit this year, will fill the 165-pound spot.

It is the light division which furnish a headache for LaFond. In the 120-pound class Price Welsh or Ted Mandris, neither of whom has fought before, will start against Maryland's speedy Johnny Harn.

Lenny Bartone and Bob Bradley, who will be the Terps' captain for the night, clash in a return bout in the 127-pound class, and Maryland has its Southern Conference lightweight champion, Nate Askin, to throw against the Cards' John Tedder.

St. Francis Defeats C. U. Five, 48-23

D. C. Basketballers No Match for Strong Outfit From Brooklyn

The fundamentals of basketball were forgotten in the rush as Brooklyn's St. Francis quintet rolled up its ninth victory in ten starts over Catholic U. last night in the Brookland gym, 48 to 23.

Excepting a brief flurry of baskets by the visitors in the first half, the game was a continual race up and down the floor with players falling over one another, missing setup shots, wild passing and anything else a college courtman should not be caught doing.

For Catholic U. the performance was not unexpected, as it was their seventh defeat in as many starts, but for the Terriers, preparing for three games in Madison Square Garden, the performance was a trifle disappointing.

Visitors Have Cheerers

More than 100 members of the St. Francis student body thought enough of the team to make the trip and led by a trio of cheer leaders they drowned out the C. U. cheers.

St. Francis ran up a 30-14 lead at half-time, but in the second half Coach Fod Cotton started his second stringers and the Brooklyn club could never get going and outscored the Cardinals, 14 to 9, in a dull 20 minutes of play.

Joe Dzienkiewica was the outstanding player and Ptak, pronounced without the "P", led the scorers with 11 points. Daly, the only non-football playing member in the C. U. starting lineup, topped the hosts with five points while Pirro and White made four each.

Pirro, White and Daly worried the visitors as far as 9-7 but here the Terriers 11 points in a row, 3 on pot shots from the middle of the floor, put the verdict on ice.

The C. U. reserves held the St. Francis team to a 5-4 margin for 8 minutes of the second half before the regulars came back and then Coach Cody Rooney, who played

Finns to Hold '41 Olympics If Victorious

$8,000,000 Investment Incentive; Stadium Has Escaped Bombing

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 25.—Based on a belief that Finland yet may work some sort of military miracle, the suggestion has been made to Avery Brundage, head of the American Olympic committee and United States representative of the international committee, that precedent be broken by giving the Finns a chance to stage the Olympic games in 1941.

Under I. O. C. rules, the games of the twelfth Olympiad must be held in 1940 or not at all. Still, the Finns spent some $8,000,000 on preparations, and there is a strong feeling that they are entitled to more of a return that simply being left with a "white elephant" of an athletic plant on their hands—especially since the 1944 games already have been awarded to London.

There are two additional reasons behind the suggestion for pushing the games back to next year. One is that reports from Helsinki so far indicate the athletic plant—the main stadium, in particular—has escaped damage in the Russian bombings. The other is the possibility that Finland might have something extra-special "up its sleeve," since its Olympic officials so far have taken no action to relinquish the Olympics.

Because no definite word from the Finns is expected until April or May, the A. O. C. must, in Brundage's own words, "Keep our machinery ready so that if, by any chance, the games are held, we will be in a position to go into high gear on short notice."

From the standpoint of United States participation, the 1940 games probably would have been the best ever in the normal course of events. "When the war started," Brundage says, "we were further advanced comparatively than ever before." He points out that games committees had been at work for over two years selecting their best athletes; that 216 fund-raising committees were organized, and that, in the three months up to last September, the New York office had accepted more than $51,000 in deposits on steamship space, housing at Helsinki and Olympic Games tickets.

Former Olympic Star Named as Track Coach

Palo Alto, Calif., Jan. 25 (AP).—Franklyn Pitcher Johnson, of Drake University, has been named track and field coach at Stanford University, effective next fall.

The 39-year-old former Olympic games hurdler was appointed by the Stanford board of athletic control last night. His five-year contract is subject to the approval of University President Ray Lyman Wilbur.

Poughkeepsie Regatta Set For June 18

5 Member Schools Invite California, Washington, Tigers

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 25.—The Intercollegiate Rowing Association's annual classic, better known as the Poughkeepsie Regatta, will be held on the Hudson River June 18, Maxwell Stevenson, chairman of the board of stewards, announced today.

The five member schools, Columbia, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Syracuse and Navy, issued invitations to California, winner of the 4-mile varsity race in record time last year; Washington, victor in the freshman row; Wisconsin, Princeton and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The 2-mile frosh race will open the regatta at 2 p. m., Eastern standard time, with the junior varsity over 3 miles scheduled at 3 p. m. and the varsity at 4 o'clock.

The only change in the list of officers was the election of Alastair MacBain, former Columbia stroke, as executive secretary to replace Reynolds Benson, who resigned.

Dees Resigns as Head Trainer at Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Jan. 25 (AP).—Elwyn Dees, former football star of Kansas University, resigned today as head trainer of athletes at the University of Pittsburgh to take a similar position at the University of Nebraska.

Dees came to Pitt five months ago from Oklahoma A. and M. He was the third trainer here in three years.

Riggs Moves Up a Round In Florida

Net Star Has Close Call With Froeling; Advances Into Quarterfinal Leg

By the United Press

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 25.—National Champion Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, had a close call today as he moved into quarterfinals of the South Florida Tennis Tournament.

Riggs, who had been having little luck in the winter circuit tournaments, was forced to three sets to defeat Frank Froeling, Chicago, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4.

Elwood Cooke, Portland, Oreg., seeded second, disposed of W. L. Heth, Kansas City, 6—1, 6—0. Gardnar Mulloy, Coral Gables, Fla., beat Bob Decker, Miami, 5—7, 6—1, 6—1. Charles Hare, London, won from Vincent Paul, New York, 6—2, 6—3.

Henry Prusoff, Seattle, defeated Jack Ohlhaber, West Palm Beach, 6—1, 6—1; Charley Harris, West Palm Beach, trounced Tom Kelly, Portland, Oreg., 6—2, 6—2; Hal Surface, Kansas City, smashed Campbell Gillespie, Miami, 6—0, 6—2; Ed Alloo, Berkeley, Calif., beat Harold Maas, West Palm Beach, 6—1, 7—5.

In women's singles, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan took a 6—0, 6—0 triumph over Connie Savage, West Palm Beach.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We hear now that the long-suffering Washington fight public was the victim of another rude hoax last week. And this time the professional element is as guiltless as a babe in arms. College boxing was a party to the works-giving, and Washington newspapers innocent accessories.

POVICH

Twenty-five hundred fight fans stampeded their way into the Catholic University gymnasium last week-end to see what? According to all reports they would witness bouts between C. U. boxers and the Canadian college champions representing McGill University. On that McGill team were three individual Dominion champions, it was innocently reported in the public press.

On the strength of press releases by the Catholic University sports publicity office, Washington newspapers whooped up the match. C. U. was facing its hardest opposition of the season, it was proclaimed. Six of the eight McGill boxers were talented veterans, it was announced. Small wonder then, that a capacity throng of 2,500 turned out for the matches.

The extensive ballyhoo began to smell like the crossed aromas of the fishwharves and the city dump shortly after the evening's fighting began. The "talented" McGill boxers were woefully inept. Five of 'em were knocked out. McGill won only one of the eight bouts. There apparently was some mistake about the talent of the McGill squad.

McGill Tells Another Story

We hear now from one of the editors of the McGill Daily:

"By the time you receive this, the Catholic U.-McGill boxing match of last Saturday may be a dead issue in Washington, but here at McGill it is still a sore spot . . . According to the publicity received in the Washington papers, our boxing team was touted as the Dominion Intercollegiate champions, boasting individual chompions in four divisions and conceded to be one of the strongest teams ever to meet Catholic U.

"Nothing could be farther from the truth. Of the team of eight that made the trip, only two had fought for McGill in previous matches. One had fought in the Maritime provinces and the other five had never been engaged in any kind of organized fighting . . . I don't know who was responsible for the information the press in Washington received, but I know that it did not come from the McGill athletics department.

"At present, under these circumstances, McGill is undoubtedly the laughing stock of Washington through no fault of any one in authority at McGill . . . It is grossly unfair to McGill . . . I think an explanation to the Washington public is in order."

So do we think an explanation is in order. Certainly the C. U. publicity office was not ignorant of the caliber of the McGill team, yet its press releases gaudily pictured the Canadians as fearsome characters who were coming to Washington fairly awash with glory and talent.

The Incident Had a Pro Tinge

That sort of false ballyhoo is expected from the folks who infest the professional prize ring industry, but college boxing was supposed to be above that sort of thing. Save for the fact that the match ended in an inglorious 7-1 defeat for the Canadians, the C. U. sports press bureau might have gotten away with its game. Not only the customers but the sports editors were badly taken in.

College boxing has proven a profitable venture for the schools hereabouts, but this latest egg it has laid is not golden. It was just such farcical affairs as the McGill-C. U. match that sent professional boxing into the doldrums in Washington and it can have the same effect on the collegiate bouts. Folks will be wary of these so-called "champions."

We are not sure, anyway, that college boxing contributes anything whatsoever to the welfare of the college boy. We are no purist and we would go as far as anybody to see a good fight, but we don't think the sport has any place in the colleges for a number of reasons.

College Boxing Is Merely Slugging

In college bouts, boxing loses almost every vestige of what the prize ring industry is pleased to call the manly art of self-defense. Slug is the keynote, and with only three two-minute rounds in which to establish a margin of superiority, the collegians can afford to lose no time in punching the other guy senseless. It makes for crowd-pleasing action, but crowd-entertainment is scarcely the chief function of college athletes.

Bluntly, the college fighter who knows how to protect himself is rare. And because of the rules against infighting, it is virtually all long-range stuff, with blows delivered with all the lusty strength of prime young men. They can get hurt in there, no less than professionals.

There is another indictment against college boxing. Matches are made with little thought of comparative skill. A champion is pitted against a novice simply because they happen to be in the same weight division. Matches that a professional promoter wouldn't tolerate are weekly occurrences in college boxing. It isn't worth whatever glory might accrue to the campus hero who's on the boxing team.

Bruins Trade Eddie Shore To Americans for Wiseman

No Cash Involved in Deal That Sends Veteran Ace From Boston to New York

By the United Press

Boston, Jan. 25.—Eddie Shore, professional hockey's No. 1 gate attraction and for 13 years a defense star for the Boston Bruins, has been traded to the New York Americans, it was announced tonight. In exchange the world's champion Bruins received right winger Eddie Wiseman. No money was involved.

Manager Art Ross of the Bruins, now in Chicago, released a statement through his office here in which he said that Shore had been instructed to contact Manager Marvin Dutton of the Americans. "Convinced that Eddie Shore no longer was interested in playing hockey in Boston," Ross said, "the Bruins acceded to his final wish that he become associated with the New York Americans.

"In a wire to me late today, Shore stated, 'Deal with Americans satisfactory to me.'"

Ross said that accordingly he had talked with Dutton and completed the deal which will see Wiseman report to the Bruins in Detroit tomorrow for the game with Red Wings Sunday night.

Long considered modern hockey's greatest player and winner of the "most valuable player" award thrice in the past four seasons, Shore will attempt to prove to the New Yorkers that "life begins at 40."

Shore and the Bruins have been at odds since the playoffs last spring, when the Edmonton Express declared he wanted to quit active play and purchase the Springfield Indians of the International-American League because he feared he might suffer serious injury.

Though the Bruins' management sought to dissuade him, Shore ultimately made the purchase. Warned by Inter-Am President Maurice Podoloff that he must clear himself with the Bruins before obtaining the Springfield franchise, Shore concluded a "gentlemen's agreement." Substance of the agreement was that Shore play Bruin home games in "emergencies" after December 15, 1939. He played three games.

Recently Ross "loaned" Shore to his own Indians for home games, subject to recall. And on this basis Shore made his minor league debut Saturday, but the Shore-Ross controversy flared anew as Shore sought to play with the Indians when they took to the road.

Shore began his rough-house hockey career as an amateur, suffering a broken nose, a broken jaw, loss of six teeth and two black eyes in a game with Montreal.

Decision Lost By Mamakos In Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 25.—Holman Williams, Detroit Negro, jabbed his way to a decisive 12-round victory over Steve Mamakos, Washington, in the main event of a boxing show tonight. Each weighed 147.

Williams, beaten by Kid Cocoa in his last appearance here, stepped right out and never gave Mamakas a chance to get set. By the eighth roud of the 12-round affair, the Washington Greek's face was battered and cut, but a boxing commission doctor who examined him said he could continue.

Williams proved an elusive target, and except for the fourth round, he held a wide margin all the way.

Jerry Zeller, 179, Baltimore, scored a sixth-round knockout over Johnny Aicher, 180, Fairview, N. J., in another bout.

Roosevelt and Wilson Favored in Interhigh Games Tonight

Blair Faces Bethesda at Maryland U.

Suburban Fives May Draw 4,000 Crowd; Washington-Lee Has Postponed Its Game

The last interhigh basketball action before Washington's schoolboys pack up their regalia for a week of cage idleness, during which they'll undergo mid-term examinations, will take place at Tech gym tonight when the two series leaders, Roosevelt and Wilson, feature a twin bill.

Roosevelt, with a three-game winning streak, goes against Western's once-beaten but threatening five. Wilson's will be opposed by a Tech club which has been trounced in its two series starts. The first game is set for 7:30.

The results matter little in Roosevelt's and Wilson's prospects of getting in the titular round robin tournament. The Riders have a berth locked up, and all the Presidents need is another victory to clinch a place. Western, too, won't be excessively worried about tonight's outcome. It has one triumph to its credit and a not-too-rigid schedule ahead.

Tech Out if Loses

Tech's diminutive cagers have everything to lose. If the Green and White of Wilson take the game the Manual Trainers might just as well kiss their championship aspirations good-by.

At the same time that public school quintets are keeping District fans interested, two Montgomery County clubs, Bethesda and Montgomery Blair, take their annual enmity into a clash at College Park's Ritchie Coliseum. In past years the game, a highlight of county activity, has been played in the gym of one team or another but it has grown too big for that.

A crowd of almost 4,000 is certain of seeing the fast content—one of the largest, incidentally, to see a game at the Maryland gym this season. On comparative records the teams stack up almost even. Each has played 11 games, Blair winning eight and Bethesda seven.

In Nick Carter and Johnny Shumate the teams boast a pair of the highest scoring players in or around Washington. Blair's Carter has registered 100 points in his team's games, and Shumate's record is but three points better than that. Each will be struggling to improve his mark tonight.

The Washington-Lee clash with George Washington High scheduled for tonight has been postponed due to ceremonies in connection with the February graduating at the former school. These ardent rivals will clash on the night of March 2.

Six other clashes of interest mark the day's card. Best of these, perhaps, will be Gonzaga's second meeting with Eastern on the latter's floor in the afternoon. In a previous clash the Tide managed for a close victory.

Central goes to College Park for a game with the Maryland frosh in the afternoon and other skirmishes will be Landon at Rockville, Boys Latin at Friends and St. Alban's at St. Paul. The night's schedule is rounded out with a clash between St. John's and Anacostia on the Indians' court.

Royal Mail Given Top Impost for Grand National

London, Jan. 25 (AP).—Royal Mail, 1937 winner owned by Mrs. Camille Evans, and Sir Francis Towle's Airgead Sios today were assigned top weight of 169 pounds in a field of 59 for the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, April 5.

Sir Alexander Maguire's 1939 winner, Workman, got in with 159 pounds. H. C. McNally's Royal Danieli, runner-up to the American-owned Battleship in 1938, was asked to pick up 167 and L. Scott Brigg's MacMoffat, second last year, only 150.

Royal Mail, whose owner is a former American actress, is one of the six American-owned horses eligible for the 4½-mile race. Of the others, F. Ambrose Clark's Uplifter and London Town were handicapped at 162 and 158 pounds, respectively; John Hay Whitney's Knightsbrook and Louis Stoddard's Milano, 149, and Whitney's National Light, 144.

Freshmen Shine as G. W. Girls Use Powder in Trusty Rifles

The fellow who first muttered that woman's place is in the home would get the shock of his life if he chanced to drop in at the George Washington University rifle range in the basement of Corcoran Hall.

He would find women there—demure coeds flanked by enough artillery to make anybody stop and reconsider.

For two weeks interclass trials for the varsity women's rifle team have been going on at the G street institution, and the way the women have been turning out you'd think somebody had installed a beauty parlor on the range.

The shooting gave way yesterday, however, to first-term examinations and after a final flurry of firing, three girls—a freshman and two sophomores—were picked for tryouts with the varsity next month.

But the biggest shock of all was the winning record scored by the freshman class team of Aileen Matthews, Wanda Weaver, Elizabeth Toupasz, Mary Reynolds and Julia Dismer. They shot an aggregate total of 1,100 out of a possible 1,200. The sophomore shooters finished four points behind for second, and the junior-senior team was a not so good third with 1,080.

Census Bureau Divides Twin Bill

After dropping a game to the Friends School alumni by one point, 41-40, the Census Bureau basketball team underwent a reversal and nosed out the Wilson Teachers College Jayvees, 35-33, yesterday.

The first game, at Friends' gymnasium, saw the Census lads leading the alumni throughout the game and right up until within 20 seconds of the final whistle when Fletcher put the alumni's winning goal in on a difficult shot from under the basket.

In the contest with the Wilson five, the Census team went into the second half trailing, 26-14, at the Wilson gym, put on a late spurt and overcame the Teachers' juniors in the closing minutes.

Rangers Win By 3-0 From Maple Leafs

New York Club Takes 14th Victory in Last 15 Starts by Shutout

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 25.—Riding one of the hottest streaks in hockey history, the New York Rangers consolidated their leadership in the National League tonight with their fourteenth victory in 15 starts—a 3-to-0 shutout of the Toronto Maple Leafs, before 12,000 fans.

The injury-riddled Leafs, minus four regulars, lacked the punch and speed to stay with the leaders after the first period of a game exciting only during brief flashes of Ranger power. The Rangers picked off a goal in each period with Dutch Hiller, Alfie Pike and Bryan Hextall a sthe marksmen.

The Leafs were without two-thirds of their ace line, Syl Apps out because of broken collarbone, and Gordie Drillon, who returned to the line-up Saturday, being kept out of the game because he didn't feel well.

Administering the Leafs' first shutout of the season, the Rangers won their fourth straight since Chicago broke their record run of undefeated games at 19 last week.

Americans Tie, 2-2, With Canadiens

Montreal, Jan. 25 (U.P.).—Red Dutton's New York Americans went into a fifth place tie with the idle Detroit Red Wings when they played a 2-2 tie with Montreal's Canadiens in a National Hockey League fixture here tonight.

The Americans held the upper hand until the final six minutes when two fast counters put the Frenchmen on even terms. After a scoreless first period, Johnny Sorrell scored on a play by Armstrong and Boll midway through the second session. Murray Armstrong gave the New Yorkers a 2-goal lead when he tallied at 10:49 of the last period.

Charlie Sands clicked for Canadiens with less than six minutes of play remaining and Marty Barry scored another 1 minute and 20 seconds later.

Blackhawks Tie Boston Bruins, 2-2

Chicago, Jan. 25 (INS).—The Boston Bruins were slipping terrifically tonight for the best they could do was to ge a 2-2 tie with the Chicago Blackhawks in the National Hockey League, whereas they had beaten them in every one of the 13 previous games.

The Bruins began their winning streak against the Hawks away back in the 1937-1938 season when they grabbed the last game against the Hawks. They piled up eight more victories against the Chicago outfit last season (all that were scheduled), and added the other four this season.

Sacred Heart Sextet Beats St. Cecelia Girls

Sacred Heart Academy's girls' basketball team took the measure of the St. Cecelia's sextet, 26-19, yesterday at the victors' gym. Anna Logsdon set the scoring pace for the winners with 13 points, while Capt. McQuillan was best for the losers with 15 points.

Eagles Hope To Cut Rovers' Lead Tonight

League's High-Scorers To Clash at Riverside; N. Y. 6 Points Ahead

The Washington Eagles will attempt to cut down the New York Rovers 6-point lead in the Eastern Amateur Ice Hockey League when they meet tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Riverside Statdium.

Seven of the Eastern League's first ten high scorers will be on the ice at the same time, but only two are with the second-place Eagles.

In addition to seeking to start a "break down the Rovers" movement, the Eagles will be out to take their fourth victory over the New Yorkers. To date, each team has won three, and Washington is the only team in the league which has defeated the league leaders with anything like regularity.

Dewey Third

Carrying the scoring torch for the Rovers tonight will be Albert Collings, leading the league with 68 points; Murdo McKay, runner-up with 56; Frank Boucher, jr., fourth with 52; Mitchel Pechet, sixth with 48, and Len Loree, eighth with 41.

The Eagles' Hal Dewey, with 55 points, is third high scorer, and Roy Covert is seventh with 45.

The roughhouse tactics generally seen on the ice have been glaringly absent in the Eagles-Rovers games, which usually see both sextets doing some of their fastest skating and stick-handling.

Slump Ended

In the Eagles' 8-1 route of the Rovers New Year's Day, in Madison Square Garden, not a penalty was called on either team.

Coach Redvers Mackenzie is confident that his Eagles have snapped out of their slump and yesterday predicted that they will be in the running for the league championship in the playoffs.

The Rovers, who defeated the Baltimore Orioles twice Sunday, were shut out, 5-0, by the Orioles Wednesday night—just one night after the Eagles had defeated Baltimore, 4-3.

Hoya Frosh Rout Devitt Quintet, 77-12

Georgetown Frosh won its fourth basketball game of the season yesterday, trouncing Devitt Prep 77 to 12 in Ryan Gym. The Frosh took an early lead and turned the game into a high-scoring rout.

The Prep team was only able to make 3 goals and 6 charity tosses. At the quarter, Georgetown Frosh held an 18-to-3 lead, which they increased to 32-to-4 at half-time. At the end of the third quarter the margin was upped to 55 to 6.

Bill Bornheimer, center of the winners, tallied 18 points as did Will Willets. Bornheimer hails from New Jersey, where he made a great name for himself. He was touted as one of the best high-school players ever to perform in the annual Madison Square scholastic tournament. Kenny Engles' play around the basket aided the Frosh team throughout the game.

Kemp was the best for the losers, scoring 5 of his team's points.

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 25.—Now begins a time of the year when you should be thankful that you are not a part of the chamber of commerce in those sun-warped Florida towns where the ball clubs take their choice meats to stew.

CONSIDINE

No soul knows less peace of mind than these harried little men of the chambers. They all seem to be alike: Nice, dull, run-of-the-mill citizens who for two months each year step completely out of character and look, dress, talk and think that part of a typical chamber man. They become an uncomfortable combination of a personality boy, guardian of the weather, friend of the press, thinker-upper of things to do for the baseball wives, cameraman, publicist and drink-buyer.

Now none of these roles fit them, as a rule. They nearly freeze in the sport clothes they affect for the sake of appearances when the team arrives, they worry themselves bald every time it rains (and absent themselves from the players' hotel to escape the wrath of the manager), they are a little terrified at all times for fear that the reporters will pass some deserving slight on the mud-pie village. Their wives are always sore at them for doing so much for the baseball wives ("while I stand over a hot stove."), nobody uses their fuzzy pictures or prints their mimeographed handouts, and, my, how those free loaders can drink up a salary.

For the Rain—the Pretty Girls

They are held personally responsible by many ball players, and baseball officials, for the condition of the practice field, the state of the wooden rest-room beneath the stands, the mean precipitation, the food at the Oaks (official headquarters) the fact that the movie house doesn't let the players dead-head the show, the lack of pretty girls, the arrogance of the golf club in charging green fees, and the closing hour of the favorite pub. Their life no longer is their property. In a week it is all a nightmare, and they are walking corpses, dressed in absurd raiment, running the bases of some fabulously futile game, a personality smile frozen on pans not bred to show emotion. Their only release is April, and their descent into blessed anonymity.

The one belief all of them have is that the visitors are utterly helpless and must depend on them for everything except the brushing of teeth. We have at hand a typical "what to do in our town" handout from the typical village of Winter Haven, Fla. The Giants will train there this year.

"Barber Shop: (It reads) We recommend Bozeman's, rear Exchange Bank.

"Boats: Rowboat 25 cents hour; inboard motorboats, 50 cents hour, side trips to Cypress Gardens.

"Golf: 75 cents green fees; caddies same.

"Laundry: Bachelor bundle, $1.25 (higher at hotel).

"Liquor: Better bring own. City, county legally dry. In pinch, ask bellboy.

"Tourist Club: Meets nightly, except Sunday, Wednesday, Saturday.

"Chamber of Commerce: Ring 2138."

V. P. I. Leads Fund Contributors

Here's the latest census on the infantile paralysis sports program. When Yale and Tulsa play tomorrow night at White Plains, N. Y., they will become the 197th and 198th United States colleges which have either played games for the paralysis fund or scheduled such games . . . Some 570 high schools are engaging in charity events, as well as 99 newspapers and 128 independent clubs. Among the events already held or about to be held are 435 basketball games, 40 boxing shows, 19 rassling events, six ice carnivals, the mammoth Fort Myer (Va.) horse show yesterday and today, a weight-lifting contest, table tennis tournament, a six-man football game, billiards, polo, hockey, swimming and a basketball game on skates.

One event was stopped by a gymnasium fire; another, in Newark, ended in a fight in which an A. A. U. official got punched and the fund got $530.50. New Jersey has provided the most events, and Virginia Polytechnic Institute has been the most generous college. The smallest sum sent in to sports council headquarters was a check for $3.50, from a basketball game between good old Neopit (Wis.) Day School and St. Anthony's. The health bowl game in Miami netted the fund $8,000. As if to prove that politics really does not rear an ugly head in the drive, the Young Men's Republican Club of Hastings, N. Y., has scheduled a benefit basketball game.

$3,000 in Prizes at Stake In Bing Crosby Golf Event

Crooner-Promoter Figures to Lose Between $5,000 and $10,000 in Del Mar Tourney

By the Associated Press

Del Mar, Calif., Jan. 25.—Bing Crosby's annual golf tournament, a regulation affair which has its funnier moments, gets under way tomorrow. The largest field in its history is ready to fire away for the $3,000 cash purse and amateur trophies.

Crosby, who promotes songs, race horses, fighters and anything that comes from Spokane, Wash., can claim many distinctions for this golf tournament.

BING CROSBY

It is the only one in existence that starts from the first tee and winds up three days later in a barbecue pit, the only one where the sponsor has no doubt of the financial outcome.

Crosby can be dead sure, 11 months and 12 days in advance, that it will cost him from $5,000 to $10,000 to put on this party.

It is the fastest growing nonprofit tournament in the country. Despite the fact it began in a violent rainstorm three years ago and has maintained a near-perfect record in this respect since, more than 300 golfers will bang around the Rancho Santa Fe course during the coming siege.

In the 1937 tournament, which Sam Snead won, few more than 100 entered. Now the fat field, boasting virtually every "name" player in the game, looks like the Los Angeles open in its palmiest $10,000 days.

It is sudden death, this 36-hole event, which is just what the tired amateur needs. Or the carefree pro, for that matter. One bad round is all a man requires to escape the strain of championship effort in this meet. It's easy to alibi one sour round, but two, or three—it can't be done.

Some of the very finest mediocre amateur golfers in the Western part of the United States and Hollywood are here to defend their laurels in this division, and Bob Hope may get in Saturday.

One thing about these splendid mediocrities, as fine as they are, they still have to pay a $3 entry fee, but professionals, from top to bottom, don't.

That is another unusual feature of the Crosby party. It is one tournament where the pros don't battle for their own money.

Gene Sarazen should come out sometime.

'Eight, Nine, Ten' . . .and Only 15 Seconds After Fight Started

"Why so pensive?" Well, how would you feel if the referee had already counted ten over you and the sound of the opening gong only 15 seconds old. Connaught, at $9, Beats Red Dock in Hialeah Feature Race

3-5 Choice Downed by Half Length

Nightland Is Third In 7-Furlong Sprint; Robertson and Roar Team to Win 5th

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 25.—Mrs. Payne Whitney's Red Dock proved a bitter pill for favorite players to swallow in the featured Bartow Purse, 7-furlong test for 3-year-olds, here this afternoon. Backed down to odds of 3 to 5, the Peace Chance gelding was beaten a half length by Connaught, representing the Shady Brook Farm of Theodore Mueller. Branham & Moseley's Nightland was third, three lengths away.

Connaught, making his first start since early in November, was somewhat overlooked by the talent. The colt returned $9 despite the fact that, in his last appearance, he won a 1-mile handicap at Churchill Downs with a flashy filly, Little Risk, among his victims. Last summer he scored in the Hawthorne Juvenile Handicap.

The racing strip was not yet dried out from recent rains and Connaught needed 1:26 4-5 to complete his journey under Apprentice Jack Flinchum.

Goes Right to the Front

Connaught dashed right to the front, with Red Dock keeping step until the field swung out of the backstretch. Then Connaught opened up daylight and appeared headed for an easy triumph. Eddie Arcaro worked hard with Red Dock when they straightened for home. The favorite again drew alongside the pacemaker but Connaught, in fine condition after his extended layoff, proved too stubborn a rival for the Greentree color bearer. Nightland easily defeated the others.

Alfred Robertson rode his second straight winner in the fifth race, a plater affair at 7 furlongs. "Robbie" put up a clever ride astride Mrs. C. S. Bromley's Roar, a $26.40 for $2 hazard. Taking the gelding into a slight lead, the veteran saddle artist nursed his mount along until forced to a hard drive in the stretch, where he kept the long shot in front to register by a half length. Winning Chance, always well up, finished two lengths before Lady Flash for the place.

Ambuscade Gets Home

Eleven 3-year-old platers met in the second race, but when it came to running, only two of them figured seriously in the competition. Ambuscade, the $6.10 for $2 choice, showed the way home by a length. Baltee was second, five lengths in front of Takeitfrome. Baltee and Ambuscade quickly sprinted clear of the others, the former leading to the stretch. Ambuscade then assumed command and drew away under pressure.

Victor Emanuel's Omission, a newcomer to the turf wars, got up to score a nose victory over the heavily played Double Call in the 3-furlong test for 2-year-old maidens of the male division. Earl Steffen, a veteran rider noted for his ability to pilot juveniles well, brought the colt from several lengths off the leaders. Omission was a $9.10 for $2 chance. Double Call held a narrow lead most of the way and beat Fly Gent by two lengths for the place. The time was 0:35 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OMISSION, $9.10, $5.70, $4.10; DOUBLE CALL, $3.20, $2.60; FLY GENT, $4.60.

OMISSION, outrun in the early stages, swung to the outside and finished strong to wear DOUBLE CALL down in the last stride. DOUBLE CALL was hustled into the lead approaching the furlong pole, but faltered and swerved to the inside. FLY GENT displayed good speed, but weakened in the last sixteenth. LOCHLEA was taken off the rail while driving hard.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 2:31½. Off 2:32. Winner, Hal Price Headley's b. f. (3), by Apprehension—Banitry Pass. Trained by Duval A. Headley. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AMBUSCADE, $6.10, $3.50, $2.90; BALTEE, $3.70, $3.00; TAKEITFROME, $4.40.

AMBUSCADE, a forward factor all the way, came around the leader through the stretch and won going away. BALTEE, away alertly, was hustled clear in the opening furlong and saved ground, but was no equal to the winner when challenged. TAKEITFROME, well up and racing wide all the way, outlasted NUTTY in the final drive. NUTTY saved much ground the entire trip.

Daily Double, OMISSION and AMBUSCADE, Paid $64.30

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good. Won cleverly; place driving. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:04. Winner, F. H. Williamson's br. m. (7), by For Fair—Seth's Romance. Trained by R. McIlvain. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:28.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOR ROMANCE, $39.70, $20.70, $10.90; CHANCE QUEEN, $9.50, $5.50; WOODSIA, $5.20.

FOR ROMANCE, on the inside until midway around the turn, swung to the outside gradually improving her position to win going away. CHANCE QUEEN made a bold bid and assumed command through the stretch, but could not stave off the winner. WOODSIA, used up racing FEKAKI into defeat, faltered in the final drive, yet shook off the latter. SUN GIRL could not reach serious contention.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,100. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:31½. Off 3:32. Winner, Hal Price Headley's br. f. (3), by Sir Gallahad III—Sekhmet. Trained by Duval A. Headley. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:19⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCYLLA, $8.30, $4.20, $3.40; SIR GIBSON, $9.90, $4.40; GOOSEBERRY, $3.60.

SCYLLA took command at the start, held the field safe for speed while saving ground and held away the entire trip. SIR GIBSON bettered his position steadily on the outside, but was carried out almost to the outside fence by GOOSEBERRY in the stretch. GOOSEBERRY, a forward factor, bore out badly entering the stretch.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, SLOW.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:02. Off at once. Winner, Mrs. C. S. Bromley's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROAR, $26.40, $10.50, $5.50; WINNING CHANCE, $4.40, $3.20; LADY FLASH, $3.50.

ROAR, going in his best form, forced a steady pace, responded gamely with determination when it came to a drive and outlasted WINNING CHANCE. The latter, prominent throughout, made a game effort under extreme punishment, but could not get up. LADY FLASH, never far from the pace, swung wide in the stretch. HIGHOMAR was taken up in the opening furlong and never threatened thereafter.

SIXTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Bartow. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:31½. Off 4:32. Winner, Shady Brook Farm's b. c. (3), by Man o' Night—Quillet. Trained by C. Brooks. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:26⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONNAUGHT, $9.00, $3.10, $2.50; RED DOCK, $2.50, $2.20; NIGHTLAND, $2.60.

CONNAUGHT, cleverly rated in front while saving much ground, responded courageously when placed to a drive and held RED DOCK safe at the end. RED DOCK, going close up under light restraint, made a bold effort under extreme pressure, but could not get up. NIGHTLAND came wide entering the stretch, but shook off BLACK TIME in the final drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles (on turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:04. Off 5:04½. Winner, I. Bieber's gr. m. (6), by Strip the Willow—Linotte. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:55⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LA PERLA, $3.50, $4.00, $2.80; MYPONNE, $10.10, $5.10; SUNPHANTOM, $4.60.

LA PERLA, well ridden, followed the pace under restraint until leaving the backstretch, moved up fast when called upon and had something left at the finish. MYPONNE raced GREEN MELON into defeat, but was no match for the winner. SUNPHANTOM closed a big gap.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:34. Off at once. Winner, Mrs. E. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEED, $5.20, $3.10, $2.30; YOUR BUDDY, $5.20, $2.60; KIEVEX, $2.50.

SEED held the field safe for speed while saving ground, opened up a commanding lead entering the stretch, but was ridden out briskly. YOUR BUDDY, in close pursuit of the leader, bore out in the final quarter, but held KIEVEX safe. The latter, a trailer in the early stages, came very wide into the stretch and lost much ground. THE QUEEN had no excuses.

Orleans Feature Won by Hiddenite

New Orleans, Jan. 25 (AP).—Driving down the muddy stretch in a gallant finish, Mrs. J. Chesney's 6-year-old gelded Hiddenite won the featured 1 mile and 70 yards sixth race at the Fair Grounds today by half a length.

It was a stirring affair for platers, 4-year-olds and upward, and wound up with a photo decision for second and third. J. W. Brown's Brown King was finally awarded the place and E. N. Bisso's Whipowill the show.

The winner ran the distance in 1:46 3-5 and paid $11.20 for $2 in the mutuels.

G.P.O. Bowlers Vie in Sweeps

Barnard Pin Event Listed Tomorrow

Entries Expected to Surpass Last Year; Walker Won in '39 With Total of 789

Last year's 34 entries are expected to be doubled for the second annual "Chilly" Barnard Sweepstakes tomorrow at the Government Printing Office bowling alleys. The six-game event will get under way at 12 noon and continue until midnight.

The event was closed to G. P. O. pinmen last year, but this season the committee decided to open it to all bowlers, on a handicap basis. Handicaps will be figured from a scratch of 120, with two-thirds the difference allowed. The limit will be 60 pins for the six games.

Prize money in the event will be 50 per cent of the total entrance fees, with the fee $4 per man. The alleys are located in the G. P. O. Building, North Capitol and G streets, on the Eighth floor.

Monk Walker won the first Barnard Sweeps last year with a 789 total for the six games, an average of better than 130. The National Duckpin Bowling Congress will sanction the tourney.

Next week's card finds two of the biggest sweepstakes in this section carded, one in Baltimore and another in Norfolk, in addition to the "Hap" Burtner Handicap at Convention Hall.

Saturday the top-notch women bowlers will trek to Norfolk for the U. S. Classic, on the Bousch Street Alleys. Top prize money will be at least $100.

Sunday the leading bowlers will roll in the Julian Easterday Sweepstakes, in Baltimore, with first prize $150 and the total cash awards $500. The Burtner Handicap play, honoring the manager of the Convention Hall Alleys, will also carry a $150 first prize, with the entries bowling with handicaps, from a scratch of 128.

Ice Palace Girls Meet Baltimore

The Popular-Club Franklin, leaders of Baltimore's major women's bowling league, will meet the Ice Palace team, current second place team in the Ladies District League, Sunday at the Chevy Chase Alleys. The match will start at 7:30 p. m.

The visitors will be led by the Nation's sixth-ranking woman bowler, Naomi Zimmerman, and will include Ethel Brewer, a consistent tournament winner, Lola Shanahan, a promising newcomer, Ruth Zentz and May Rofsky, both record holders.

Mrs. Lucille Young will lead the hosts in the first of the home and home series. Marie Spates, Eleanor Bark, Jesse Sacrey and Stimmie Hart will also bowl for the Ice Palace team.

QUEEN PIN

Frank Mischou hung up a new game record in the Southeast League at Queen Pin Alleys, putting together four strikes and a pair of late marks for a 177 count. Square Deal Liquor won two from Quality Shop with two 400 sets in the match. Vince Polvinale's 405 and a 400 by Ollie Pacini. Elmer Meade had 152-395 as Brinkley's took two over Dargan's.

RECREATION

Irwin Simon's 396 set led Kann's to an odd-game victory over Garfinckel's in the Department Store League at Recreation, and they held the league lead despite Woodward & Lothrop's sweeping three from Lansburgh's. Raleigh Haberdasher won two from Credit Bureau, with Jack Trenary's 369 high, while Guy Curran won 2-1 over The Hecht Co. and Jelleff's scored over Goldenberg's.

LUCKY STRIKE

A team game of 614 and set of 1,812 led Lucky Strike Tap Room to two victories over the leading Shaffer Flower team in the National Capital League at Lucky Strike. Arthur Ford had 142-369 for the winners and Reds King 397 for Shaffer.

Ed Nash had high set of the night, 402, and his 147 game tied a like count by Bill Miller. Miller's scorer led Ben-Macs to two out of three from Gilleppe's Restaurant. Sun Dial scored over Diamond Cab despite Bob Guethler's 391.

Lincoln climbed near first place in the American Legion League at Lucky Strike, as Clarence Milne's game helped out in a sweep over G. P. O. The leading Nash team lost two to Costello with the latter totaling high team game and set of 577-1,681. W. R. Wright and Bill Smallwood tied for high set with 356.

Gallaudet Host to Shepherd Five

Gallaudet College's basketball team will be seeking to avenge a defeat handed them by the same quintet a week ago when it entertains Shepherd College, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., tonight at 8:30 o'clock at Kendall Green.

Georgie Hanson, Galludet's veteran defense man, will be on the sidelines, and Dick Phillips and Carmen Ludovico may be held out because of injuries suffered in the recent Bridgewater game.

The Blues will take a jaunt to Towson, Md., tomorrow night for a contest with the Teachers, and Coach Earl Jones' wrestling team will be on the road at the same time for a match in Baltimore with the Y. M. C. A. matmen.

Gallaudet hopes to have Ludovico ready to start tonight with Weingold, at forward; Wolach at center, Clements and Auerbache at guards.

Ernie Dusek Victor Over Tarzan White

Tarzan White, the New York Giants' football tackle, took one flying tackle too many last night at Turner's Arena, hurled himself through the ropes into spectators laps and then had his neck cut as he tried to get back in the ring with Ernie Dusek.

Ernie was acclaimed the winner, but when he began stomping upon Tarzan's neck, Referee Casey Berger rushed to the rescue and swapped several swings with Dusek.

Tarzan had been doing all right, but when he sailed out of the ring and landed on his head on the cement floor he was ready for the showers. Berger counted him out before he could make his way up again. The minute he poked his neck under the ropes, however, Ernie planted his toe on it firmly. Crux of the whole matter found four men carting Tarzan to the showers and the 1,000 fans hissing Ernie.

Tommie O'Toole and Joe Cox drew in the semifinal, Alan Eustace and Tommy Rae drew, Frank Judson defeated Joe Maynard, and Lou Plummer defeated Chief White Feather.

ginia Darrow will get the varsity tryouts.

You would think that the women students would be a bit gun-shy, but, as a matter of fact, they are "crazy about shooting," if you'll take the observation of their coach, Mrs. Helen Hanford, who is just about as tall as the .22 rifles are long. This year brought a record number of aspirants.

She says that interest is on the increase in shooting and that she suspects the cause lies in the fact that the girls "get a kick out of doing something thought of as strictly a man's sport."

A rifle team is a strange place for romance, but many a heart has beat quicker over the cold blue metal of a bolt or sight.

Jean Yocum, member of last year's team, and Jack Harlan, who was an all-America rifleman at George Washington in 1938, met on the range and are now married and living in California.

Critics Convinced Armstrong Belongs Among Fight 'Greats'

New York, Jan. 25.—Out of the first showing of the bigger and better Henry Armstrong came the conviction today, even for the diehards among the ring critics and customers, that Little Perpetual Motion definitely belongs among fistiana's greats.

Of his nine-round technical knockout over Pedro Montanez in the fifteenth successful defense of his world welterweight championship last night, the chief impression left with the faithful, of whom there were 19,157 in Madison Square Garden, was that this new, heavier and deadlier punching buzzsaw had definitely proved his right to a niche in the fight game's hall of fame.

One old-timer, sunning himself along Jacobs' Beach, put it this way:

"If there is any fighting man within 10 pounds of Armstrong around today capable of whipping him, then he hasn't registered with the census taker."

Henry Is Tickled Pink

A trifle slower, but pounds heavier—he scaled 139¾—and still the same forward-moving leather pitcher, the little Los Angeles Negro was mighty pleased that the folks felt he finally had "arrived," but that wasn't the principal matter on his mind.

Chief among the hammer's thoughts, naturally, was to drop in at Promoter Mike Jacobs' office and pick up a check for something like $17,500 as his 35 per cent pay for the evening's chores. Montanez, the gallant Puerto Rican who, by his game, hopeless stand, wiped out any thoughts that he had the least bit of what the mob calls "geezer" or "kydoodle" in his makeup, received about $10,000, or 20 per cent of the net gate of $50,556. The gross was $59,575.

Second on the list of things occupying Henry's attention was "What now?" He and his large manager, Eddie Mead, had been planning on two more fights—one more welterweight defense, possibly against Al Davis, Brooklyn left-hook specialist, and then a try at Ceferino Garcia's California-New York portion of the middleweight throne.

It's a Cinch

The Davis doings are a cinch to come off if Al can do an artistic job against Lightweight King Lou Ambers here February 23, and provided a slight difficulty with the law doesn't get any worse for the Brooklyn belter. This difficulty came about when Al, "steamed up" over a ribbing a neighbor in Brownsville had been handing him for months, let fly a punch at the "ribber." This party of the second part went down and out, and had Al arrested for assault.

Then, too, there are "angles" to a Garcia go. Armstrong and Ceferino signed for this fight for Los Angeles February 22. But Promoter Jacobs, who holds contracts to the exclusive rights of both principals, refuses permission for the bout in California, probably toying with the idea of putting it on here himself. Mead was closeted with Jacobs most of this afternoon arguing the matter. Nothing came out of the session.

Eastern Beats Central in Jayvee Game

Eastern High's Jayvee tossers staged an uphill fight to defeat the same species of basketball players from Central High yesterday by a 21-20 margin. The Central boys had held an 18-9 count at the intermission, which was whittled down by the visitors. In fact, Central could make only 2 points in the second half, so close did Eastern guard.

Larry Capone, whose brother used to star for the Eastern varsity, was the leading man for the winners. He dropped in three field goals and a foul for 7 points. Williams and Poston made two field goals each. Citrabaum did the best work for the Central boys with 6 points. Fuoco played well at guard.

The victory was the eighth of the season for the Eastern Jayvees.

G. W. Quintet Leaves Today To Meet Army

Colonials Have High Hopes of Beating Cadets on Own Floor

George Washington University's hard-riding basketball band will depart tonight for West Point where the Colonials go in quest of a highly coveted victory over Army tomorrow afternoon. The squad will leave at 6 o'clock and will spend tonight in New York, moving up the Hudson early tomorrow for the contest, which starts at 4 p. m.

The Colonials are moving at a fast pace just now and a victory over the Cadets might carry their string of victories far into the season. They have won six in a row and the last three weeks have developed amazingly from an average team to one which critics now rate among the best in the East.

Cornell, Princeton Victorious

The Army team, too, has found itself after a shaky start and Coach Valentine (Dutch) Lentz, in his first season at West Point, has steered his charges to important victories over Cornell and Princeton this week.

The Cadets are always hard to beat on their own court, and Coach Bill Reinhart has impressed his squad with the fact that they must be at peak form to land a triumph over the well-conditioned Soldiers. This game should match two well-drilled, talented squads and the result probably will not be decided until the late moments of the game.

Reinhart has handled his squad with a light rein all week, feeling that they need just enough work to keep in top condition.

74 Points Against V. P. I.

Off their brilliant shooting performance in the V. P. I. game last Saturday when they rolled up 74 points for the second time this season, the Colonials need only to keep this pace to give the Cadets a bitter battle and probably to win most of their remaining games. That exhibition, like the earlier one against Davidson, was little short of miraculous.

One of the factors which has kept the Colonials rolling and one which puts pressure on the opposition is the even distribution of scoring power. You can't check one or two men and stop their attack. For instance, Reds Auerbach, the leading scorer with 97 points, is just a jump ahead of Matt Zunic, who has 91. Capt. George Garber has 84 and lanky Joe Comer is next with 80. Bibby Gilham, who was late in establishing himself as a regular, holds fifth with 57.

3 Games in 24 Hours to Test Brewers' Five

The Washington Heurich Brewers, enthusiastic following their surprising 23-to-8 rout of the powerful Troy-Celtics in Troy, N. Y., Wednesday night, will be confronted with an "iron man" schedule over the week-end.

The Brewers, now tied with Philadelphia Sphas for the American League's lead with 12 victories and 7 defeats, are to play three major games within a span of 24 hours when they meet the Sphas in Philadelphia tomorrow night and twice oppose the third-place New York Jewels, recently merged with the Jersey Reds, Sunday.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the Brewers are to entertain the greatly strengthened Jewels at Heurich Gymnasium in one of the outstanding games of the season here. Immediately after this game both clubs are to entrain for Brooklyn, N. Y., for an 8:30 o'clock nightcap.

The Jewels, winner of the American League's title play-off series last season, have been greatly bolstered by the signing of four former Jersey Reds in Ace Goldstein, Moe Spahn, Hagen Anderson and Al Benson and will introduce this newly acquired talent at Heurich Gymnasium Sunday.

Ida Simmons Rolls Matches Tonight

Ida Simmons will close her stay at the Bethesda Bowling Alleys tonight with a series of matches starting at 9 o'clock. She will roll with Frank Riley as a partner against Caroline and Henry Hiser in a mixed doubles match.

In the singles she will be pitted against Ray Huffman. Miss Simmons also will roll with a picked women's team against a picked men's team. Among the women to bowl with her will be Thelma Robinson, Mary Battaglia, Helen Windsor, Dorothy Flack, Mildred Gingell, and Ella Shibler. The men's team will include William Throckmorton, Jack Perrell, George Linkins, Bob Miller, John Swope, Bob Miciotto, and William Barker.

Foreign Agent Inquiry to Last 8 More Weeks

Jury Investigation Still Concerned With Communist Activity

The special grand jury investigation of activity of foreign agents in Washington will take at least eight weeks more, the special assistants to the Attorney General who are conducting the investigation said yesterday.

The connections of witnesses now being questioned indicated that the inquiry still is concerned with Communist and alleged Soviet activity and has not taken up the activities of bunds and other pro-Nazi groups.

Harry Monroe, New York writer for The Daily Worker, who was in custody 5½ hours Wednesday and then paroled to his attorney, was released yesterday. Prosecutors Henry G. O'Donnell, Floyd M. Rett and Durward Balch determined not to pursue further the questions Monroe had declined to answer. The information sought may be available from other sources, the prosecutors indicated.

The grand jury yesterday heard testimony from Avrum Landy, president of the Daily Worker Company, and A. B. McGill, vice president of the New Masses company. Both are Communist organs.

Witnesses summoned for today's hearing were ordered to produce documents, to be added to the imposing file already assembled by the prosecutors. Names of the new witnesses were kept confidential.

28 Physicians Offer Services to Jewish Indigent

Services of 28 medical specialists have been volunteered for aid of indigent Jewish families this year, the Jewish Social Service Agency announced yesterday. This will be the fifth year such help has been furnished through the agency.

8 District Men Seek Merchant Marine Cadetship

Eight District men are among 450 candidates who will undergo examination Monday for cadetships in the merchant marine, the Maritime Commission announced yesterday.

They are Peter W. Branch, 1733 Twentieth street northwest; Robert Allen Bryan, 1232 Perry street northeast; Andrew M. J. Carlin, 1853 Mintwood place northwest; William F. Haber, 1401 West Virginia avenue northeast; John Davis, Bullis School, Silver Spring, Md.; Reuben E. Stivers, 6309 Connecticut avenue, Chevy Chase, Md.; Joseph F. Wagner, jr., 1605 D street northeast; John C. Zarcone, 1305 Kenyon street northwest.

Letitia Calhoun Rites to Be Today

Funeral services for Miss Letitia Calhoun, 81, who died Wednesday at her home, 2153 California street northwest, after a short illness, will be held today at 2 p. m. from Gawler's chapel, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Miss Calhoun, who entered the old Engraving and Printing Bureau when she was 15, was one of the first women in Government service. In 1879 she was transferred to the Treasury, where she was an expert coin counter and skilled in identifying counterfeit money, retiring at the age of 74.

William Niller, Investment Banker, Dies

Harriman Ripley & Co. Division Manager Dies in Alexandria

William Niller, 49, division manager here for Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., investment banking firm, died yesterday at his home, 323 South Fairfax street, Alexandria. He had been ill six months with a heart ailment.

A native of Baltimore, Mr. Niller came to Washington 10 years ago as division manager for the National City Co., Inc., and later was employed in the same capacity by Brown-Harriman Co., Inc.

Mr. Niller was a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology and was engaged in banking and investment in Atlanta before coming to Washington.

He was a member of the Metropolitan Club here, Kappa Alpha national fraternity and several clubs in Atlanta.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Houston Westbrook Niller, and a daughter, Miss Houston Niller, both of Alexandria.

Funeral services will be held from Chambers, 3072 M street northwest, at noon tomorrow.

Woman, 76, Lost On Trip in Snow To Family Graves

After more than 24 hours, police last night still were searching without success for Mrs. Catherine Kopfman, 76, who walked from her home Wednesday to visit the graves of her husband and three children.

After telling her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mary Kopfman, she would be found at the graves, she was believed to have left home about noon, braving the deep snow to make her way to Glenwood Cemetery. She made her home with her son-in-law, Charles Fox, at 604 Twenty-second street northwest.

Mrs. Dorothy Douglas, investigator for the Missing Persons Bureau, reported yesterday she had checked every probable place, including Glenwood and the Little Sisters of the Poor, of which Mrs. Kopfman had spoken often. Mrs. Kopfman was described in a police radio broadcast as 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing 150 pounds and wearing a black coat and hat.

Zoning Board Approves 3 Pleas, Rejects 3

Permission Granted For Parking Lot For Theater Patrons

The Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday acted on nine appeals, approving three, denying three and deferring action on three.

It also granted a rehearing on an appeal to establish a sandpit at Forty-ninth and A streets southeast, which had been granted previously.

Petitions approved were:

Mrs. A. B. Davis, owner, on behalf of the Globe Amusement Co., for permission to use the property in rear of 2332 Wisconsin avenue northwest, for temporary parking of automobiles for patrons of Calvert Theater. Plans for landscaping must be submitted to Park and Planning Commission.

G. Cappelli, for permission to change a nonconforming use from a grocery store to a dry cleaning establishment at 200 Fifth street southeast.

Anacostia Lodge of Masonic Order, for permission to establish a bowling alley on Nichols avenue and U street southeast. The petition must also be approved by the Zoning Commission.

Two pleas for gasoline stations were denied. These were to be at Carroll and Maple streets northwest, and at George avenue and Taylor street northwest. The other appeal disapproved was the request of Emilie Pfeil for permission to construct a dwelling at 617 Twenty-first street northwest.

Action was deferred on appeals of the Texas Co., which requested extension of a nonconforming gasoline station; Charles E. Krey and Sydney B. Harrison, for permission to make alterations to a nonconforming apartment building, and Henry Oxenburg, for permission to erect a three-story apartment house at Thirty-third place and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Adjoining LotsCan Be Taxed as One

Owners of abutting lots may have such lots combined for tax purposes and receive a single bill, Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent announced yesterday. Before such requests are granted, he added, all taxes in arrears must be paid, as well as taxes for the half year in which the application is made.

Frequently, he said, owners of adjoining lots will receive two bills for taxes and inadvertently pay only one, later finding that for which no taxes were paid advertised for sale. Dent asked property owners to send in their addresses. There is no requirement for mailing bills, he said, but doing so assists the taxpayer.

Retains His Office As General Manager Of the Company

C. A. Robinson, general manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was elected vice president and general manager of the company at the meeting of the directors held yesterday.

Mr. Robinson's term of service in the Bell system began in 1906, when he was employed by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Co. He came to Washington in 1920 as chief engineer, and was promoted to the position of assistant vice president in 1929. In 1931 he was transferred to Charleston, W. Va., as general manager of the C. & P. Co. of West Virginia, where he remained until 1936, when he returned to Washington as general manager here.

Mr. Robinson is a native of Anne Arundel County, Maryland, a graduate of John Hopkins and Cornell universities, a member of the Congressional Country Club, Metropolitan Club, Washington Board of Trade, Rotary Club, Cornell Alumni Club of Washington, D. C., the Gibson Island Club, Gibson Island, Md., and a fellow of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

A. & P. Stores Drop Dealings With Brokers

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 25.—The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. announced today that it would stop buying from manufacturers who deal with brokers.

The action follows a Federal Trade Commission order forbidding the paying of brokerage to the grocery chain on purchases made for it through its field agents.

The United States Court of Appeals sustained the commission's order and the Supreme Court of the United States recently refused to review the case.

Caruthers Ewing, general counsel of the A. & P., said that the company's step was taken with the greatest reluctance.

"It had no choice in the matter," he said. "The Federal Trade Commission and the court forbade it from accepting any allowance or discount which in whole or part represented brokerage being currently paid by sellers on sales to others.

"By avoiding purchases from a manufacturer who currently pays brokerage no inference can be drawn that a permissible discount represents in whole or in part brokerage so currently being paid.

"Since the Robinson-Patman act went into effect the A. & P. has paid independent brokers upward of $8,000,000. This excludes any idea that the company is hostile to brokers."

December Security Sales 8.9 Per Cent Under November

The market value of sales on all registered securities exchanges in December 1939 amounted to $892,789,285, a decrease of 8.9 per cent from the value of sales in November and a decrease of 34.9 per cent from December 1938, according to the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday. Stock sales, excluding rights and warrants, had a market value of $767,061,701, a decrease of 9.1 per cent from November. Bond sales were valued at $125,630,977, a decrease of 7.3 per cent from November. Sales of rights and warrants in December totaled $96,607.

The volume of sales in stocks, excluding rights and warrants, in December was 31,238,335 shares, a decrease of 11.4 per cent from November's total. Total principal amount of bonds sold was $206,047,250, an increase of 6.3 per cent over November.

The two leading New York Exchanges accounted for 93.8 per cent of the value of all sales, 92.9 per cent of stock sales and 99.6 per cent of bond sales on all registered exchanges.

Washington December sales were $123,292, composed of $44,459 stocks and $78,833 bonds.

Brokers' Loans Drop $11,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported yestreday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $427,000,000.

The week ended yesterday and the total represented a decrease of $11,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $681,000,000.

Wheat Drops With Decline In Demand

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Wheat prices slumped almost two cents a bushel today to the lowest level in about two weeks and to within less than a cent of the lowest point since mid-December.

Selling was not aggressive but there was little buying power to counteract offerings. Pit brokers said buyers apparently were discouraged by quiet foreign and domestic demand, reports of improved moisture conditions in the Southwest, forecast of rising temperatures and uncertainty regarding the wheat loan situation. Weakness of cotton and securities also was a factor.

Some purchasing credited to mills and previous "short" sellers helped to rally prices at times but the day's lows were recorded in final trades with wheat 1½ to 1⅞ cents lower than yesterday; May, 98⅝@98½; July, 96⅛@96.

Other grains sagged with wheat, even rye weakening after an early advance of more than a cent due to the first substantial export business in some time. Corn closed ⅜ to ⅝ lower; May, 57⅛-58¼; July, 57⅛. Oats, ¼ to ⅜ off. Rye ⅜ lower to ⅛ higher. Soy beans, 1¾ to 2 lower, and lard 3 higher to 2 lower.

Electric Production Declines in Week

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Electric power output declined slightly in the week ended January 20 from high levels prevailing in December and early January but maintained a substantial increase over a year ago. It was the first week to week drop in output thus far in 1940. Production totaled 2,572,117,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reported. This represented a decline of 0.8 of 1 per cent from 2,592,767,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week. It was 12.3 per cent ahead of 2,289,659,000 in the comparable 1939 week.

The decline was more than seasonally anticipated. Hence the Associated Press weighted index of power production dropped to 127 from 128 a week earlier. The index is based on 1929-30 as 100 and is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trends. A year ago it stood at 116.2.

Illinois Oil Output At All-Time High

Centralia, Ill., Jan. 24 (AP).—Illinois oil production skyrocketed to an all-time record during the week ended January 20, averaging 366,931 barrels daily, an increase of 22,664 over the previous record, established the last week in September, 1939, the oil and gas journal announced today.

Records were also established in the Lake Centralia-Salem and Louden pools which averaged 211,988 and 75,611 barrels respectively last week. In the previous seven day period production in the lake area averaged 196,123 and at Louden it totaled 66,989. All other basin fields produced 71,826 last week as compared with 65,631 in the previous week, and old fields produced 7,506 as against 6,998. The State's output during the week of January 20 represented an increase of 31,191 over the preceding period.

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended January 20 as approximately 9,825,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1939, 8,170,000 tons; 1938, 7,316,000 tons. Percentage of change: 1939, increase 20.3 per cent; 1938, increase 34.3 per cent.

Beth. Steel Net In 4th Quarter 10-Year Peak

Profit of $13,028,928 Compares With $3,658, In 1938 Quarter

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 25.—Bethlehem Steel Corporation today announced net profit of $13,028,928 for the final three months of 1939, the largest for any quarter in ten years. The three months' earnings compare with $5,377,470 in the preceding quarter, and $3,658,160 in the final quarter of 1938.

After preferred dividend requirements, the profit equaled $3.74 a common share, compared with $1.10 a share in the preceding three months, and 56 cents in the corresponding 1938 period.

For the full year, the company earned $24,638,384, or $5.75 a common share, the best showing since 1937, and compared with $5,250,239, equal to 70 cents a share on the 5 per cent preferred stock and $4.92 a share on the 7 per cent preferred in 1938.

Eugene G. Grace, president, announced that directors had voted to call and redeem on April 1 the 5 per cent $20 par value preferred shares, outstanding in the amount of $18,000,000 or $19,000,000.

The board declared a dividend of $1 a share on the common stock, the same amount as was paid last December 1. Outside of the distributions voted today and paid last December, and the 50 cents per share paid last September 13, there had been no disbursements on the common since 1937.

Regular dividends of $1.75 a share on the 7 per cent preferred of $100 par value and 25 cents a share on the 5 per cent preferred were also authorized, payable April 1 to holders of March 1. The common dividend is payable March 1 to holders of record February 9.

In announcing the call of the 5 per cent preferred issue, Grace said something more may be done later this year in revamping the corporation's corporate structure. He hinted the company was weighing refunding of one 4¼ per cent bond issue and another 3¾ per cent issue through sale of new securities bearing lower interest coupons.

Grace said new business this month was coming in a volume large enough to keep mills operating at around 50 per cent of capacity. He said he expected "good operations" during the remainder of the first quarter and part of the second, but beyond that he would not make a prediction. Bethlehem plants currently are operating at around 91 per cent of capacity.

Living Costs Cut By Lower Food and Rent

New York, Jan. 25.—The cost of living of wage earners in the United States declined in December for the third consecutive month, falling one half of 1 per cent between November and December, according to the monthly survey made by the division of industrial economics of the Conference Board.

This decline was caused by a decrease in food prices and rentals; all the other items of a wage earner's budget were unchanged during this period. The cost of living in December was 0.6 per cent below December, 1938, and 15 per cent below December, 1939, but 19 per cent above the low point of 1933.

Food prices declined 1.4 per cent from the November level, making them 2.2 per cent lower than in December, 1938, and 27.3 per cent lower than in December, 1929, but 28.5 per cent higher than in March, 1933.

Rents were 0.1 per cent lower in December than in November and 5.6 per cent lower than in December, 1929, but 0.5 per cent higher than in December, 1938, and 38.1 per cent higher than in January, 1934.

Clothing prices in December remained the same as in November. They were 0.1 per cent lower than in December, 1938; 26.6 per cent lower than in December, 1929, and 20.1 per cent higher than the low point of 1933.

Coal prices did not change between November and December. They were 0.5 per cent below December, 1938; 9.3 per cent below December, 1929, and 4.1 per cent above the June, 1933, low.

The purchasing value of the dollar was 117.2 cents in December, as compared with 116.7 cents in November, 116.6 cents in December, 1938; 99.7 cents in December, 1929, and 100 cents in 1923.

Retail Advertising Holds Above Year Ago

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Despite a loss of 1.5 per cent in the volume of newspaper advertising placed by retailers in 80 major cities during the week ended January 13, retail advertising volume in these cities during the week ended January 13, retail advertising volume in these cities is still fractionally up in comparison with the first two weeks of 1939, Advertising Age reported today.

Volume for the first two weeks of 1940 totaled 32,368,835 lines, compared with 32,133,962 lines in the same period last year, for an increase of approximately 235,000 lines, or 0.7 per cent. For the single week ended January 13, volume was 16,001,237 lines, compared with 16,243,818 lines in the corresponding week of 1939.

Provident Mutual Is 75 Years Old

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.—In his annual message to policy owners calling attention to the fact that the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Philadelphia this year celebrates its seventy-fifth anniversary, M. Albert Linton, president, said that assets were $363,713,000, an increase of $17,295,000 during the year. New paid life insurance amounted to $86,765,000 or 90.9 per cent of the total for 1938. Outstanding insurance increased by $9,143,000 to $980,044,000. Payments to policy owners amounted to $27,706,000, an increase of $790,000. Contingency reserves increased from $18,431,000 to $19,874,000 during the year.

Politics Prime Factor in Market; Third Term for Roosevelt the Question; Speculative Rail Bonds in Demand

New York, Jan. 25.—Politics continues to displace war news and business indices as the moving force behind the stock market. Representative brokers ascribed a major share of Wednesday's advance to the statement of John L. Lewis, C. I. O. head, that if Mr. Roosevelt runs for a third term he will go down to ignominious defeat. Mr. Lewis' break with the New Deal, however, apparently does not have the wholehearted support of his United Mine Workers of America. For at their convention in Columbus, Ohio, today, they introduced 47 resolutions supporting the President for a third term.

In board rooms and throughout the financial district the question of under discussion center about the third term and other items of domestic politics, for the great majority of investors feel there must be an end of Federal deficits, of Governmental opposition to business and to further experimentation in the field of economics if the problem of unemployment is to be solved.

The turn of events in politics was seen by most of those in the street today as a factor in the stemming of the rise which was so pronounced on the previous day. The decline today was small, measuring only 0.13 point, and there was a show of firmness in the utilities, equipment and rails. The great majority of changes were fractional, exceptions being a point gain in Union Pacific and losses of slightly more than a point each in United States Steel and Westinghouse. General Motors gave up nearly a point. Most active was Curtiss Wright, off a small fraction, and most of the other aviations gave back a portion of their advances of Wednesday.

Frank and Utilities

The better tone in the public utility section of the list was traceable largely to the speech of Jerome Frank, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Mr. Frank indicated that in carrying out integration of the public utility systems of the country there would be no destruction of values.

This was reassuring and it is sincerely hoped by investors that he is right. The chairman adopted the familiar practice of New Deal spokesmen of reverting back to the 1920's in his effort to justify reforms which his commission is ordered to carry out. While rather a threadbare practice, a certain amount of it does no harm and in general his remarks on what is in store for the utilities were well received.

Business news of the mid-week has virtually no affect upon prices. Carloadings were down more than seasonally for the week ended January 20, the decline being 21,891 cars from the previous week. The volume is still 59,166 cars above the like week of 1939. Engineering construction awards, according to Engineering News-Record, are 38 per cent below the like period of last year. Secretary of Labor Perkins reported industrial employment of mid-December at the highest since October, 1937.

American Telephone was steady in the face of the Washington report that the Federal Communications Commission is to study the possibility of further reductions in long-distance phone rates.

Commodities generally tended to lower levels. Wheat went to the lowest in two weeks in orderly selling that developed on reports of rising temperatures over important wheat areas. The close was down ⅛ to 1⅞ cents a bushel. Cotton closed unchanged to 10 points lower with continued heavy foreign selling the feature.

Bond Market Irregular

Listed bonds were somewhat irregular today, with speculative issues in better demand than high grade investment bonds. Turnover amounted only to $6,490,000. Treasury bonds drifted slightly lower, and the trend of foreign government obligations were interspersed with occasional losses.

Foreign uncertainties were reflected in ragged movements in foreign dollar issues. Japanese bonds were marked down. Scandinavians softened because of the threat of enlargement of the European conflict. Belligerent country issues almost all receded. Argenties were firm in the Latin-American group while default bonds turned irregular.

Speculative railroad bonds of the domestic department were mostly up by small fractions. There was again some buying of reorganization rails, but on a smaller scale than in previous sessions.

Long term United States Treasury securities were marked lower by smallest fractions, on rumors that agency financing soon may develop. Indicative is the fact that no single official transaction was recorded in guaranteed bonds. Best corporate securities were idle and steady.

Copper Stocks Cut in Half During War

Supply at Year-end Was 159,485 Tons Against 316,543 On July 31

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 25.—Domestic copper statistics, published today by the Copper Institute for the first time since they were discontinued because of the war, disclosed that refined stocks in the hands of producers had been virtually cut in half during the last five months of 1939. At the end of the year they were equivalent to only one and a half to two months' supply at the indicated rate of consumption.

Domestic production and shipments to consumers stepped up sharply during the period, but foreign buying held at approximately the July level.

Figures showed that the fall buying wave cut producers' stocks of refined metal from 316,543 tons on July 31 to 159,485 tons at the year end. A year ago stocks totaled 289,755 tons.

Shipments 91,000 Tons a Month

Shipments to domestic consumers were up still more sharply, totaling 457,315 tons, or about 91,000 tons a month. July shipments were 59,681 tons.

Deliveries to foreign customers amounted to 79,584 tons, an average of approximately 16,000 tons a month and on a level with July shipments of 16,127 tons.

Total shipments, both domestic and foreign, were 536,899 tons, or about 107,000 tons a month. At this rate of deliveries, domestic stocks of refined copper at the year-end were equal to about one and one-half months' supply. Present shipments, however, are reported in trade sources to be substantially below the average level of last fall.

Freight Holds Gains Over Past 2 Years

Total for January 20 Week Is 10.1% Above 1939, 13.3% Over '38

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended January 20 totaled 645,822 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 59,166 cars, or 10.1 per cent above the corresponding week in 1939 and an increase of 75,589 cars, or 13.3 per cent, above the same week in 1938. Loading of revenue freight for the week of January 20 was a decrease of 21,891 cars, or 3.3 per cent, below the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 350,708 cars, a decrease of 10,214 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 29,003 cars above the corresponding week in 1939.

Coal loading amounted to 158,572 cars, a decrease of 5,791 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 31,047 cars above the corresponding week in 1939.

Grain Loadings Decline

Grain and grain products loading totaled 28,089 cars, a decrease of 3,783 cars below the preceding week, and a decrease of 4,942 cars below the corresponding week in 1939. In the Western districts alone grain and grain products loading for the week of January 20 totaled 16,291 cars, a decrease of 3,086 cars below the preceding week, and a decrease of 4,482 cars below the corresponding week in 1939.

Livestock loading amounted to 12,484 cars, a decrease of 1,736 cars below the preceding week, and a decrease of 1,349 cars below the corresponding week in 1939. In the Western districts alone loading of live stock for the week of January 20 totaled 9,098 cars, a decrease of 1,440 cars below the preceding week, and a decrease of 1,139 cars below the corresponding week in 1939.

Forest products loading totaled 30,660 cars, an increase of 558 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 3,416 cars above the corresponding week in 1939.

Ore loading amounted to 10,052 cars, an increase of 720 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 1,088 cars above the corresponding week in 1939.

Coke loading amounted to 12,338 cars, a decrease of 454 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 4,575 cars above the corresponding week in 1939.

All districts reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1939 and all except the Southwestern reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1938.

British Holders Continue Sale Of Stocks Here

The Securities Commission disclosed yesterday sales in two low-priced stock issues by English owners. Its supplemental report of transactions by officers, directors and principal owners in November showed that Decca Record Co., Ltd., London, sold 3,000 shares of Decca Records, Inc., common stock, reducing its holdings to 47,224 shares on November 30. The British firm had sold 33,347 shares October 17.

E. R. Lewis, of London, reported the sale of 9,500 shares of the same stock in November, leaving no holdings in that issue. He had disposed of 18,653 shares in October.

Another sale reported was that of 1,000 shares of Gillette Safety Razor common held by Ernest H. Cooper, of Isleworth, England, an officer and director. Cooper held 500 shares of the common and 900 shares of the $5 cumulative convertible preferred at the end of November. Other November transactions included:

Matthew C. Brush, of New York, sold 1,000 shares of Air Reduction common stock. Ernest R. Breech, of Detroit, bought 300 shares of Bendix Aviation Corporation common. E. A. Cudahy, of Chicago, purchased 600 shares of Cudahy Packing Co. common.

Engineering Awards Decline for Week

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday totaled $32,678,000, a decrease of 21 per cent from the previous week and 34 per cent below a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Private awards, which had been showing encouraging gains ever since last fall, were down 16 per cent from the week before and were 32 per cent less than last year. Public construction continued to taper off with a decline of 23 per cent from the previous week and 35 per cent from a year ago.

Motor Car Output Increases in Week

Detroit, Jan. 25 (AP).—Automotive News, in its weekly survey of the motor-car industry, today placed output volume for the week ending January 27 at 104,242 units. Assemblies last week totaled 103,154 and this week a year ago they aggregated 91,834 vehicles, the Trade Publication said.

It added that Packard had resumed final assemblies after a week's inventory, but that Willys-Overland plants were inactive and that Pontiac and Oldsmobile had reduced their work-week to four days.

Profit-Taking Sales Cut Egg Prices

Chicago, Jan. 25 (AP).—Profit-taking sales, attracted by the recent 8-cent advance in January refrigerator egg contracts, forced prices of the contracts down 2½ cents a dozen today.

Indications that demand for reserve eggs had backed up as a result of an 8-cent rise in wholesale egg prices during the past two weeks prompted traders to sell. Prospects of moderating temperatures in Western and Southern producing areas also encouraged profit-taking.

Cotton Rally Offsets Drop In Prices

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 25.—The cotton futures market dashed off on another tangent today. Final prices were unchanged to 10 points lower following Wednesday's spectacular sprint of more than $2 a bale.

Brokers had to work fast to keep up with quotations throughout the session. The market was easily influenced one way or the other, and at one time the list had been pounded down as much as $1 a bale. A last minute rally brought prices up to around the best for the day.

Bombay was again in the front ranks of the sellers. At the same time speculative interests were active and New Orleans sold vigorously.

Domestic mills countered the selling orders with a fair amount of price fixing. Trade demand was lacadaisical.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures were pulled lower along with the main body of allied commodities today. Final prices were off 5 to 11 points. Hedging by refiners against inventory positions and crude purchases acted as a drag while fresh interest was hindered by slow consumer demand for defined oil. Sales totaled 53 contracts; March, 6.75*; May, 6.91; July, 7.06*; September, 7.06.

*Bid.

Crude oil was quoted nominally at 5¼@6 cents f. o. b. mound in the Southeast and valley and 5¾ in Texas.

Federal Debt Headed Above Present Limit

New York, Jan. 25.—At the beginning of this month, the Government compiled its budget for 1940-41. The budget for 1940-41 provides for a reduction of $675,000,000 in expenditures from the 1939-40 level, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. It is also expected that receipts next year will be larger than during the current year. Consequently, after allowance for debt retirement, next year's deficit is estimated at $2,876,000,000 as compared with the current year's estimated deficit of $3,933,000,000.

It is planned to meet $700,000,000 of next year's deficit by taking surplus funds from Government corporations. Consequently, the deficit will mean an increase of only $2,176,000,000 in the debt. Even such an increase, however, would raise the debt to $45,399,000,000, or a figure in excess of the $45,000,000,000 debt limit fixed by law.

Proposed New Taxes

Consequently, the Administration has proposed that $460,000,000 be raised by new taxes. If such taxes are imposed and the expected amount is collected, the increase in the debt next year will be $1,716,000,000. The debt at the end of the year will thus amount to $44,939,000,000, which will be slightly below the debt limit. If Congress does not impose these new taxes, it is apparent that Congress will either have to raise the debt limit or to curtail proposed expenditures for next year.

It is evident that Government financing next year will have a much less inflationary influence than it is having this year, especially if new taxes are imposed. This may result in a general deflationary movement if the Government's curtailment of deficit-spending is not offset by the inflationary effect of the war. When the Government curtailed its deficit-spending in the fiscal year 1937-1938, a deflationary movement occurred which contributed to the sharp business recession at the end of 1937.

Chile Gives Baldwin $725,000 Order

Philadelphia, Jan. 25 (AP).—The Baldwin Locomotive Works announced the receipts today of a $725,000 order for 11 locomotives for the Chilean state railways.

Six of the locomotives are passenger type, five are broad gauge for mountain service.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today's hand shows two of the experts, Oswald Jacoby and Baron Waldemar von Zedtwitz, at work during the Pittsburgh play. A pair of overconfident resident players had the temerity to double the champions at two hearts. The baron reeled off the contract with ease, winning game and top score for his side.

The bidding and the cards are shown in today's box, East's double of two hearts, particularly after Ossie's raise, had a touch of bravado in it. Even against poor players it would be a "close" question.

The baron made short work of the challenge. West led the ten of diamonds; it ran to declarer's ace. A club was led, and West hopped up with his ace, returning another diamond. The king took this trick and two club honors were cashed, the baron discarding a spade from his hand. The king of hearts caught the queen; a heart finesse of the seven picked up another trick, and the heart ace and ten were later redeemed to finish the contract.

South made two hearts, doubled, winning two diamonds, two clubs and four hearts.

Cromwell Takes Post

Ottawa, Jan. 25 (AP).—James H. R. Cromwell, new United States Minister to Canada, yesterday presented his credentials to the governor general, Lord Tweedsmuir.

Listen!

with Slocum

Far be it from me to bite the hand that feeds me, but the C. B. S. press releases for today yield nothing more intriguing than a faint ennui, so this harassed author toured WJSV asking everyone available just one question: "What'll I write about today?" Herein appended are the answers:

John Charles Daly, announcer: Write about Dorothy Lamour. Such things as when she'll arrive in town (answer: 8:15 this morning), where she'll stay (answer: ain't telling) and what she's doing tomorrow night (answer: We haven't made up our minds yet, probably just a quiet evening at Dick's Bar and Grill).

Bill Murdock, sales manager: I told some guy in Chicago that I'd tell you to write that fruit juices, such as pineapple, orange, lemon, etc., are good for a cold. Write about fruit juices.

A. D. Willard, jr., general manager, WJSV: Write about the fact that tickets for the President's Birthday parties are on sale in front of the Earle Building.

Harry Crow, treasurer: Write out an expense account for that last trip you chiseled to New York.

Clyde Hunt, chief engineer: Write about 50,000 watts. I love the sound of that phrase, and WJSV will have 50,000 watts power very, very soon.

Bill Boyd, movie star who was over yesterday morning for some pictures: Write about my wife, Grace Bradley, the movie star. I know she'd enjoy that, Mr. Slatten.

Reginald Allen, announcer: Write about Announcer Lee Vicker's wonderful new glasses. They fit right into the eye and are absolutely invisible from 3 feet.

Barry Blake, producer: Tell the folks about the wonderful shows we produce at WJSV. (Ed's note: This last was slightly insulting, inasmuch as I had always felt that the beauties of WJSV received full and ample attention in this space.)

Arch McDonald: You might mention that I've got a great big, lovely and rich new sponsor for my sports shows. There's something about a sponsor that makes a broadcaster feel good all over.

The Dragon's Teeth

Chapter 13

"DRIVING OFF into the country alone!" Beau frowned. "How about Miss Cole? Mr. De Carlos?"

"Miss Cole didn't leave the grounds all day. She entertained a party of newspaper people on the lawn. They left before dark and she had dinner alone and went up to her room. She called your number in the City just after dinner."

"I know, I know. How about De Carlos?"

"Mr. De Carlos threw a water-party in the pool for Mr. and Mrs. Goossens and some free-gin lappers in the afternoon. He got drunk on absinthe at 4:30 and had to be helped to his quarters."

"When did the girls get back from their picnic?"

"Less than an hour ago. Miss Day went right to bed. Miss Shawn drove her roadster round to the garage; butler told me. I guess she's gone on up to her rooms."

Beau drove back to the house. He went upstairs and knocked on Kerrie's door.

He knocked again, listening; then he tried the door and found it unlocked. He pushed it open, went in, snapped on the light, and looked around.

Not there.

He was about to cross to the boudoir door when it opened and Violet Day, in a mauve satin neglige, her hair in two blonde braids down her back, her eyes half-closed in the light, as if she had been in darkness for some time, stood in the doorway.

There was a snub-nosed automatic in her left hand, and it was pointed at Beau's breast.

"Oh, it's you," said Vi. But she did not lower the automatic. "What do you think you're doing, pussy-footing around in Kerrie's bedroom?"

"Where is she?"

"Kerrie? Isn't she here?" A shadow passed over Vi's face; she looked quickly about. "But I thought—"

"Put that pea-shooter down before you hurt somebody!" Vi's arm sank. "Now where is she?"

"I came up here and she drove around to the garage to put the car away."

"When?"

"Almost an hour ago. I was just dozing off when you—"

But Beau was gone.

He drove toward the garage. As he approached he saw the unmoving shine of two headlights. He jumped out and ran over to Kerrie's roadster. It was backed against a big beech tree, and it was empty.

Puzzled, Beau followed the parallel lines of the roadster's headlights. Then he saw the broken door of the second garage compartment. He ran over and examined it. There was no lock on the fallen door. He rose, sniffing. Exhaust smell. But he could hear no sound of a running motor, and all five of the other garage stalls were closed and silent.

He sprinted back to the roadster. "Kerrie! Kerrie Shawn!"

THERE WAS no answer, and he began to circle the roadster. With a flashlight he examined the rear of the car; it was battered, its bumper hanging crazily. Then he went on and saw Kerrie lying still in the grass.

Flying feet made a noise behind him. "Kerrie! Is she—is she—dead?" Violet Day stood panting there. She had slipped a squirrel coat over her negligee. Her hair was disordered and her eyes big with fear.

"No. Breathing very fast. Heart's racing. Kerrie!" Beau shook the limp body.

"But—but what——"

"Looks as if she was caught in the garage and had to fight her way out. Kerrie!" He slapped her pale right cheek, his left arm supporting her head. "Kerrie! Wake up. It's——"

Her eyelids fluttered. Her eyes were dull, her brow furrowed, her mouth open to the night air.

"I'm—dizzy," she said with a groan. "Who—I can't see—well——"

"It's . . . Ellery Queen," said Beau, but Vi flung herself beside Kerrie and cried: "It's Vi, hon! What happened? What was it this time?"

"Garage—carbon monoxide——" Kerrie fainted again.

"Carbon monoxide!" Beau shouted: "Get a lot of black coffee!"

Vi flew off.

Beau turned Kerrie over in the grass and straddled her. Her mouth and nose were sucking in the air. His big hands gripped her ribs; his torso worked up and down in a slow rhythm.

"Lucky for you I did, gorgeous."

"What do you mean?" She opened her Egyptian eyes wide, staring in the innocent-little-girl way she affected.

"You know what I mean."

"But I don't. I was shocked to hear about Kerrie's latest adventure with the fates. She has such foul luck with horses and garages, hasn't she? Is she all right this morning?" Margo sat down on the chaise longue and patted it invitingly.

"No thanks to you." Beau laughed, stretching out beside her. She leaned on him, chin propped on her long hands, eyes on his face. "Don't you think that was a little raw, baby?"

"Raw?" She looked blank.

"This last stunt of yours." His tone said he was amused.

"This last——" She wrinkled her nose in perplexity. Then she laughed. "You think I locked Kerrie in that garage and tried to kill her? I?"

"That's what I mean."

She stopped laughing. "I don't like that!"

"Neither do I. That's why I'm giving you a little friendly advice."

"That, cheri," she said softly, "is a very dangerous thing to say. I might sue you for slander—if I didn't like you so much."

"I wouldn't be wasting my time if I didn't have your interests at heart."

"Heart! What do you know about hearts? You're a lump, a stone!"

He grinned at her. "Yeah. Like coal. Hard and black and cold. Till you light a fire under it."

"You're a cinder!"

"Try me and see."

She rose suddenly and went to the window to stare out at the gardens.

"Come here," said Beau lazily.

She turned with reluctance. Then she went back to him and sat down again, and he took her hands.

"You don't believe me, do you?"

"In what way?"

He put his arms about her. "Don't you know, deep inside, that you're safe with me, baby?"

"Safe?"

"Don't you know you and I can go places together? The only thing is—you're a little foolish."

"What a charming compliment!"

"You're foolish because you take foolish chances. You've let yourself be swept away by your feelings. That's why women's crimes are so easy to spot. For one thing, you think I'm in love with Kerrie Shawn."

"Aren't you?" she asked through her strong white teeth.

"That skinny little thing? When I'm a sucker for your type?"

"Just my type?" She was growing arch now.

"For you, damn you! You know it, only you're too damn suspicious. Does this feel phony?"

He pulled her over until she lay in his arms.

"Does it?" He kissed her.

She closed her eyes, responding slowly. But it was the creep of a rising flood.

"Wait. Wait," she gasped, pushing him away. "You say you don't love her. How do you know? The way you've looked at her. And last night——"

"I tell you she doesn't mean a thing to me!" snarled Beau. "But I'm smarter than you, baby. I put on an act. And you'd be a hell of a lot smarter to put on an act, too, instead of running your neck into a noose!"

"I don't—know what you mean."

"You want her dough, don't you?" said Beau in a brutal tone. "All right. How do you try to get your hands on it? By putting her out of the way. Dangerous, you fool! It takes finesse. You can get what you want a whole lot more safely."

She did not answer in words. She pulled him down to her and put her lips to his ear.

"You can get it, and me, too," growled Beau.

She whispered.

"But we split, see?"

She kissed a trail from his ear to his lips.

Later, when Beau left her, he went into a bathroom and spent three minutes rinsing his mouth.

She was just coming to again when Vi, accompanied by Margo Cole and half the household, ran up. Vi carried a pitcher of steaming coffee and a glass.

"Vi says—" cried Margo; she was half-dressed. "Vi says Kerrie—Monoxide poisoning—"

Beau did not look at her. He seized the pitcher, poured a glass of coffee, sat Kerrie up and forced her to swallow. She cried out weakly, shaking her head. His fingers clamped the back of her neck; he exerted pressure, and she drank, tears streaming down her dusty cheeks.

When she had swallowed one glassful, he forced her to swallow another. A trace of color began to show in her cheeks.

"Drink it. Breathe in—hard. And drink."

She drank and drank, while the silent group stood about.

"All right," said Beau. "It's as much as we can do now. Anybody call a doctor?"

"I did, sir," said the butler. "Dr. Murphy, of Tarrytown."

"All we can do till the doctor comes is put her to bed. Kerrie!"

Her head was against his shoulder, resting heavily.

"Kerrie. Put your arm around my neck. Hang on, now."

"What?" said Kerrie. She raised her eyes; they were still dull with pain.

"Never mind." He picked her up; and after a moment her arm crept about his neck and clung.

KERRIE opened her eyes with a confused recollection of a nightmare. Garage—smell—fight—car—crash—a lot of people and . . . him . . . holding on to him and feeling, through her nausea, through the fog . . . feeling at peace.

And then the scene shifted to her room, like a movie. Windows thrown wide, Vi undressing her and getting her into bed . . . she was sick then . . . and later he was telling her not to mind, not to mind, just close her eyes, breathe deeply, try to rest, to sleep . . . then a strange man injecting something that stung for an instant—the air, the fresh clean sweet air—sleep.

Kerrie opened her eyes and in the hot light of morning saw Beau's face, inches from her own.

She pulled him down to her, sobbing.

"All right. It's all right now, Kerrie." Beau kept mumbling. "You're okay. There's nothing to be afraid of now."

"It was horrible," sobbed Kerrie. "The garage—some one locked me in—I couldn't get out—turned the motor on in the next garage—the fumes came through the radiator-grille—I got sick and dizzy—my tools were stolen, my revolver—I couldn't get out . . ."

Beau's arms tightened about her. When he had found Kerrie last night the lock was gone from the broken garage door; the motor of the car in the next garage had been turned off. Whoever had tried to kill Kerrie had stolen back, removed the lock, turned off the engine of the station-wagon, and gone away. Had Kerrie not managed to escape from the garage, had she died there like a mouse in a trap, it would have looked like the usual garage accident; the running motor of her own car, the doctors might have said—she fainted and was overcome. There would have been no evidence of a crime. An accident—like the "accident" on the bridle-path.

Kerrie's tears were warm on his cheek. "I thought— you were in with her. Please. I was mad. I know you couldn't. Oh, I love you. I've been so miserable. I couldn't leave here and let—her have you. I love you!"

"I know, funny-face. Me, too . . ."

"Darling." She placed her palms on his cheeks and held his face off, smiling incredulously. Then she hugged him. "Oh, you do!"

The Tarrytown doctor came in and said: "I beg your pardon. Would you mind——?"

Beau stumbled out.

MARGO kept him waiting 15 minutes. When her maid finally admitted him, Margo was lying graceful-armed on a chaise-longue, her body draped in a dramatic morning gown, every hair in place, and her dead-white cheeks carefully made up.

"How nice," she smiled at him, and then said rapidly to her maid: "Betise! Va t'en!" and the maid fled. As soon as the door closed Margo slipped off the couch and went to him.

He took her in his arms. She put her hands on his chest after a while. "Sit down here with me. You've kept me waiting so long."

"Couldn't get here sooner."

"Oh, Kerrie? It would be." She said it lightly. But she pushed him away a little.

"Sure it would be!"

"And how is the little mousy darling? I suppose you've sat up with her all night?

"I had to put on an act, didn't I? Somebody had to." Beau made his tone annoyed even truculent. But he was careful to draw her close to him again.

"You—it was you found her last night, wasn't it?" murmured Margo.

Don't you agree that this was the right thing to do?

Since the present management of The Washington Post purchased the newspaper six years ago, it has followed this policy: The BEST is none too good for Post readers. In line with this policy we have developed a newspaper which gives you the best available newspaper reading matter in all fields. Let us review what has been done to improve The Washington Post:

The Washington Post
Rescue Hopes Grow As Diggers Near 87 Trapped in W.Va. Mine
Keep Trade Program Or Face Economic Anarchy, Hull Warns
New York Tribune
Associated Press
Associated Press
Int'l News Service
New York Times
United Press

1. NEWS

In order to give you more news about Washington itself, The Post has exactly DOUBLED the number of reporters and MORE THAN DOUBLED the number of photographers covering local news events. The editors have made every effort to produce interesting information about what's going on here, and this brought forth such series as "Working for Washington," "Life Begins at 70," "Horse and Buggy Traffic," the articles about our narcotic problem, the pictures of state society dances, and many others. An ENTIRE SUNDAY SECTION is devoted to news "ABOUT WASHINGTON."

Besides increasing the amount of local news, The Post is giving you much more national and foreign news. The old Post had only two wire services. The present Post has FIVE—Associated Press, United Press, International News Service, New York Herald Tribune Service, and the Special War News Service of the New York Times. And Wirephoto has been added to give you the news in pictures. No other Washington newspaper can compare with The Post in news sources. In the weekday morning field, four of these five services are exclusive to The Post. No other Washington newspaper has a major news service which is not also in The Post!

2. EDITORIALS

The Post's editorial page has become the finest in Washington. One proof is in the way The Post is quoted by other newspapers—more often than all other Washington newspapers combined. Opposite the editorial page The Post has assembled the finest collection of commentators in Washington — Walter Lippmann, Dorothy Thompson, Westbrook Pegler, Barnet Nover, Mark Sullivan, Ernest Lindley—so as to give Post readers different points of view on controversial questions. There also you will find many timely articles of special interest by the best authorities.

The Pulitzer Prize in Journalism for distinguished editorial writing during the year 1935
IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE PROVISIONS OF THE STATUTES OF THE UNIVERSITY GOVERNING SUCH AWARD
IN WITNESS WHEREOF WE HAVE CAUSED THIS DIPLOMA TO BE SIGNED BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY AND OUR CORPORATE SEAL TO BE HERETO AFFIXED IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK ON THE SECOND DAY OF JUNE IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD ONE THOUSAND NINE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SIX PRESIDENT

Povich

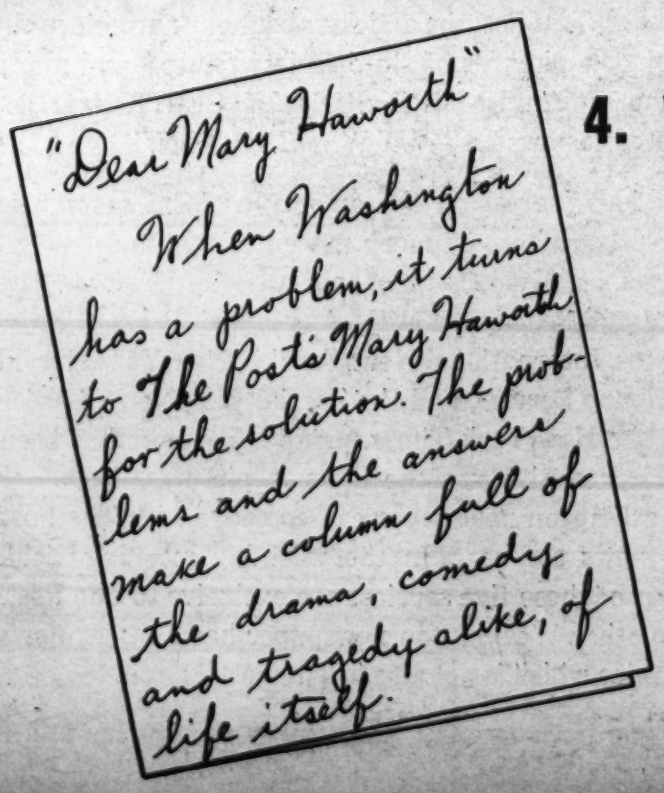
Sports fans enjoy Shirley Povich's column in The Post. He speaks with the authority of 15 years' experience as a sports writer, and his style is unusual and interesting. You get a new understanding of sports background when he takes you behind the scenes—you enjoy every word he writes and wish there were more.

3. SPORTS

A morning paper has a natural advantage in bringing you sports news, because most sports events occur in the afternoon or evening. To this natural advantage of The Post, add the services of Associated Press, United Press, International News Service, New York Herald Tribune Service, Wirephoto, The Post's own sports staff, and Washington's top columnists—Shirley Povich and Bob Considine. The Post has become the first choice of sports fans.

Considine

Bob Considine is a Washington boy who has made a national reputation in sports writing. For years, Washington was torn between the adherents of Povich and those who swore by Considine. Now everyone is happy, for the columns of both writers now appear in The Post, daily and Sunday. You get the best when you read these two.



"Dear Mary Haworth"
When Washington has a problem, it turns to The Post's Mary Haworth for the solution. The problems and the answers make a column full of the drama, comedy and tragedy alike, of life itself.

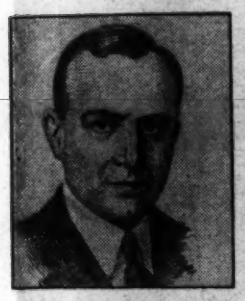
4. WOMEN'S FEATURES-CLUBS-SOCIETY

Newspaper experts have stated that Malvina Lindsay is one of America's outstanding journalists. That's why The Post picked her to be woman's page editor of The Post. Today The Post's woman's pages are used as models by schools of journalism. They include such outstanding writers as Mary Haworth (her column on personal problems is fascinating), Miss Lindsay herself, Alice Hughes, Ida Jean Kain, Dr. Clendenning, Martha Ellyn, Marshall Adams — reducing, health, food, fashion, patterns, household hints, beauty advice, every phase of women's activities. The Post's club page is considered the most complete in Washington, and those who know society swear by The Post's society pages and Sunday society section.

story of The Washington Post since 1933

5. ENTERTAINMENT

You want your newspaper to be entertaining as well as informative. That's why The Post doubled the number of comics, added a serial story, added columns by Leonard Lyons, Lucius Beebe, Charles Driscoll, Katherine Brush, Weare Holbrook, added movie columns by Louella Parsons and Hedda Hopper, added the most entertaining Washington columnist of all—Harlan Miller.



HARLAN MILLER writes the most entertaining of all Washington columns.

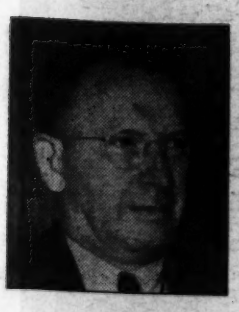
LOUELLA PARSONS was the first and is the best-known Hollywood columnist.

LEONARD LYONS' column about Broadway makes amusing, glamorous reading.

HEDDA HOPPER brings you intimate stories about the Hollywood stars.

LUCIUS BEEBE knows and wisecracks about the tops in New York society.

KATHERINE BRUSH has a column as glittering as her books and short stories.



CHARLES DRISCOLL presents the human side of life in the metropolis.

ELLERY QUEEN'S mystery is the current Post daily and Sunday book-length serial.

COMICS—Two pages of Post comics daily and 23 comics in the Sunday Post.

ATTACK ON AMERICA is appearing as a six-part serial in the Sunday Post.

6. PICTURES

Count the pictures in the various papers. You'll find that The Post publishes more news pictures than any other Washington paper—and is especially out in the lead when it comes to local pictures.

The Post Brings You Pictures From All Over the World by WIREPHOTO

7. BIG...as well as BEST

With all these things having been added, it is apparent that The Post must be a lot BIGGER paper than it ever was before. It is! In 1933, The Post published 16,500,000 lines of news, features, and pictures. In 1939 The Post published 21,400,000 lines of news, features, and pictures—an INCREASE OF FIVE MILLION LINES of reading matter! Almost 1/3 more! No other Washington newspaper has made anywhere near such an increase in what it gives the reading public.

What do you think about this policy? Don't you agree it was the right thing to do? The general opinion in Washington has been "Yes!"—for The Post now has 78,000 more readers than it had six years ago. This increase in Post circulation is greater than the increases of all other Washington papers put together!

Advertising has increased in proportion. In 1933 The Post carried 5,870,000 lines of advertising. In 1939 The Post carried 10,700,000 lines of advertising!

The Sunday Post offers NINE sections packed with news, pictures, features

The Post's nine sections give you the most complete Sunday newspaper in Washington. If you want to know what's going on, the MAIN NEWS section brings you the news from five wire services, and a large corps of competent Post reporters. The CURRENT EVENTS section offers outstanding editorials, the Gallup Poll, and many special articles of unusual interest. The AMUSEMENT section contains feature stories about Hollywood, Nelson Bell's movie page, installments of The Post's serial story (right now there are two, "Attack on America" and an Ellery Queen mystery story), and such entertaining columnists as Lucius Beebe, Charles Driscoll, Leonard Lyons, Weare Holbrook, Louella Parsons, and Hedda Hopper.

The Post's ROTOGRAVURE section is famous for the way its pages tell a complete, pictorial story. The SPORTS section is even better—because bigger—than the daily Post's sports pages. The SOCIETY AND WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES section is likewise a bigger and even more complete edition of the daily Post's woman's, club and society pages. The REAL ESTATE section is the largest in America. It also contains financial news and classified advertising.

The Sunday Post's COMIC section has twenty-three comics, including such favorites as Superman, Joe Palooka, Prince Valiant, Terry and the Pirates. And the Sunday Post's ABOUT WASHINGTON section is unique in its coverage of interesting things going on in our city.

You can't help liking the Sunday Post!
